EARLY DAYS

THE INDIANS

Archaeologists have determined that Indians have been living in the Ohio Valley for over 14,000 years before the first white explorer penetrated the region. It was the scene of several different eras of Indian civilizations known as the Adena, Hopewellian and Fort Ancient, which had flourished in the area from about 1,000 B.C., to 1700 A.D., when the many mounds, great and small, had been built in Ohio and West Virginia.

At this time, there were towns and villages of Indians scattered on the level bottoms along the Ohio and its tributaries. These people were settled farmers, for the most part, who depended on agriculture for a livelihood, not hunting. Their villages were usually surrounded by stockades, similar to those later used in pioneer forts, for protection.

In 1674, 67 years after the founding of Jamestown, Gabriel Arthur and a party of Cherokees visited an Indian town of some hundreds of people near what is now Buffalo, Putnam County. Shortly thereafter, the Iroquois Indians, of present New York, began the series of wars for the control of the fur trade, which resulted in the conquest of most of the present northeastern United States by these Indians. The several tribes living in the Ohio Valley were either killed, assimilated into the conquering Iroquois nation, or fled South and West to escape them. West Virginia, like Kentucky, was largely left as a deserted hunting ground for the surrounding tribes which later moved into the region. Seventy years after the wars, John Peter Salling, with a party of explorers, traveled down the Kanawha and Ohio rivers without meeting a single red man. Nearly ten years later, in 1752, Christopher Gist traveled for 200 miles through the Ohio valley in Western Virginia without seeing a single Indian, though he noted the numerous once-cultivated fields and worn paths of prior occupiers.

Before the French and Indian War, the Shawnee tribe had a large town in Mason County on Old Town Creek, about three miles above the mouth of the Kanawha, and a Delaware town, called Kiskimineta Old Town, was located in Gallia County, Ohio, some eight miles above the Kanawha's mouth. Some historians have listed another town at the site of the trading post of James Le Tort, a Pennsylvania trader, at present Letart on the Jackson-Mason County line. Another disputed Shawnee town was said to be located at the mouth of Old Town Creek in Meigs County, Ohio.

A branch of the Warriors Path to the Cherokee and Catawba country crossed the Ohio at the mouth of Mill Creek and proceeded up that creek and Grasslick to the Pocatalico and Kanawha Valley to the South. The increasing activity of war parties on this trail during the period was the primary reason for the desertion of these Delaware and Shawnee towns during this period. By 1749, when Celoron de Blainville's French expedition came down the Ohio, all the Indian towns were deserted — the Shawnees having moved westward to the Scioto River and its branches and the Delawares northwestward to the Muskingum River.

These two tribes and the Mingo, a mixed tribe of Iroquois located near Steubenville, Ohio, were the ones most bloodily connected with then Western Virginia during the late Colonial and early Federal periods. They were largely responsible for the many wars which ravaged the thinly settled section west of the Alleghenies for some 40 years, ending only with the victory of General Anthony Wayne at Fallen Timbers, Ohio, August 20, 1794, and the treaty of Greenville, in 1795. JACKSON COUNTY PATENTS; TO ALBERT GALLATIN AND OTHERS

Albert Gallatin served as Secretary of the Treasury of the United States longer than any other person except Henry Morgenthau, who was Franklin Delano Roosevelt's Secretary, taught at Harvard College, owned thousands of acres of land in West Virginia, much of it was in Jackson County, supervised the purchase of the Louisiana Territory for the United States, and arranged for and promoted the Lewis and Clark Expedition, which had for its purpose the exploration of the territory to determine what they had received for their money.

He might have been president of the United States of America had he not made one big mistake — that of being born in Switzerland instead of the United States. He came to the United States of America when he was 18 years of age and soon became a naturalized citizen.

Very early in life he became interested and active in politics. He was a Jeffersonian Democratic-Republican which later became the Democrat Party and a Diplomat. His great political mistake was that he supported the "Whiskey Rebellion." He was the only citizen of the United States who has served in both the House and the Senate during the same term of Congress. He was elected by the Pennsylvania Legislature to serve as a U.S. Senator from Pennsylvania, went to Washington, took the oath, and was serving as a Senator when some of his enemies discovered that he had not yet been a citizen of this country long enough to qualify for the Senate and voted to un-seat him. Upon returning to his home district, a special election was held for a congressman for which he qualified. He offered himself as a candidate, was elected and served out the term. He built a mansion in Uniontown, called Friendship Hill, where he lived during his later life. His house now has been turned into a public historical landmark and is visited by many every year.

Albert Gallatin owned many tracts of land in what is now Jackson County. He established the first settlement in Jackson County which was located on the Ohio River near the mouth of Sand Creek, named "Friends Landing" — Friendship being a favorite namesake for his many landmarks. This was intended to be a permanent settlement. After some time had passed he came back to visit the settlement and to see how it was progressing and the only evidence he found of the settlement was a heap of ashes.

It should be noted that George Washington would have been the forerunner of Albert Gallatin in land holdings in Jackson County. At the age of 25 years, Washington owned 4,558 acres and at the time of his death, owned 63,000 acres. For his services in the French and Indian Wars, he received 20,000 acres of wild land west of the Allegheny Mountains. It is interesting to note that these large tracts of western lands were acquired by General Washington before the Declaration of Independence and were conveyed to him by what we now call patents from the King of England. The Random House Dictionary of the English Language copyrighted in 1966 states the definition of patents as "the instrument by which the United States conveys the legal fee-simple title to public land." This would also apply to grants and conveyances by other sovereign powers. We have been privileged to examine some of those patents and find they contain features quite unusual and foreign to our present day conveyances. For instance, the conveyance to General Washington of the tract opposite the Big Bend in Jackson County begins thus: "King George the III, by the Grace of God of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King Defender of the Faith, etc.; To all to whome these presents shall come, greeting: Know ye that for diverse good causes and considerations, but more especially for the consideration mentioned in a proclamation of Robert Dinwiddie, Esquire, late Lieutenant-Governor and Commander — In-Chief of the Colony and Dominion of Virginia, bearing date the 19th day of February 1754, for encouraging men to enlist in the service of our Royal Grandfather for defense and safety of the said Colony . . ."

One of the largest patents to Jackson County was at Muses Bottom, containing 9000 acres, which was at one time jointly owned by Albert Gallatin and Savary De Valcoulon who were for many years partners in the buying and selling of land. It is believed that Savary De Valcoulon had the financial backing while Albert Gallatin was the businessman and financier. Another large patent prominent in Jackson County History was to John Swann consisting of 2000 acres, located at the confluence of Sycamore and Mill Creeks, a portion of which was later owned by the Jacob Starcher Family who gave the county sufficient land for our Public Square upon which our Court-house is located.

There was vast acreage in Jackson County around the late 1700s owned by patents to Albert Gallatin and Savary De Valcoulon as well as other statesmen of their day; Robert Morris, Benjamin Harrison, John Allison, Robert Rutherford, and William John to name a few.

In 1795, Robert Morris formed the American Land Company to encourage settlement of the West. He purchased the land grants from Albert Gallatin and Savory de Valcoulon. Some of this land extended into the present city limits of Ripley. Persons interested in more information about the land grants not listed above should consult the Simms, Edgar B., Index to Land Grants in West Virginia in the Office of the County Clerk, Ripley, West Virginia, or inquire who has a map showing land grants in Jackson County as there are a few owned by individuals.

ROBERT MORRIS

Robert Morris was called the Financier of the American Revolution. "He exhausted his own princely fortune in an effort to preserve the credit of the new republic and to supply Washington's army the bare necessities during the War of Independence.

"On the last day of the year 1776, after the Christmas night of crossing the Delaware and the victory at Trenton, Washington had to have money to make good his promise to pay his men. Congress was unable to pay because the Treasury was empty. Washington appealed to his friend, Robert Morris, a well-known banker and a very wealthy man. Morris arose in the middle of the night and contacted his wealthy friends. The 50,000 dollars Washington needed to keep his troops together was collected and sent to him before sundown. Morris had raised the money on his word and honor, but many did not pay him. He paid it out of his own funds."

"On February 4, 1795, the North American Land Company was formed by Morris to open the west to settlers after the war. The Company acquired four and one-half million acres of western land grants, of which one-half million acres were from Savory de Valcoulon and Albert Gallatin. This included 34,500 acres in Kanawha County, which at that time encompassed a part of Jackson County. Some of these tracts of land extended into the present day (1989) boundary of Ripley. Morris did not own any land grants in this area. Sales of this land did not materialize, so the Land Company was a financial disaster. This combined with the young nation being unable to pay its debt to Morris forced him into financial ruin, bankruptcy and poverty. All of his personal possessions had to be sold, even his gold watch and gold headed cane. Later, he was able to regain part of his property, including his watch and cane."

His will of record in the office of the Clerk of the Jackson County Commission reads, in part, as follows: "I give my gold-headed cane to my son, Thomas. The head was given to me by John Hancock, Esq., when President of Congress, and the cane was a gift of James Wilson, Esq., while a member of Congress."

When Washington was elected first president of the new nation, he asked Robert Morris, who had been of much service to him during the war, to be Secretary of Treasury. Morris declined, but recommended Alexander Hamilton who received the appointment.

EXPLORERS

The first explorer to gaze upon the then virgin hills and valleys of present Jackson County was probably an adventurous member of an Indian hunting culture known by archaeologists as the Paleo-Indians some 14,000 or more years ago.

Gabriel Arthur, a Virginian, was likely the first white man to see this area when he, with a party of Cherokees, visited a large village of Indians that he called Monetons, now thought to have probably been Shawnees, near present Buffalo, West Virginia, in 1674, only 67 years after the founding of Jamestown. Next was probably Arnold Viele, a Dutch fur trader from Albany, New York, who was in the valley in 1692-3.

French traders were here by 1696 and their English rivals by 1703. At that time there were several Indian villages in this section, and the first trader to establish a trading post is believed to have been James Le Tort, a Pennsylvanian, at present Lctart, Mason County, about 1729-30.

In 1729, Chaussegros de Lery, chief military engineer of Canada, mapped the Ohio for the French, and in 1749 Celoron de Blainville led a French expedition down the Ohio as far as the Miami River. It is thought that one of his lead plates, claiming the area for France, was buried at the mouth of the Little Kanawha as well as the one later found near the mouth of the Kanawha.

The first overland explorer in the county to leave a written record was Captain Christopher Gist in February and March 1752, who was working for the Ohio Company, a Virginia land company which included two of George Washington's half-brothers among its stockholders. However, Virginia and Pennsylvania traders had been here long before, as evidenced by his naming present Mill Creek, Smith Creek, for Robert Smith, a trader he had met on the Miami River in 1751.

Some others before the Revolution were George Croghan in 1765; John Jennings, 1766; Thomas Hutchins, 1768; George Washington, 1770 and George Rogers Clark in 1772. Submitted by Delmer R. Hite

JACKSON COUNTY PIONEER SETTLERS

JACKSON COUNTY PIONEERS 1795-1831

The following has been compiled from deeds found in Mason, Wood and Kanawha counties; Mason County Survey Records, the 1810 census of these three counties; Index to the 1820 Census of Virginia and the Personal Property Tax from Jackson County in 1831 as well as the Real Estate Tax list for Jackson County in 1832. I believe it is accurate although errors might be found. I make no claim that it could not be added to. Some are not listed because they were not here in the census listed or did not own land in 1831. If you do not find the name of someone for whom you are searching do not give up.

And now comes that bothersome bit about boundary lines. When Jackson County was formed in 1831 it included 845 square miles. In 1846 Wirt County was formed, in part from Jackson County as was Roane County in 1856. There were a few very small changes after this. It now contains 471.98 square miles. Therefore, we must include persons living on Spring Creek and Reedy Creek in this survey. For example, Samuel Tanner lived on Spring in what is now the town of Spencer. For a few years it was called Tanner's Crossing. Later it was called New California when a local citizen started for that state but broke down at that place. It was named Spencer after the formation of the county in 1856.

FORMATION AND GOVERNMENT OF JACKSON COUNTY

CREATING THE COUNTY ORGANIZING THE COUNTY GOVERNMENT COURT HOUSES AND JAIL

Many of the inhabitants of the counties of Mason, Kanawha and Wood were experiencing great inconvenience because of the distance they lived from their respective Court Houses, and were often obstructed by large water courses, when high. Approximately 342 inhabitants of the above counties petitioned "The Honourable the Speakers of the Senate and House of Delegates in the Virginia Legislature" to create a new county to be composed of a part of the counties of Mason, Kanawha, and Wood. The petitioners represented that a new county, if created within the limits proposed, would have a population of about 3,500 inhabitants; that a large proportion of the land lying within the proposed boundaries is rich and fertile and would, if organized into a new county, soon be settled and improved, thereby the revenue of the State, as well as the value of individual property would be increased. The petition was presented December 8, 1830, but the request was not granted until March 1, 1831.

The new county was named Jackson in honor of Andrew Jackson, President of the United States. It was contained within the following boundaries, to-wit: "Beginning at the mouth of Pond creek on the Ohio river; thence, a direct line to the west corner of Lewis county, where the lines of Lewis, Wood and Kanawha counties meet; thence, with the line dividing Lewis and Kanawha counties, to a point where the West fork of the Little Kanawha river crosses said line; thence a direct line to the mouth of the Middle fork of Countze's creek, a branch of Pocatalico river; thence, a direct line to the mouth of the first branch emptying into the Ohio river above Letart falls; thence, up the Ohio river, following its meanders to the place of beginning."

The decision to locate the Seat of Justice was finally left to a commission of five members because of discontent which arose among the inhabitants over its location. The people who lived along the Ohio River near the Ravenswood settlement greatly favored that location. The people who lived farther inland objected. The General Assembly appointed an independent commission to make the final decision. The commissioners were John McWhorter of Lewis County, John Miller of Kanawha County, William Spurlock of Cabell County, Cyrus Cary of Greenbrier County, and John McCoy of Tyler County.

The Act creating Jackson County also provided that "the Governor, with the advice of the council of state, shall commission ten persons as justices of the peace in and for the said county of Jackson, who shall, before entering upon and executing said office, take the several oaths now required by law of persons commissioned as justices of the peace, which oaths may be administered by any justice of the peace now in commission for either of the counties of Mason, Kanawha or Wood." Justices were: John Warth, George Casto, Barnabus Cook, Gilbert Boswell, Henry Shearman, Ephraim S. Evans, Benjamin Wright, Jr., John McKown, Tapley Beckwith, and George Stone.

The Assembly of Virginia showed little interest in financing the expenditures essential to the erection of the public buildings. The emergency was met by Jacob Starcher, who owned 400 acres of land on which Ripley now stands. He agreed to give eight acres of land for the county seat to be laid out so as to form three sides of the Public Square. The Court accepted the gift on October 24, 1831. Two acres were given for a Public Square on which were to be erected the court house and jail, and six additional acres on the front and sides of the Square to be laid off in lots and sold for "the use and benefit of Jackson County." The deed from Jacob and Ann Starcher was made to the Court through Ephraim S. Evans, Justice of the Court, on March 28, 1832.

On January 23, 1832, a contract was let to James Smith for the construction of the public buildings. He gave bond to meet the Court's specifications. The buildings were constructed of brick. The jail was to be 34 feet by 17 feet, and the Court House to be 36 feet square. The entire cost was to be $3,700. On October 28, 1833, the commissioners reported to the Court that the building was completed. The Court accepted the work of the commissioners, and held its first term in the new building on the same date.

In 25 years the Court outgrew its one story building. On November 15, 1854, five Jackson County commissioners entered into a contract with Nicholas H. Bonnett to build a new court house. According to the agreement, which is in the County Clerk's office, the five commissioners were Ephraim S. Evans, Joseph Smith, A. Dilworth (Dilwarth), J.H. Staats and F.A. Holt. N.H. Bonnett "agrees to do and perform all the work mentioned in the annexed specifications and to have the same done and completed of good materials and in a good workmanlike manner so as to be ready to deliver the same house completed to said commissioners on the first day of May 1856 and said Bonnett further agrees to furnish said house for purpose of holding the circuit court in at the May term of 1856 in consideration of which the said commissioners agree to pay to the said N.H. Bonnett the sum of seven thousand and nine hundred and ninety three dollars." Payments were to be made in four installments, the last one in 1858, which totaled $8,993, so an error occurred either in calculation or in recording. The walls of the first floor were to be of cut stone and be two and one-half feet thick. The brickwork for the outside walls of the second story were to be composed of the best hard common bricks well laid in good mortar. There was a provision for a jail on its ground floor and the court room above.

Again in 1916 a need developed for a new court house. On May 24, 1917, a contract was let to Prescott Construction Company at the sum of $67,133 for repairs to Court House and jail. Plumbing, heating and gas piping contract was let to James P. Burke on the same date. The commissioners of said Court were P.S. Fisher and J.M. Harpold. Extras and additions were made to the above amounts. L.J. Dean was the architect.

At a meeting of the Court on July 10, 1917, it was ordered that the court house cannot be occupied and ordered that the Court from this date use the lower hall of the I.O.O.F. building as a place of holding Circuit and County Courts. It was rented from Herbert Skeen and W.F. Boggess.

On September 20, 1919, an agreement was entered into between the County Court and Fred Warnecke of Parkersburg for $1,100, to decorate and paint the new court house. Two portraits of Lincoln and Washington in the Court Room were to be painted in oil colors. The other paintings were to be in water colors in the residue of the building.

Although the date of 1918 appears on the front of the court house, the new building was not completed until 1920. On March 9, 1920, the County Court of Jackson County ordered that the place for holding Circuit and County Courts for the county be changed from the lower hall of the I.O.O.F. building, and known as the "Opera House," to the new court house erected by the Prescott Construction Company. This building is still in use. An addition was built in 1961 at a cost of $350,000.

Jackson County Courthouse, completed 1920 (1987)

Although the General Assembly of Virginia had appointed five "gentlemen" from other counties to select "impartially" a site for the Seat of Justice, this effort did not prevent friction which lasted for more than 50 years. The official records of the 1831 Court do not show the extent of the conflicting opinions concerning the selection of the site of the Seat of Justice. John Warth and other large landholders on the Ohio River wanted it in that area. Warth was a man of prominence and wealth. In 1831 the county had only 31 slaves. He owned seven of them. He also had salt mine interests. In 1832 he and other Ohio River farmers made an effort to change the location of the county seat. The less prosperous settlers, living in the interior of the county, were successful in keeping the original site. In 1838 Henry Fitzhugh, a large landholder at what is now Ravenswood, made an effort to relocate the Court House, but this too failed. In 1886, 54 years after Ripley was selected as the county seat, a proposal to move the Court House to Ravenswood was placed on the ballot of the November 2nd general election. This proposal was defeated by a vote of 2,593 to 459. Two years later, in 1888, the railroad reached Ripley and overcame the town's isolation from the Ohio River area of the county. Submitted by Genevieve Starcher and Mabel Chapman

THE COUNTY COURT OF JACKSON COUNTY

From 1831 until 1863, the County Court was made up of Gentlemen Justices appointed by the Governor. There were too many of them to list in the allotted space until after the Civil War. The first Court in 1831 after the formation of the county comprised the following Justices: John Warth, George Casto Sr., Barnabus Cook, George Stone, Gilbert Boswell, Henry Sherman, Ephraim Evans, Benjamin Wright Jr., John McKown and Tapley Beckwith.

From 1866 to 1872, the County Court was known as the Board of Supervisors. The county was formed into townships, later magisterial districts, with a member elected from each township annually.

In 1872, the Court was again changed to comprise a presiding justice who was elected from the whole county, and two members elected from each Magisterial District — Mill Creek (Ripley), Washington, Union, Grant and Gilmore (Ravenswood), for four year terms.

In 1881, the present system of electing three Commissioners, of whom not more than one could be from any one district, was adopted. One member is elected president by the Court each year, usually the oldest one in length of service, with each member generally serving as president during two years of their six year terms. One commissioner is elected every two years.

Current members are elected from three districts, which were organized from the old five district system, in the 1980s, and are called — Eastern, Northern and Western districts.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE, 1884-1990

The magistrate system took over from the justice of the peace one in the 1976 election, two magistrates being elected for the county, and having much more authority than under the old justice of the peace system. Formerly two justices could be elected from each magisterial district. However, they usually had so little to do that, towards the last, hardly anyone other than in Ripley and Ravenswood districts bothered to run for the office. I could not locate records on justices serving before the 1884 election.

CIRCUIT JUDGES

Jackson County was part of the Kanawha Judicial Circuit until the Civil War and most of the presiding judges were from Kanawha County. The first Circuit Judge after the formation of the county in 1831, was Judge Lewis Summers, of Kanawha County, who served until his death in 1843; succeeded by Joseph L. Fry; David McComas (1844); E.S. Duncan (1847); Judge Lee (1848); Matthew Dunbar (1850); David McComas (1851); George W. Summers (1852), of Kanawha County; David McComas, of Putnam County (1858); Evermont Ward, of Kanawha County (1861); James H. Brown, of Kanawha County (1862); Daniel Polesley, of Mason County (1863); George Loomis, of Wirt County (1865); James W. Hoge, of Kanawha County (1868); George Loomis, of Wood County (1868); Robert S. Brown, of Ravenswood (1869); Joseph Smith, of Ripley (1873), start of eight year terms for judges; Robert F. Fleming, of Ravenswood (1881); Virgil S. Armstrong, of Ripley (1889); Reese Blizzard, of Calhoun County (1897), resigned; Warren Miller, of Ripley, appointed (1900), elected and resigned; Lynn Brannon, of Glenville (1903), appointed; William Asbury Parsons, of Ripley (1904); Walter Hoyt O'Brien, of Ripley (1913), served two terms; Lewis H. Miller, of Ripley (1929), died in office; J.M. Harper, of Spencer (1955), appointed; Oliver D. Kessel, of Ripley (1956), resigned to accept appointment of Justice of WV Supreme Court of Appeals; George M. Scott, of Spencer (1972), appointed and then elected, resigned, 1987; Charles McCarty, of Spencer (1987), appointed and subsequently elected, present Circuit Judge.

While most of Jackson County was part of Mason County, judges were: John Coalter (1804); James Allen, of Kanawha County (1811); Lewis Summers, of Kanawha County (1819), who died in office, 1843.

Lewis H. Miller, was the longest serving judge, some 25 years, from 1929 to 1955, having been elected four times, the last two without opposition.

Judges Warren Miller and Oliver D. Kessel were appointed to the West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

At present, our judicial circuit, the fifth, includes Jackson, Calhoun and Roane counties. For many years, Mason County was in this circuit, and, at one time, Gilmer County.

For a period of over 50 years (1904-1956), all the elected Circuit Judges were from Ripley. Submitted by Delmer R. Hite

PUBLIC HANGINGS

There have been two public hangings in Jackson County. The first of these was that of Charles Green, May 12, 1850, for the murder of Timothy Fox, and the second that of John F. Morgan, December 16, 1897, for the murder of young Jimmy Greene, of Grasslick, his mother, Chloe, and half-sister, Matilda Pfost.

Green was born in Harmony, Butler County, Pennsylvania, October 7, 1828, and was of a wicked and lawless turn of mind from early childhood. He seems to have delighted in lying, swearing, drinking and carousing. As a child, he began stealing pennies from his father and as he grew older, stole more and more, frequently being on the run from the law.

When about 15, he began passing counterfeit money, and after spending some four years in the then West, in 1849, he was in Cincinnati, Ohio, when the police began looking for him for passing counterfeit money. That night, he slipped away as a fireman on a steamboat which, due to low water, stuck in the shallows at Buffington Island above Ravenswood.

The crew was laid off until the river rose, and after spending all his carousing on both sides of the river, Green and a shipmate, Timothy Fox, went down to Ravenswood looking for work, without success. On the way back to the boat, Green purposely lagged behind Fox and, with a club, knocked him down and tried to beat him to death for the sum of $51.25.

Supposedly leaving Fox dead, Green went on and secured lodgings for the night, sleeping soundly. Next day, he went to Wheeling by steamboat, and was arrested there the next morning, Fox having lived long enough to name his murderer.

He was brought back to Jackson County, tried for the murder before Judge David McComas, and the jury bringing in a verdict of guilty, sentenced to be hanged, which was subsequently carried out by Nehemiah S. Smith, the Sheriff, on a scaffold erected up the run above the Old Settlers Cemetery, which has since been known as "Green's Hollow." He was 21 years of age.

John F. Morgan, the other man publicly hanged, was a young, married man of prior good character. He had previously lived for some time with the murdered family, had been treated well, and was thought of almost like a son or brother by them.

On the night before the morning of the murders, November 3, 1897, Morgan spent the night with the family, sleeping with young Jimmy Greene, who was the first person slain the next morning. He then entered the house, hit the two sisters on the heads with a hatchet, killing Matilda and wounding Alice, and then, thinking them both dead, and then killed the mother who was making up the beds in a bedroom.

Meanwhile, Alice ran, bleeding from her head wound, to a neighbor's, John Chancey's, and young Bill Chancey was sent to the aid of the family, but Morgan was gone.

Morgan was captured that evening, tried before Judge Reese Blizzard on November 5th, found guilty the same night, and sentenced to be hanged on the morning of the 6th, three days after the murders.

A little more than a month later, Morgan was hanged on a small knoll near the present Ripley

High School in South Ripley, before an immense crowd of spectators from this and surrounding counties. The people in general appeared to think the whole affair was conducted for their entertainment, and there were many disgraceful scenes, which were duly reported in the major newspapers of the day, often with many embellishments by the big city reporters.

The revolting scenes prompted the Hon. John S. Darst, of Cottageville, then State Senator, to introduce a bill in the next Legislature to abolish public hangings, which was speedily enacted into law. Thus Morgan was the last man in the state to be publicly hanged after a trial by jury. Submitted by Delmer R. Hite

COUNTY POOR FARM

On October 23, 1843 the County Court met to appoint commissioners on the part of the court to contract for and purchase a farm or lot of ground for the use of the county on which to erect a house or houses for reception and maintenance of the paupers of said County. Three commissioners had been appointed but had not acted, so one more (Benjamin Wright) was appointed and any three could act. Ephraim Evans, George Casto and Benjamin Wright purchased from William and Elizabeth Cunningham 80 Acres on Big Mill Creek for $1200.00 to be paid in four equal installments of $300.00 each; first in August, 1844, second in November 1844, and then annually. The deed was dated June 10, 1844, and signed by Justices Jonathan Casto and James Greer — Andrew Waugh, Dept. Clerk (D. Book 4, p. 390).

This property was sold October 24, 1872, to Enoch Staats — 80A on Tug Fork of Mill Creek, and known as the Poor Farm, for $3133.00 (Book 18, p. 340).

The County had purchased 125 Acres from Andrew and Violet Roseberry on December 16, 1871 for $5000.00 with Vendor's Lien for $3333.33⅓ payable in 1872 and 1873, with interest from August 1871. The land was on Big Mill Creek and known as the Joseph Bebee Farm (purchased by Roseberry from John and Susan B. Coe). (D. book 17-P 580 and 629)

This land is still owned by the County, having served as the Poor Farm until the late 1930s after the Public Assistance Law passed in 1936 and then rented for farming until 1963(?). It now contains a Youth Home (not used as such at present), County Animal Shelter, and County Fair Grounds. It is used for the Jr. County Fair and reserved and used for various activities the rest of the year — such as Reunions, Horse Shows, Gospel Music Events, etc. (Booked through 1990) settlements at Mineral Wells and Neal's Station (Parkersburg), along the route of present old Route 21, to the Kanawha Salt Springs, ran through the present site of Ripley long before the town was founded in 1832, over which salt was carried to the settlements.

Before the Civil War, the state of Virginia chartered several Turnpike and state road associations, which constructed highways through Jackson County.

The Charleston, Ripley and Ravenswood Turnpike was chartered, March 25, 1853, the sum of $30,000 being appropriated for the road from Charleston by way of Ripley to Ravenswood, a distance of some 49 miles. It followed the general route of old Route 21 as far as Ripley. It was constructed about 1856.

The Gilmer, Ripley and Ohio Turnpike was chartered, March 19, 1850, with a $30,000 appropriation. It ran some 61 miles from West Columbia, Mason County, via Jackson Court House to New California (Spencer), then in Jackson County. It followed much of the route of present Route 33. Completed about 1852.

The Ravenswood and Reedy Creek Turnpike was chartered, February 18, 1850, with an appropriation of $9,000. It ran some 23 miles from Three Forks of Reedy Creek, then in Wirt County, to Ravenswood, down the Big Sandy valley.

Another nearby road, the Letart Falls and West Columbia, was chartered, February 15, 1854, with a $21,000 appropriation. It ran from Letart Falls via West Columbia, Mason County, to Ten-Mile Creek, some 11¼ miles.

The oldest road company, over which many early settlers came to this county from Virginia, was the James River Company (later James River and Kanawha), chartered in October 1784, a year after the Revolutionary war ended, with a $3,437,921.51 appropriation.

The Parkersburg-Charleston Turnpike was opened in 1855, and the narrow, primitive road to Spencer and beyond was relocated, widened, improved, and placed under toll.

All of these early roads were toll roads, like the present West Virginia Turnpike. The tolls allowed by law for travel on these turnpikes were as follows: On each section of five miles, for one horse, mule or jennet, when not hitched to a vehicle, three cents; for five or more such animals, one cent each; for 20 sheep or hogs, five cents; for 20 cattle, ten cents; one wagon, if tires be less than five inches in width, and for each animal drawing it, three cents; if tires be more than four but less than seven inches in width, two cents; if seven inches or more in width, one cent. The more narrow wheel widths would tend to rut the roads more than the wider ones, hence the higher price.

It proved nearly impossible to keep the dirt roads in good enough condition at times to justify the payment of tolls. The heavy traffic over these roads during the Civil War so damaged them that they did not recover until the 1870s.

Of course, until the era of covered bridge building after the Civil War, there were no bridges on any of these roads, except across Mill Creek, at Ripley, in the late 1840s. Submitted by Delmer R. Hite

WATER TRANSPORTATION

From the beginning of settlement in the county, the Ohio River has been a primary source of transportation for the citizens. The early explorers, traders, and early settlers usually came here by boat on the river, as was the case of Benjamin Cox, William Hannaman and James McDade, of Harrison County, who probably came by flatboat in May 1796, when they established homes on Warth's Bottom, the first settlers in the present county.

Flatboats, Keelboats, and plain log rafts, were employed in trade on the river in early days and maintained their place even after the coming of the steamboat, the first of which, the New Orleans, was built in Pittsburgh in 1811. By 1826, it was estimated that there were 143 steamboats in service on the Mississippi and its branches.

EARLY ROADS

It is said that the first wagon road was cut out of the forest from Ripley Landing (Millwood) to Jackson Court House (Ripley), by Jackson Smith, contractor, shortly after 1832. Prior to this, there had been only packhorse trails in the county.

When a new road was built in the early days, there was little or no digging or grading. All that was required was to cut away the underbrush and saplings growing in the way, and cut and roll away the logs from the proposed track. If the logs were too large, or the girth of the trees too great, the road builders merely swerved the road to one side a bit and went around them. By following along the bottoms after the country was partly settled up Mill and Big Sandy creeks, most side grades were avoided.

Local residents are pictured building road up Tolley Hill on Billy's Run near Gay, about the year 1914. From l. to r. — Ray Tolley, Everett Rhodes, S.O. After road work was begun, every Friday and Saturday during the summer was road work day, on which all healthy men and grown boys were required to keep the roads in good order, unless they were already in good shape, or it would interfere with militia muster.

wharfboats, which were much like warehouses, and served as relay points for the handling of outgoing and incoming merchandise. Daniel Frost owned the wharfboat at Ripley Landing in 1850, which served the needs of folks in the Mill Creek valley; Bartholomew Fleming, that at Ravenswood, serving the Big Sandy valley and the Spencer section, and the one at Murraysville served the upper end of Jackson and part of Wood. There was a steamboat yard at Murraysville from 1837 to 1884, and many steamboats and wharfboats were built there during that period.

Even after the coming of the railroads, the steamboat remained as a primary means of trade and transportation, though the passenger trade gradually declined as roads were improved. Today, river traffic largely consists of barges, usually several of them in a unit, propelled by one tugboat. A great deal of merchandise such as coal, iron ore, oil, etc., is still carried on the river.

COVERED BRIDGES

After the Civil War, many covered bridges were erected in the county to span the larger streams, including one across Mill Creek, at Ripley; one at Cottageville; across Big Sandy at Ravenswood; at Chase's Mill, above Ripley; across Tug Fork at Staats Mills, and across Sarvis Fork at Odaville.

Presently, the only ones still standing are the bridge at Odaville, and the Staats Mills bridge,

Staats Mills Bridge at present location, Cedar Lakes erected in 1887, which has been moved to the Cedar Lakes FFA-FHA Camp above Ripley and reconstructed at a cost of some $100,000. The original cost of construction in 1887 was $1,735.35!

Bridges were covered to preserve the timbers, strengthen the structure, and because horses are afraid of heights and rushing water, to make them think they were in a barn. Some covered bridges are over 100 years old. Submitted by Delmer R. Hite

RAILROADS

The Ohio River Railroad, later purchased by the Baltimore and Ohio, was built along the Ohio River from Parkersburg to Huntington in 1885-1886. It is now the only railroad in Jackson County.

In 1888, the Ripley and Mill Creek Valley Railroad, built with local capital, was constructed up the Mill Creek Valley from Millwood to Ripley.

The Ravenswood, Spencer and Glenville Railroad, also constructed by local capital, was built up the Big Sandy Valley to Spencer in 1892.

In 1897, there were three trains daily southbound and northbound on the Ohio River Railroad. On the other railroads, one train on each line went to Ripley and Spencer in the morning and returned to Ravenswood and Millwood in the afternoon.

These branch lines were later acquired by the B&O. Both have long since been discontinued and the tracks taken up. Submitted by Delmer R. Hite

INDUSTRY AND BUSINESS

INDUSTRY PRE-1860

Local industries in the county before 1860, other than the steamboat yard at Murraysville, were usually family affairs. The first settlers were often obliged to make most of the articles they needed for farming and furnishing their homes, as they could seldom bring much furniture or farming implements over the trails by horseback when coming into the county.

As the population grew, it was more feasible for certain members of the community to specialize in various necessary trades and by the 1850 Census the following occupations were listed: Millers, 22; Millwrights, 3; Cabinet makers, 9; Mechanics, 4; Carpenters, 17; Tailors, 7; Coopers, 6; Gunsmiths, 5; Shoemakers, 10; Blacksmiths, 14; Tanners, 5; Wheelwright, 1; Saddlers, 5; Sawyers, 4; Stonemasons, 6; Ship Carpenter, 1; Brick-maker, 1; Wagon Maker, 2; Plasterer, 1; and one Manufacturer (J.J.S. Hassler, of Ripley).

The cabinet makers fabricated the furniture for the homes. The coopers made the barrels in which flour, salt, whiskey, etc., was stored. Shoemakers made the footwear, often visiting around through the country to do so. Tanners manufactured the leather from which the shoemakers made the shoes, and the saddlers made the saddles for the horses and the harness for horses and oxen. The blacksmiths could make almost any article of iron needed, and the gunsmiths could manufacture firearms from "scratch." Communities in the county were largely self-sufficient, needing only a few items, such as salt, not made locally.

JACKSON COUNTY MILLS

One of the hardships faced by the early settlers was that of grinding their corn into meal and wheat into flour. These first pioneers ground their corn by putting it into a hollowed out stone and pounding it with a log rounded at one end. This method produced a coarse meal which was used to make bread and johnnycake.

As time passed and several families moved into an area, someone would build a mill to grind the grain. The mill site was generally chosen beside a waterfall or stream suitable for constructing a mill dam so that the force of the fall of the water, or head pressure, would turn the mill wheel.

In most cases the mill became a community center. Settlers brought their corn and wheat to the mill and, while they waited for it to be ground, they exchanged news and discussed religion and politics. Soon a general store would locate near the mill and the excess grain, flour or meal the farmer had would be traded to the miller or the storekeeper for groceries or other goods the farmer might need. In most cases other businesses soon followed, a blacksmith shop, wagon shop, tannery, cooper-shop and saw mill. Homes would soon be built near the mill. In time a village would form that included a schoolhouse, church, and post office.

Many of the towns and communities in Jackson County had this type of beginning.

The town of Ripley is probably the best example, in our county, of growth of a town as a result of an early mill and the other businesses that helped form the foundation of this community.

In an article written by Mrs. Winnifred E. O'Brien, she states that, "in 1824 Jacob Starcher and his son, William built the first grist mill in Ripley." According to early Mason County records Jacob Starcher received approval on December 7, 1823, to build a mill dam across Mill Creek. (Jackson County was not formed until 1831.) The mill stood on the east bank of Mill Creek near the Route 33, Main St. bridge.

This was the same Mr. Jacob Starcher who gave the land for the public square where the present Jackson County Courthouse now stands. The Starchers sold the mill to Armstrong and Stewart, who in turn sold it in 1837 to Joel Sayre. In 1839, Jacob Sayre, the son of Joel Sayre, became the owner and in 1840 he built a new mill across Mill Creek on the west bank. He also rebuilt the dam across Mill Creek. In 1842 a carding machine was put in the mill. This machine also ran by water power.

Jacob Sayre sold the mill to John McGrew in 1853. John McGrew was a miller by trade who moved to Ripley in 1844 from Jefferson County, Ohio. McGrew increased the capacity of the mill by installing two new sets of burrs, one for wheat and the other for corn. These burrs were made of imported French stone. They were round with a hole in the center through which the grains of wheat dropped. These burrs, which were about three feet in diameter, were lined with flint with ridges cut in it which carried the wheat to the outside when the upper burr turned. These burrs, which were close together, crushed the grains of wheat as they moved to the outside. McGrew also added a steam boiler and engine for furnishing steam power when the water level was too low to operate the water wheel.

During the Civil War the mill was visited by both Union and Confederate soldiers. The purpose of their visits was to obtain supplies of flour for their troops and, in some cases, to destroy grain and flour before the other side could take control of the town.

It was during this period that McGrew sold the mill to his son-in-law, D.K. Hood. The Hood family operated the mill from that time until the Ripley Mill, which was then known as Valley Mill, closed around 1930.

THE COTTAGEVILLE MILL

According to early newspaper articles and condensed histories of the county, the first mills in the county were put into service between 1799 and 1802. These mills were operated by hand and horse power. A Mr. Hushen is credited with the first hand mill in Union District and Benjamin Wright erected a horse-powered mill on the present site of Cottageville in 1802. Later near this early site, a mill was erected on the banks of Mill Creek. The mill was a water-powered mill.

According to an article that appeared in the Jackson Herald on January 23, 1970, Mr. Daniel D. Rhodes purchased a mill from a Mr. Moore which was a log structure. In 1858, Mr. D.D. Rhodes rebuilt the mill and built a new cut-stone dam. At this time the community was known as Cottage Mills but the name of the village was later changed to Cottageville. This article quotes John Rhodes (who was a grandson of Daniel D. Rhodes) recalling that the only time the mill did not operate while his grandfather owned it was during the Civil War when Daniel D. Rhodes was taken prisoner by the Southern forces, having been charged with furnishing flour and meal to the Union Army. He was taken to Tennessee and was not freed for two years. When he returned he again opened the mill and operated it until his death.

The Cottageville Mill at Cottageville, WV

According to local residents the last mill work was done in 1930. Floyd Pringle was the owner of the mill at the time.

On August 4, 1965 the Cottageville Mill which had become one of our county's best known landmarks was destroyed by fire. At the time of this writing (1990) some of the foundation stones can still be seen.

STAATS MILL

In a report by Emory L. Kemp entitled, "Historic Preservation For Staats Mill Bridge, 1980," Mr. Kemp writes, "the property known as Staats Mill came into the possession of Isaac Staats in 1858. He received the deed to one acre of land including the mill and mill seat from Jacob Pfost on May 8, 1858." (Jacob Pfost probably built the first mill about 200 yards upstream on the west bank from the last mill site.)

In 1877, Isaac Staats sold the mill to his son Enoch Staats, Sr., who enlarged the mill and installed a rolling mill for producing high quality flour. On August 12, 1909, Enoch Staats sold the mill and adjoining property to Charles W. Starcher and Samuel G. Starcher. The Starcher brothers were the last operators of the mill. By 1930, the milling operations had ceased; however, the building was still used for storage. The old mill was partly destroyed by a flood in 1956. Shortly thereafter the remainder of the mill building was dismantled.

The mill building was three stories in height, the upper two stories were over a cut-stone foundation. The dam which was used to control the water for the wheel was made of cut-stone and was probably seven to eight feet high according to Mr. Kemp. The last water wheel at the mill was made of iron. The old wheel was donated to a scrap metal drive during World War II.

SILVERTON MILL

The Silverton Mill was originally built by William Flesher in the early 1800s according to information supplied by his great-grandson, Howard Suck of Ravenswood, West Virginia. That first mill at Silverton was destroyed by fire in 1850. It was rebuilt by William Flesher and later sold to George Leonard. Leonard sold the mill to John Suck in 1886, who then sold it to John McGrew in 1896. The mill was next sold to Augustus Suck and R.B. Pickens in 1898. Augustus Suck then bought Picken's share of the mill.

Suck Mill at Silverton, WV

Augustus Suck operated the mill from 1898 to 1916. He was responsible for constructing a new cut-stone dam that was built in 1899 to insure an adequate supply of water for the mill. The dam was set into the rock-bed of the stream. It was approximately 12 feet high and arched 30 feet up Sand Creek. The large stones used in the dam were cut from the Browning Quarry at Silverton. The dam was designed so that the larger the volume of water going over the dam the tighter (stronger) the structure became. At the time of this writing the dam is still standing, a tribute to its builder.

Suck Mill Dam at Silverton, WV

The Silverton Mill ceased production in 1949 and was dismantled in November of 1980.

ROCKCASTLE MILL

G.W. Casto and his wife Myrtle operated the flour mill at Rockcastle around 1910. The mill was later sold to Orfe and Ceph Casto.

In an interview with Judge Oliver D. Kessel in December, 1989, the "Judge," who is now in his 80s remembers as a boy going to the Rockcastle Mill which was operated by his uncle. Because of the lack of water in the stream, the mill only operated when the water level was up. At these times the mill operated 24 hours a day. The farmers would come from several miles to have their wheat and corn ground. Judge Kessel remembers long lines of wagons waiting for their turn at the mill. During this time the men would exchange news, told stories and "struck" business deals. The wives and family members of the mill operator were kept busy cooking for the large crowd or helping with the milling.

The Rockcastle Mill closed its operations shortly after a flood in 1913, according to Judge Kessel.

The building was dismantled and brought to Ripley about 1920. The materials were used to build a two-story structure on old Charleston Drive. Charleston Drive was the main road to Ripley at that time.

THE KENNA MILL

The mill located at Kenna was known as the Grass Lick Milling Company. It was built by D.K. Hood between 1890 and 1900 at Kenna, WV. At that time Mr. Hood and his family owned several mills in the Jackson County area. The mill was managed by Clark Greene. In an interview with Carroll "Pete" Greene in February, 1990, Mr. Greene recalled how as a young boy, he played around the large mill that his uncle Clark managed. "Back then most farmers raised their own wheat, which they brought in wagons to the mill to be ground into flour. The farmers got to keep the bran and middlings from the wheat to use for cattle feed. They also received their supply of flour. The mill charged a toll or fee for grinding their wheat. This was usually paid by the farmer giving the mill a portion of the flour which the mill owner then sold."

The mill at Kenna was a steam-power mill and did not have a water wheel. The mill was located on land that is now owned by Cecil Wolfe and adjoins Route 21 at Kenna.

Mr. Greene believes the mill closed around 1920. The Kenna Mill was later torn down.

In addition to the previously mentioned mills there were many others; almost every town and village had at least one. There were mills in Ravenswood, Odaville, Little Pond Creek, Lockhart, Mt. Alto, Sandyville and Angerona.

Old Mill at Ravenswood

The early mills served as a nucleus for the first growth of many of our towns and communities. They provided the means of converting an agricultural crop into a usable staple of life and an item that was used in place of money for purchasing goods that could not be produced on the farm.

The grist mills served our county for over 100 years. By 1930 most all of them had closed as most farmers stopped growing their own wheat.

The once great mills are only memories now, preserved in photos and paintings, just as the lifestyle of those days are remembered in print and the reflections of yesterdays that friends pass on to the future.

Genevieve Starcher, who is now 88 years of age, recalled for this writer, how as a small child, she enjoyed standing on the Mill Creek bridge watching her father and other townspeople skating on the frozen mill pond. It's a tranquil picture of life that was the result of grist mills in Jackson County. Submitted by Mike McGrew

BANKS

BANK OF RIPLEY

It was back in the year 1891 that a group of businessmen realized that the time had come that a bank was needed. There was none in the county and the only places to get checks cashed were in Parkersburg and Charleston.

Farmers were increasing the size of their herds, saws were singing busy tunes as huge logs were ripped into lumber and railroad ties, all of which meant that large sums of cash were changing hands. The railroad had just been built into Ripley, which made shipping lumber, ties and staves more convenient to market.

These men applied to the state for a charter for a bank, which was issued on June 15, 1891. Sixty days later, August 10, 1891, the bank opened in a rented building, which later housed the Village Restaurant, and now Ben's Bakery.

The charter stockholders were Enoch Staats, Sr., Warren Miller, Alexis F. Parsons, H.F. Pfost, S.H. Maguire, J.L. Starcher, John M. Greer, W.M. Staats, M.S. Waybright, and D.K. Hood.

On the opening day the directors met and elected Enoch Staats as president, but he declined to serve and Warren Miller was then elected. D.K. Hood was the first vice-president, and H.F. Pfost the first cashier. Mr. Pfost served the bank either as cashier, or as president, or both, until his death in 1936.

A discount committee was named, consisting of J.L. Starcher, Enoch Staats, John M. Greer, D.K.

Hood, Warren Miller, and H.F. Pfost. Alexis F. Parsons, S.H. Maguire, and Warren Miller were appointed a committee to prepare suitable by-laws for the new corporation.

John M. Greer, D.K. Hood and J.L. Starcher, the committee named to secure suitable quarters for the new institution, lost no time in renting the building which still stands at the corner of Main and Church Streets, from Enoch Staats for $100 a year. Furniture and the necessary equipment were soon installed, and on August 10 of that year the residents of the town and farmers from outlying sections stepped up to the window in that first humble setting and deposited their cash so that the long journey through the dark, wooded sections and their slumbers through the night could be enjoyed in peace without having to worry over sums of money hidden about the premises.

Presidents of the bank have been relatively few: Warren Miller, Lovell M. Parsons, Sr., H.F. Pfost, Dr. J. Howard Smith, W.M. Pfost, the son of the first cashier, Sattis Simmons, and James Robinson. Vice-presidents who have served the institution have been D.K. Hood, Lovell M. Parsons, H.F. Pfost, C.R. Kessel, Dr. J. Howard Smith, W.M. Pfost, Sattis Simmons, and James Robinson.

Mr. Robinson joined the bank personnel as an assistant cashier in 1946, and rapidly rose in the affairs of the bank. At the death of Mr. Parsons, he was made cashier and later became executive vice-president. From 1979 to present, he has served as president. He is a native of Kingwood, Preston County.

By 1895 the business at the bank had increased to the point where an assistant cashier was necessary, and the board of directors selected C.C. Staats to fill the position. Larger quarters were also necessary, and in 1899 a committee composed of L.M. Parsons, W.M. Staats, G.H. Maguire and D.K. Hood leased a structure from Enoch Staats on Court Street. Among earliest employees of the bank besides those already mentioned were S.G. Starcher, H.L. O'Brien, and H.S. Armstrong. Miss Frances Riley was the first lady employee of the bank and was assistant cashier for several years.

F.P.M. Pfost joined the personnel of the bank in 1910, where he remained for more than a quarter of a century, being assistant cashier a greater part of the time. On July 1, 1914, Clayton Parsons, a young school teacher, became an employee of the bank, where he served as a director, cashier and in other official capacities for 41 years. Another long time officer was W. Marion Pfost, who was president at the time of his death in 1953.

In 1971, stockholders at the annual meeting instructed officers and directors to begin planning a new and modern facility. They purchased the Village Motel property, the St. John's Episcopal Church, the home once owned by Ora Armstrong Starcher, and the home once owned by Dr. T.E. Rymer, and set about making plans for a new building, which was started in the Spring of 1974.

In 1975 when the bank occupied its new home, its officers were Sattis Simmons, president; James Robinson, executive vice-president; and Michael Hall, cashier. The directors were Sattis Simmons, James Robinson, Michael Hall, Ronald H. Adams, E.M. Reynolds, Harry Parsons, Homer H. Parsons, John W. Miller, Robert Lester, and Dr. James S. Kessel.

Effective October 21, 1988, the Bank of Ripley officially became a subsidiary of City Holding Company. It was the last locally owned bank in Jackson County. (Taken from information supplied by the Bank of Ripley and a 1975 issue of the Jackson Herald.) Submitted by Mabel Chapman

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK (NOW UNITED NATIONAL BANK)

As the Valley Bank surrendered its charter on the eve of August 3, 1915, to the State of West Virginia, the new bank, The First National Bank of Ripley, assumed its credits and liabilities, and has carried on its business in the same progressive spirit of its founders, searching ever for better, safer, and more efficient ways of serving the public.

In 1927 the Boards of Directors of The First National Bank and The Citizens State Bank, realizing that neither had sufficient space or facilities to give to the progressive people they served the type of banking services they so rightly and richly deserved, by uniting and combining their assets, they could afford to give such service to the public, and in the interest of progress and for better banking services, consolidated, with George B. Crow as president, W.E. Walker as vice-president, George E. Straley as cashier, and H.S. Armstrong, as assistant cashier.

The Boards of Directors of the two banks merged into one board.

Steeped in the heritage of banking progress, a priceless heritage of its predecessor banks, the new The First National Bank immediately erected a new bank building on the location of The Citizens State Bank on Main and Court Streets. It was designed to give the county the latest in banking services, which the board of directors then felt would be adequate for the next 50 years. Within 25 years, the building was inadequate and was completely remodeled.

On April 30, 1966, The First National Bank purchased from the heirs of Dr. Richard Camden Starcher property on North and Court Streets, adjoining the I.O.O.F. Building, which is the present location of the bank. H.B. Agsten, Jr. was the contractor for the present building, which took 18 months to build, and in 1973 they moved into the new facility. On August 28, 1989, it became United National Bank.

Presidents who have served are R.P. Shinn, W.E. Walker, G.B. Crow, Burton Crow, and William E. Casto.

Vice-presidents have been S.G. Starcher, D.E. Kessel, W.E. Walker, Burton Crow, and R.C. Starcher.

Persons having served as cashiers are W.W. Riley, G.E. Straley, H.S. Armstrong, A. Clyde Wright, J. Vernon Fisher, and Gweneth S. Botkin.

Directors who have served are: William E. Casto, W.M. Casto, Burton Crow, G.B. Crow, J.C. Fisher, C.E. Goodwin, Stephen P. Goodwin, W.D. Hinzman, Howard Kerwood, D.E. Kessel, Oliver

THE VALLEY BANK

The Valley Bank was chartered by the State of West Virginia on April 8, 1893. The first meeting of the stockholders of the bank was held in the office of W.W. Riley, in the Town of Ripley, Jackson County, West Virginia, on May 1, 1893, at which time J.L. Starcher, John T. Vail, E.H. Rader, W.W. Riley, P.E. McKown, E.E. Starcher, and Hiram Douglass were elected as directors.

The directors, at a meeting immediately following the adjournment of the stockholders meeting, elected J.L. Starcher as president; E.H. Rader as vice-president; and W.W. Riley as cashier.

J.L. Starcher was president of the Valley Bank from 1893 to 1902. Others who served as president are J.O. Shinn from 1902 to 1910; W.E. Walker from 1910 to 1914; and R.P. Shinn from 1914 to 1915.

Vice-presidents who served are E.H. Rader 1893 to 1894; Hiram Douglass 1894-1902; J.T. Vail 1902 to 1906; W.E. Walker 1906 to 1910; C. C. Staats 1910 to 1914; and S.G. Starcher 2/4/1915 to 6/20/1915.

Directors who served at some time during the existence of the Valley Bank were J. R. Casto, Hiram Douglass, W.A. Ellis, L.E. Graham, John Hargrove, J.M. Kessel, P.E. McKown, Warren Miller, O.J. Morrison, W.H. O'Brien, B.F. Rader, E.H. Rader, W.W. Riley, Josephine Sayre, J.O. Shinn, R.P. Shinn, C.C. Staats, Enoch Staats, Theodore Staats, E.E. Starcher, J.L. Starcher, S.G. Starcher, John T. Vail, Margaret Walker, and W.E. Walker.

The minutes of the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Valley Bank held on the 1st day of May 1893 state: "On motion the following resolution was adopted, to-wit: Whereas, under verbal authority heretofore given to J.L. Starcher by the stockholders of the Valley Bank he said Starcher did on the day of 1893 purchase for and on behalf of said Bank a house and lot in the Town of Ripley, Jackson County, West Virginia, from John M. Greer at and for the sum Nine hundred and fifty dollars." "And said Starcher also purchased, for and on behalf of said Bank, a plate steel vault and doors, for which he paid the sum of $160.00, and also contracted for the repair and rebuilding of the house on lot so purchased by him, with Frey and Hall, for the sum of $205.00, and said Starcher has also contracted for one of Herring-Hall-Marvin Co's burglar proof safes at the price of $700.00."

"Therefore, resolved, that all acts of said J.L. Starcher in relation to said purchase and contracts be, and they are hereby ratified and in all respects confirmed."

The lot purchased by J.L. Starcher for the first home of the Valley Bank is now the site of the Calvary United Methodist Church, situated on the Northwest corner at the intersection of Court and North Streets.

The directors, on March 25, 1907, pursuant to the findings and directions of the stockholders, purchased from Enoch Staats, a lot on Front Street, now Court Street, and erected the second home of the Bank.

The stockholders of the Valley Bank, on July 31, 1915, resolved to surrender the charter to the State of West Virginia for the operation of a bank, and to secure such charter from the Government of the United States of America for the operation of a national bank, so as to give the people served and the community the added protection and banking services available only from national banks. On August 3, 1915, the Valley Bank closed its records and surrendered its charter, and on the morning of August 4, 1915, The First National Bank of Ripley came into existence as a national banking institution. TIMBER AND LUMBERING

When the first settlers came to Jackson County the land was covered with an immense amount of fine white oak, yellow pine, yellow poplar, chestnut, black walnut, red oak, black oak, chestnut oak, beech and hickory, with smaller amounts of white elm, sugar maple, red maple, basswood, white ash, sycamore, white walnut, hemlock, white pine, black gum, and others usually found with them. Our forefathers must have been dismayed at the amount of hard labor required to clear a few acres in the towering forest for a corn field and garden.

The first sawmills in the county were run by water power. In 1835, there were eight sawmills in the county, and people in the county had been sending large amounts of lumber to market for years before.

As late as the Civil War, most of the lumber in the county was sawed by water power, the first steam sawmill being installed at Murfreesville in 1847. Between 1870 and 1900, portable steam sawmills were common and most of the virgin timber in the county was marketed at that time.

Much timber was floated down Big Sandy, Mill and Pocatalico creeks, and caught by booms at Ravenswood, Ripley, Millwood and the mouth of Poca. It was sawed and, after the coming of the railroads to Ripley and Ravenswood, shipped to market. Millions of board feet of lumber and other millions of cross-ties for railroads were shipped in this manner.

Lumber dealers would mark their logs with a brand, much like the cattle brands in the West, for easy identification, for example, "S" for Starcher Brothers, of Ripley.

Wagons were also used in hauling ties and lumber. George Burton Crow remembered seeing wagons waiting in line to unload at the railroad depot in West Ripley often being backed up through town and out the Charleston and Spencer roads for a mile or more. Ties usually sold for a dime. Submitted by Delmer Hite

THE OIL AND GAS INDUSTRY IN JACKSON COUNTY, WEST VIRGINIA

Most historians agree that the oil and gas industry really started with the completion of the first commercial oil well at Titusville, PA. Col. Edwin L. Drake completed the well August 27, 1859 to a depth of 69½ feet. Other wells had been drilled previously but their use was primarily medicinal and this only required small quantities. The Civil War drastically speeded the Industrial Revolution in the North and the demand for oil as a fuel and a lubricant for machines was greatly increased.

Speculation in oil ran wild and spread rapidly from these beginnings. Oil fever speculation saw land being leased for as much as $2,000.00 per acre near Burning Springs in Wirt County.¹ This area was the oil center of the state and became the target of a Confederate Army raiding and foraging party in 1863. Barges on the Little Kanawha River were loaded with oil awaiting the spring floods and many tanks were full of oil up the hollows and along the shore. These were all set afire and subsequently exploded. The burning oil covered the river and it was ablaze as far as the eye could see. This is said to be the first military assault in history on a petroleum producing facility.

The first Oil and Gas Lease of record found in Jackson County was between Daniel D. Rhodes and others to Enterprise Oil Company of Allegheny City, Pennsylvania. Land in the vicinity of Cottageville, Virginia was leased on February 15, 1861. There is no evidence of production but various areas were tested throughout the county in the ensuing years.

Later, in 1866, the first evidence of drilling occurred on lands of Phillip Rohr and his wife in Jackson County, West Virginia. However production records are not in evidence. No important oil or gas fields were discovered in Jackson County during the 19th century.

Soon after 1900 Dr. I.C. White of the West Virginia Geological Survey gave this summary of the oil and gas potential in Jackson County:²

"Jackson County is a gentle syncline, the axis of which passes NE and SW through the center of the county. This very simple geologic structure is quite unfavorable for the accumulation of either oil or gas into rich pools, and hence when the sands of the Jackson county region have been penetrated by the drill, a little oil, a little gas, and much water have been found in every well, and in nearly every sand, but no oil or gas in commercial quantity, the relief evidently being too slight to permit the separation of the three substances into pools of commercial value. Hence the future oil history of Jackson does not look bright viewed either by the result of several tests or from a purely theoretical standpoint, although it is possible that future wells may find better results in some portions of its large untested areas."

Later developments were to prove Mr. White to have slightly missed the mark.

In 1907 the first commercial natural gas field was discovered near the community of Gay by the Carter Oil Company. A considerable quantity of gas was found in the Salt Sand at a depth of about 1760 feet. However, gas was difficult to market because of the lack of pipelines and therefore the value of gas was much less than that of oil. The first field of real economic importance was the Liverpool oil field which was discovered in Ravenswood District in 1919. The oil was found in the Berea sand at a depth of 2400 feet.

Shortly thereafter in 1921 the discovery of oil near Gay in the Cow Run formation at a depth of 1350 feet produced a boom in that area. Although by today's standards these were very small fields, at that time they were important. The U.S. now produces more oil in one day than these two early fields produced in their entire history. West Virginia was among the leading producers of crude oil in the United States in 1913 and gradually declined thereafter. The state led the nation in the production of natural gas from 1909 until 1923 and thereafter declined.³

After the discovery of the large oil fields in the western states the oil industry started a rapid decline in the east. Over production greatly depressed the price of oil. West Virginia was never again to be an important oil producer. The future was to lie in the development and production of natural gas.

Things were relatively quiet in the oil and gas industry in Jackson County until 1936. In that year the discovery of the great Oriskany Sand gas field occurred in North Kanawha County by Columbian #1 on the W.H. Baxter Lease.⁴

The Oriskany was to be the largest single sand-gas field discovered in the Appalachian Area to this date. It covers approximately 175,000 acres. This was called the Elk-Poca Field and extended through Jackson County to its Northern Border. This produced a flurry of drilling and pipeline activity and started a boom in natural gas in the county which continued hot and cold through the 1960s.

In 1966, the Rocky Fork field was discovered in Northern Kanawha County. This was the first Newburg well and drilling activity and speculation increased again. Some believed that this might well be the beginning of great new fields at greater depths. That same year the South Ripley Newburg field was discovered by Commonwealth Gas Corp. #1 on the S. Sayre lease in Ripley District at the depth of 5500 feet. Newburg production was spectacular but short lived. The largest open flow gas well east of the Mississippi River was drilled by Cities Service Oil Co. on the Hannah lease in North Kanawha County. It had an open flow measurement of 168,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day. However, like all Newburg wells the decline was rapid and moderate production followed. Newburg drilling occurred mostly between 1966 and 1975 with little being done after that.

Another aspect of oil and gas production has not yet been mentioned. The Devonian Shale formation contains large quantities of gas and oil and is present under most of Western and Southern West Virginia. It can be from 500 to 1000 feet thick but it lacks the porosity and permeability to allow the petroleum to be produced except slowly over a long period of time. This makes the economics of drilling often unfavorable. To offset this problem and to encourage Devonian production the Federal Government in the decade of the '80s granted a tax credit for production from the Devonian Shale, Tight Sands and Coal Bed Methane. This will probably be the thrust of most oil and gas production in Jackson County until the economics justify exploring the deeper formations.

The last gas field to be discovered in Jackson County, coincidentally, was in the first field near Gay. This was a basement test well which was intended to drill through all of the sedimentary rocks down to the granite below. It was drilled by the Exxon Corporation on the McCoy Lease near the community of Statts Mills in 1975 to a total depth of 17,686 feet. It produced over five million cubic feet of gas per day from the Rome Formation at a depth of 14,356 feet. However it was finally plugged due to salt water problems which could not be overcome. It is noteworthy that a large gas pocket was discovered at 9500 feet which produced a continuous 40 foot high flare. It was plugged and drilled again by sidetracking the plugged area and the test well was completed to the granite rock below.

These discoveries have not been pursued due to the depressed condition of the Natural Gas Industry in the 1980s. However, it is interesting to speculate on what may one day be found in these deeper horizons. Submitted by Robert R. Rhodes

INDUSTRY 1860 TO 1990

The Ripley Woolen Mill was erected shortly before the Civil War by the Hasslers and Charles H. Progler and continued in business under various owners until 1889, when the building and machinery was burned. Progler built a handle factory and planing mill in Ripley in 1876. Isaiah and Robert Vail manufactured wagons and caskets. There was a broom factory in Ravenswood in 1883, and another wagon factory at the same place. The steamboat yard at Murraysville continued in business until 1884. Several rock quarries were in operation during the period before 1900, including one at Silverton.

The virgin timber in the county was mostly cut during the period, 1870-1907, and just prior to World War I and up until the present, there has been much drilling for oil and gas in the county. Of late years, as the timber in the county has spread over much of the land as farming has diminished, there has been a steady growth in the pulpwood and lumber industry, including the WESTVACO pulpwood mill at Millwood, Burke-Parsons-Bowlby and Facemeyer Lumber, at Ripley and Dickerson Corp., Fairplain.

The greatest aid in the economy of the county was the establishment of the huge Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corporation plant, on the Ohio River, below Ravenswood, in 1954, which at one time employed over 3,000 workers. In 1989, the plant was sold to a conglomerate of Connecticut financiers, and is now known as the Ravenswood Aluminum Co.

A growing company, locally owned, is the Hartley Manufacturing, Inc. plant, at Ravenswood.

Also at Fairplain, are the Jackson County Livestock Market, Inc., and, recently, the Shoney Distribution Center, which supplies the Shoney restaurants in West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky.

Ripley Sportswear, Inc., with offices at Silverton, has been in business for several years.

Appalachian Log Structures, Inc., at Ripley, has also been in the business of manufacturing log cabins, houses, etc., for some time.

SCHOOLS

ANTIOCH SCHOOL

When Lincoln signed the Congressional Act on June 20, 1863, creating the state of West Virginia, the school system handed to the new state by the mother state of Virginia was poor indeed.

The families of this section of the Cow Run community saw the need and were anxious for a community school.

At this time the only school offered was a "subscription" school held at the old Cherry Grove log church for a period of three or four months during the summer.

People of the community responsible for having the Antioch School built were George Shinn, Thomas Hartley, Job Lewellyn Hunt, William Harpold, Frances King, Ephraim Sayre, Jacob Baier, William Lewis and Kier Rider.

The Antioch schoolhouse was built in 1865 on land along Grass Run owned by Ephraim Sayre. It was a hewed log building 28 by 30 feet with nine windows — three on the south side, three on the north, two on the west and one on the east end. The door was at the northeast corner. Ephraim Sayre cut and hewed the logs and put the building up for $100. A man by the name of Jones made eight seats or desks around the wall. Thomas Hartley "chinded" and daubed the cracks between the logs with mortar made of clay for the outside and with lime mortar for the inside. Two years later William Gilpin made six more seats. A blackboard three by six feet was on the wall behind the door.

In 1870, Bob Turner "weatherboarded" the building and Bill Weands painted it. The building stood on a hillside with the south side being about four feet off the ground. In cold weather the hogs, which ran at large at that time, would gather under the schoolhouse and they made quite a noise. At times the teacher would send one of the boys out to drive the hogs away.

A large heating stove which burned wood was in the center of the room. There were knot holes in the floor close to the stove and the students would poke bones or anything they didn't want to eat from their lunches through these holes.

The boys carried the drinking water from a spring some distance away from the schoolhouse. If the water was brought in during school hours, the teacher would ask someone to pass the water so all could have a drink. Everyone used the same tin cup.

The first teacher to teach in this log schoolhouse was Miss Ellen Welton of Mason City, West Virginia. The names of others teaching in this school were: Anna Taylor of Ravenswood, William Roseberry of Mason City, George Carter of Cow Run, John Swales of Scio, Ohio, Rachel McLoughlin of Flatwoods, Josie Taylor of Ravenswood.

Also, Mollie Tall of Racine, Ohio, John Davis, Frank Sayre, Samuel King, Letitia Lewis, Victoria King, all of Cow Run.

The last four were former pupils of the school. Miss Victoria King was the last teacher in the log schoolhouse. In 1882, a new school building was built by Theodore Wright and the teacher (Miss King) with the pupils moved into the new building during the holidays in 1882.

The new building was a big improvement over the log building. The students were much impressed by having outside toilets at the new building. At the log building they used the woods and brush for a screen.

Tradition relates that there was a descendant of Ephraim Sayre in attendance at every term of school from the time it opened in 1865 till the last term in 1940. This leads to the further tradition that more descendants of Ephraim Sayre attended Antioch School than from any other family which lived in the Antioch School district.

Antioch School in 1908, John J. Sayre — teacher

In addition to Miss Victoria King, those teaching in the new school building were: George Crum, Floyd Shirley, George McDermott, Madge Wilkinson Slaughter, Jessie Cleck Gilbert, Elta Sayre, Eula Sayre Hunt, Della Kessell, Mary H. King, Louise Karr, Marie Sayre, Nancy Bell Sayre Rardin, Dolly Parson, Everett Hughes, Sallie Karr Rader, Creed Ferguson and Marie Karr Brokaw, Holly Sayre, John Sayre, Georgie Lloyd, Joe Ferguson, Tennie Lewis, Miss Arnett, John J. Sayre.

Irene Rardin Coe, Stella Parson Knightstep Durst, John Gorrell, Lawrence Hunt, Etta Hughes Day, Lettie Gillespie Wineberg, Early Crum, Conrad McCoy, Bernice Ankrum Painter, Kathleen Cunningham Mann, Avis Baker Raines, and Virginia (Pinnell) Hogsett, who taught the last term (1939-40).

John J. Sayre taught more terms of school at Antioch than any other teacher. As told by William M. King, a student of the log school house. Submitted by Thomas E. Sayre, a student of the new school building.

BUFFALO LICK SCHOOL

The little, white, one-room school standing on Wendell Casto's farm, on Buffalo Lick Run, off Tug Fork, is the Buffalo Lick School, where I finished eight years of schooling, 77 years ago. It is over 100 years old.

My family lived on Zion Ridge above the school. We walked to school carrying our lunch buckets and books.

The teacher rang the bell, calling us into class. School started with the primer class, then the reading classes, each one reading a paragraph until the lesson was finished. All eight grades were taught by one teacher. Every day at noon, we had an hour to play ball or a base game.

One teacher stands out in my memories with lots of love. He taught us three or four years. With the same teacher and students that length of time we became one family. This teacher was Willie Casto. He was more than a teacher; he was Father, Brother and Friend to us all. We didn't just learn reading, writing and arithmetic. There were two subjects you learned if nothing else: Right from Wrong, and that there were Moral Standards to live by.

My school days were the happiest days of my life. I loved all the people in our neighborhood of families. Most of our social life centered around school and church. Wednesday evenings we had literary at school. The parents all came, taking part in a spelling bee, singing or putting on plays. Every Friday we had a spelling match.

I can remember most of their names. Most are gone now, but the precious memories I have are so dear to me. I am so thankful for all the good things we were taught there.

Buffalo Lick School, ca. 1911

This picture was taken the last day of school (about 1911). The whole neighborhood came for dinner and togetherness; no wonder people want to go back to Jackson County. I went back last summer to see the old school. I wish there was some way to preserve it. That school and its teachers have sent many fine people out in nearly every walk of life — teachers, ministers, lawyers, farmers, and a Professor at Chicago University, Homer Young.

While standing at the door of the school, I relived the poem, "Forty Years Ago." "I have wandered to the village, Tom, I sat beneath the tree, upon the school house playground, that sheltered you and me — but none were left to greet me, Tom, and few were left to know, who played with us upon the greens some 40 years ago. Some are in the church yard laid, some sleep beneath the seas, but few are left of our old class except you and me, and when our time shall come, Tom, and we are called to go, I hope we will meet with those we loved, Just Forty Years Ago."

Our school was made up of these families: Ballards, Burnem, Carpenter, Casto, Hays, McDonalds, Skidmores, Vanesses, Waybrights, Winters and Youngs. By Zona Young DeLancey

CAVIN FORK SCHOOL

The Cavin Fork School was located at Cavin Fork, in Grand District, on property which was obtained from the Boso family. The previous school was located in front of the present building. Charley Pilchard and Jess Swain constructed the last school building in the late 1920s. After the school was closed in the mid 1950s, Harrison Boso sold it to Orem Lemley. Currently, Alan and Diane Kieffer own the property and have been renovating the school building.

Teachers after 1919 included: Iris Swain, Esther Barnes, Mildred Pepper, Lucy Cooper, Anna Postlewait, Ira Allen, Davis Seals, Clark Woofter, Marie Flinn, Noel Bever, Faye Williams, James Bunner, Lahoma Poling, Bert Stallings, Naomi Kieffer, Martin Archer, Jess Jarrett, and Gay Frazier.

Students in 1919 were Freda Alexander, Gladys, Noel, Garnet and Hilton Bever; Cecil, Hazel and Eva Beach; Blanche, Georgia and Beulah Cross; Clinton Golden; Darrell, Lora and Fred Lemley, Ernest, Nolia, Opal, Mae and Richard Moore; Edith and Auline Smith.

After 1919, students included: Opal, Hobart and Corinne Alexander; Clarice Allen; Grace Bever; Claude and Florence Beach; Maxine, Lowell and Aneth Lemley; Darrell Moore; Harry and Ronald Bennett; Goldie and Fanny Hamric; Alan, Judith and Steven Kieffer; Thomas and Lois Lemley; Ruth and Aulene Moore; Ovie Nohe; Leon Patterson; Lou, Erma, Marjorie, Wanda and Stella Rhodes; Leo and Roger Rawson; Helen, Ronald and Robert Riddle; Eldo and Sylvia Seals; William, Roger and Carolyn Hendricks; James and Lillian Knox; Clifford and Garnet Miller, Amelia, Louisa and Rose Rhodes; Henry Perdue; Gene Kester; Beulah, Myrtle, Bernice, Mary and Gay Moore; Miona, Mary, Ethel and Ila Smith.

CENTENNIAL SCHOOL

The first school in Sycamore Valley was on the Landfried farm, Sycamore Road, near the Ronald Randolph residence. It was a log structure and was attended by the Philip Landfried family and neighbors. It was named Centennial in honor of the Centennial Year (1876).

Willie Sallaz, a blind teacher, along with his assistant, was hired by the families to teach several terms. A bookcase from this building was given by Audrey Landfried Sayre and Rilla Landfried Skeen to the log school house at Cedar Lakes.

A new frame building replaced the log one in a new location, this time on Ludwig land, on an island behind the Centennial Church. The first teacher there was George Straley, later to become a Ripley banker. Everette Parsons, later owner and manager of the Ripley Hardware, also taught there.

In 1920, another move was made. H. Paul Parsons was hired as teacher. He was a living dynamo. He was, to me, the most energetic, fantastic individual I have ever known. He convinced the community and the Board of Education that we needed a new and larger building — a building lighted by all windows on the left, with so much air space per pupil, a building with a hall, cloak rooms (for both boys and girls), modern outdoor privies, a large level playground equipped, a library to hold new books and magazines, a 4-H Club and a Parent-Teacher organization. Centennial Community experienced a "Renaissance."

Pie and box socials were held to provide all the funds the Board could not furnish and to flush the fund one pie was known to have sold for $40.00.

Centennial School, ca. 1922

After being in the building one year a representative from the State Superintendent's office in Charleston graded our school and pronounced it a first class Standardized School — the first and only one room school (at that time) in Jackson County to receive such an award. To add to this occasion, all the parents came, brought food for the noonday meal and a program was presented by all the children to further impress all present.

Mr. Parsons was followed by C.H. Hunt, Paul Pinnell, Mary Straley and Winnie Kerwood, Gay Frasier and Warren Cunningham. I passed on to High School to return there for a seven year hitch, the longest term for any teacher to teach at Centennial.

The last school year for Centennial was 1956. The last teacher was Betty White, but the people of this community just weren't ready to "let go" of the "hub" around which so much community activity revolved. They asked the Board of Education if we might keep our building as a Community Center, which was granted. The building has been renovated with much labor from many loyal community minded individuals. Once a month, a Community Pot Luck Dinner is held where neighbors once again meet for an evening of conversation and entertainment. Sometimes parties and special community meetings are held there. It also serves as a place for Vacation Bible School for the Church.

Precious memories linger on. The last Saturday in June, all former students of Centennial meet, eat and visit at the Centennial School Reunion and play a guessing game — just who next will come through the door. Submitted by Rilla Landfried Skeen

CENTER POINT SCHOOL

The Center Point School was located in Parchment Valley, midway between Rockcastle and Given. Many well-known persons were pupils at this little country school.

Center Point School

Rev. Shirley Donnelly, D.D., a native of Rockcastle, son of Hugh Parker and Rosa (Parsons) Donnelly, a long-time minister of Oak Hill, West Virginia, who served as a Colonel and Chief Chaplain of Gen. George C. Patton's Third Army in World War II, and was promoted Brigadier General before his death, August 31, 1982, gave a taped tour of the area to Mr. and Mrs. James W. Vencill, from which these comments on the school are quoted:

"Center Point was the name of our country school located on the point of a ridge midway between Rockcastle and Given. Only two teachers taught there when I was a child — Miss Lola Burton Parsons (the mother of Mrs. Vencill) and Ray Kessel. The latter teacher became a physician.

"One year at school, Miss Parsons gave me a book for getting the most 'head marks' in the spelling class. It was Tales From Shakespeare, by Charles and Mary Lamb, a pretty advanced book for a ten or 11 year old boy. That book is still in my library and has been used by college students to write in narrative form some of Shakespeare's plays.

"Right here is a little road that goes to the right. We went up that road going to school. I have seen my father hitch up the horses, put three of us in a sled on a bed of straw, cover us over with a comforter, and drive us up to that school. I have traveled this old road many a time when I was a boy. School lasted only five months a year; had a hundred days.

"If you would tie a cow up here at this house (where we had just left) and give her a five mile rope — four men went out of the area here covering about a five mile radius to become doctors or pharmacists, seven men became attorneys, one of them became a Supreme Court Judge (Oliver D. Kessel), and all of us taught school." A brother (Dr. Thomas C. Donnelly) and sister of Dr. Donnelly became college presidents.

Mrs. Lola Burton (Parsons) Lynch, mother of Mrs. Vencill, died at St. Albans, WV, June 26, 1964. She was a daughter of Dr. T.I.C. Parsons, of Rockcastle and Ripley. Submitted by Mrs. Frances Lynch Vencill

CUBA SCHOOLS

The first Cuba School was located at the top of the hill, between Little Sandy and Blood Run, in Grant District. Classes were held here until the late 1920s. Some of the teachers who taught at the first school include: Martin Archer, Ada Rardin, Wilma Howard, Faye Williams, Edwin Naylor, Clyde Hupp, Harvey Snyder and Lena Argabrite. Sunday school classes were held in the school building each Sunday morning and prayer meeting on Wednesday night. "Literary," which consisted of debates and discussions, was held one Friday night a month. A singing school was held here at least one time, with a large picnic served after it was over.

The accompanying photograph was taken about 1925, while Martin Archer was a teacher. Those in the picture include: Mary Naylor, Inez Sargent, Mildred Sargent, Thelma Conner, Clyde Conner, Rex Miihlbach, Paul Rardin, Wade Rardin, Bessie Rardin, Carroll Starr, Carlos Starr, Charles Starr, Leo McCown, Ethel Archer, Dole Archer, Lewis Archer, Paul Smith, Virgil Smith, Beddow Smith, Nell Smith, John Smith, Bessie Flinn, Cleo Flinn, Ralph Flinn, Jane Nesselroad, Garnet Ross, Paul Ross, Walter Sands, Arl Williams, Hattie Williams, Gladys Beach, and Pearl Rogers.

About 1930, land was obtained from the Conner family to build a new school. This building was located at the junction of Little Sandy Road and Negro Run. Roland Haught was the last teacher in the old school and the first in the new one. She also taught the last term before the school was permanently closed, September 10, 1958. Others who taught at Cuba after 1930 included: Pearl Sharpe, Martin Archer, Charles Wilson, Bessie Rardin, Faye Wagner, Delbert Rardin, John Shockey, George Lee, and Faye Lindamood.

Pete Gough later bought the school building, converted it into a house, and lived there a few years. Mrs. Teets lived there awhile before it was purchased by Darrell and Marilyn Jett in 1972. The Drift Run School was located on the Drift Run Road, about one mile from Route 21, in Ravenswood District. The building was on the Wick Smith property. The school closed in the 1940s and was torn down a few years later.

EARLY HISTORY OF EDUCATION IN JACKSON COUNTY

West Virginia was a part of Virginia until 1863, so its early education was influenced by the laws of that state. The first school legislation was passed by the General Assembly of Virginia in 1796, which provided that "the schools of each township (county) be managed by three able and honest men." They were appointed by the county court. In 1817, the number was increased to five and later to ten. They were called County School Commissioners. The county was divided into school districts. The citizens of each school district assembled to select a site for the school. The expense of erecting the building and paying the teacher was by taxation of the county. In 1809, the Virginia Assembly established a state school fund of the sum of $45,000 to be distributed among the counties on the basis of white population. The western counties got little. It was known as the Literary Fund. Later it became known as the General School Fund. Schools were free to white children for three years, then tuition was charged. The curriculum was the Three-R's. In 1846, the General Assembly provided the counties with the right to vote upon the question of supporting schools by taxation. Two-thirds of the citizens had to favor the free school system to establish it.

In 1831, Jackson County was formed from parts of Kanawha, Mason and Wood counties. It is difficult to determine the enrollment, amount of money spent, the names and location of schools for the exact area which is now Jackson County, as the records, what few exist, show the date for the whole of the former counties, Wood, Mason and Kanawha. We are not sure that any of the ten school commissioners lived in what is now Jackson County. We do know that in 1833 Jackson County received $300 from the General School Fund.

The first school commissioners for Jackson County were Henry Shearman, William Shepherd, Thomas Cain, Johnathon Casto, Gilbert Boswell, Thomas Boggs, John Warth, Ephriam Evans, George Stone and Jesse Carney.

The school commissioners selected the county superintendent who served as secretary, treasurer, and also taught school to give him sufficient duties and more pay to attract qualified persons. He supervised instruction, conducted teacher training institutes, and held examinations for certificates, etc.

The first county superintendent was appointed October 26, 1846, 15 years after the county was formed. He was Andrew Flesher, one of the prominent teachers of the time. Other superintendents from that date to 1900 in order were John Armstrong, J.A. Ewing, George W. Moffett, A.C. Tidd, A.F. McMillan, George B. Crow, Louis Young, R.H. Hughes, H.P. Halbert, W.P. Kerwood, Isiah Parsons, W.G. Duer, J.W. Crites, P.H. Rardin, S.U. Rhodes, W.A. Rankin, and W.M. Sallaz (often called the blind superintendent). Under Virginia law they were appointed for a one year term. When West Virginia became a separate state in 1863, the Constitution provided for their election by the people for a two year term. In 1895, the term was lengthened to four years. It remained thus until 1933 with the advent of the county unit, when the law provided for their being appointed by the board of education as at present.

Between 1846 and 1900, the salary of the superintendent ranged from the sum of $250 to $450 per year. The teaching responsibility was dropped when the number of schools increased. During this early period Jackson County was fortunate to have had superintendents who were well prepared for their time and who were intensely interested in education for children. Two were particularly outstanding. One was George W. Moffett, the first superintendent under the new state. He was a member of the Constitution Convention, and served as a member of the education committee of that body. He urged the inclusion of provisions for free schools which was done. The Constitution stated that "the Legislature shall provide for a thorough and efficient system of free schools." That provision is still in the Constitution. The other superintendent of distinction was A.C. Tidd of Murraysville who was particularly progressive. He served 1867-69. His letters to the State Superintendent of the Schools recommended better teacher preparation, teachers institutes, better teacher certification examinations, more school buildings, better record keeping, and a more uniform system of distributing state aid.

The first school taught in the county was at Cottageville in 1807 by Andrew Hushan. The second was at Murraysville in 1818 (Teacher not known). The first school at Ripley was taught in 1829 by John Armstrong, who later became a county superintendent. The first school in Ravenswood was in 1837 and taught by "a man named Smith."

Records show that additional schools were established at the following places before the Civil War: Muses Bottom, Sandyville, Fairplain, Lockhart, Parchment, Mt. Moriah, Mt. Olive, Gay, Oak Hill, Staats Mill, Angerona, Evans, Kenna, Silverton, Kentuck, and Toppins Grove. These were the "official Schools" but not the only ones which existed in the county at that time. They were the ones operated by the school commissioners and received some financial aid from the county and state. Several others operated on a tuition basis and were private in a sense, so no records of their enrollment were kept. They were established by the citizens of the neighborhood who erected the schoolhouses at their own expense, or used a church, and paid the teacher. They were open to all children whose parents were able and willing to pay a small tuition, take turns boarding the teacher, or furnishing the wood for the fires. These schools were known by various names, such as "private," "tuition," "subscription" schools, and in some places as "old field" schools.

The typical school building was of logs, hewn or round, chinked with clay and stones. Usually it was 20' to 22' wide and 24' to 30' long. The floor was of hewn logs and in some instances a dirt floor was not unusual. A wide fireplace was across one end of the room; later Franklin and Burnside stoves were used. Desks were of hewn boards; so were the benches. In the 1890s patent furniture began to come into use in some schools. Pins were inserted in logs along the wall on which coats and caps were hung. In cold weather lunches were kept on the floor or on a bench near the stove to keep them from freezing. Windows were of glass and sometimes greased paper was used to replace a broken pane on a temporary basis (temporary often meant the remainder of the year). Boys and girls were seated and played separately. The schoolhouse was used for community and often for church uses and meetings. The teacher was usually the janitor, or sometimes the larger boys took turns in "sweeping out" as it was called.

School reports show there were five school buildings, all log, in 1865. By 1875 there were 25 log and 44 frame buildings. Statistics in 1865 may not have been complete. Also, by 1875, the school boards had probably taken over many of those built by private citizens. This was a period of an elaborate school building program. This was partly due to the influence of the county superintendents, but such things as pride in the new state, people seeing the need for education, and more contacts with the outside world through the use of the Ohio River and new railroads built across the state had their influence.

In 1870, following the recommendations of Superintendent Tidd, teacher institutes were held. They provided speakers on new and better methods of teaching and gave the superintendent an opportunity to present his program for the year ahead. At an institute during that first year, a County Teachers Association was formed. In 1885, a Peabody Institute for Teachers was conducted with a Dr. Newell from Maryland in charge. It was financed by funds from the Peabody Foundation, a fund established by George Peabody, a merchant in Peabody, Massachusetts, to assist with education in the South through teacher training. This was a sort of normal training school of short duration for teachers.

In 1869, a state report shows 17 women and 67 men teachers in Jackson County. The parents felt it took a man to maintain strict discipline. Discipline was a problem with so many large boys being in the elementary school as there was no other place for them to go - no high schools at that time. Miss Lou Warth, a woman teacher from the Millwood-Ravenswood area, was outstanding. It is said that she helped to influence the public that women could teach as well as men.

In 1866, the average term was slightly over three months. The average salary was about $30.00 per month. In 1833, parents paid $2.25 per pupil tuition for a term, called a quarter of 13 weeks. Many of the teachers were what was known as "itinerant teachers" who traveled from community to community and organized a school, taught it, and moved on to another community and organized another school, so the process went on for the year. He usually boarded around with the pupils (an earlier reference has been made to these schools). In most instances the teacher had no certificate; he had to sell himself to the parents. Sometimes he was also a minister. He came, taught school, moved on. If he were good, he was likely to be invited to return the next season.

During the '70s and '80s the term of school, was usually four months or more. This was an increase from three months around 1865. In 1890, the Legislature passed a law providing for more than a four month term, if approved by a vote of the people. In 1903, the law provided for a term of five months. In 1919, the Legislature increased the term to six months with two weeks being added to the term each year until an eight month term was reached in 1923. It remained at that number until 1933, with the coming of the county unit, when the term was increased to nine months. The independent Districts of Ravenswood and Ripley had longer terms during this period if the money was available.

Attendance was not compulsory at first. Around 1900, a weak attendance law was passed, but it was ineffective. Attendance laws were strengthened somewhat after World War I.

In the early days the curriculum consisted of the three-R's. Subjects were added as time elapsed, especially in the larger schools. German was taught to a few students in Ravenswood in 1874. In the main, the sentiment of the people determined what the teacher should teach. Schools can easily get too far away from the people by whom they are supported and for whom they exist.

Some of the books used were: McGuffey's Readers, White's Geography, Harvey's Grammar, Ray's Arithmetic, Goodrich's History and Penmanship by Spencer. Books were a problem as they were scarce, so in many cases the teacher used what the pupils brought. In 1887, a law required hygiene and physiology to be taught.

Until 1874, the schools were of an ungraded nature, each teacher grouped pupils according to their skill levels and there were no formal grades. Some peddlers of pedagogy seem to think they have discovered something new and call it the ungraded school, but the idea is nothing new; it is as old as the school system itself. These persons are really "educational antique dealers." In 1874, Alexander L. Wade of Morgantown introduced the graded school plan. It provided a form of organization for schools and instruction as they increased in size and complexity. The plan was adopted statewide and spread across the nation.

After West Virginia became a state, teacher certification was in the hands of the county superintendent. Our early superintendents were persons of scholarship, high ideals, and were progressive. Examinations were conducted once a month at the home of the superintendent. They could be either oral or written. Superintendent Tidd, having a great regard for good scholarship, established a high level procedure for certification in Jackson County. He conducted only written examinations, open to the public, and named two outstanding teachers to assist in giving the examinations and grading the test papers. The test consisted of "ten written answers of adequate length."

A grade of 90 per cent or above rated a No. 1 Certificate; 80 per cent or above a No. 2; 70 per cent or above a No. 3; 60 per cent or above a No. 4; and 50 per cent or above a No. 5. Test results in 1869 showed that of 100 applicants 16 failed, five qualified for a No. 1 Certificate and 79 qualified for certificates of lesser degree. Salaries in 1873 for the five grades of certificates were: No. 1-$30; 2-$28; 3-$26; 4-$24 and a No. 5 Certificate $20 per month. Grades four and five were later eliminated.

Superintendent Tidd recommended the procedure described for teacher certification to the State Superintendent of Schools and much of it was enacted into law.

Summer schools for teachers were organized so teachers could take courses to help them pass the certification test. Sometimes they were called "select" schools or "summer normals." They were the forerunners of the Lee Normal School terms held in Ripley during the early part of this century. The summer normals were taught by outstanding teachers who were holders of the No. 1 Certificate.

Negro education is a part of the story of schools in Jackson County although many of the younger persons will be surprised to learn about it. The Constitution of the new state provided for separate schools for negroes. Reports show that in 1870 there were 28 negro children enrolled in the school enumeration of Gilmore District (now Ravenswood District). Records about them are very incomplete. In 1873, there were 58 negro children in the county school census. The largest settlements were in the Ohio River area of the county, riverfront parts of Grant and Ravenswood Districts. Three or four families were listed in Mill Creek District (now Ripley District). Most of the negro families came by riverboat as slaves. In 1887-89, there were six negro schools in Jackson County. Reports show that a larger percent of the negro children enrolled in the school census attended school than did white children. Negro families usually lived in clusters, which may explain the difference, or it may have been that negroes saw the need for education, now that they were free from slavery.

The negro teachers were as well qualified as the average white teachers. Of the four known ones, J. T. Stevens, John Meyers, George Male and A. C. Male, three had second grade certificates and one a third grade. Their salary was the same as that for white teachers. Gradually the number of negro children decreased until no negro schools were needed.

There is a record of higher education in Jackson County. In 1858, W.A. Harmon from New York established the Union Academy in Ravenswood. It was a subscription school with tuition being $3 per quarter term. It operated four terms per year. The school flourished and provided high quality education for the community. During the Civil War Mr. Harmon joined the Union Army, and in 1864 the Board of Education of Gilmore Township purchased the building and opened a free public school.

In 1898, the Ohio Valley College was established in Ravenswood by joint efforts of the West Virginia Methodist and the United Brethren church conferences (now the United Methodist Church). The churches raised $6,000, and the Town an equal amount to provide $12,000, for a building. It had an enrollment of 150 to 200 students. The faculty consisted of eight persons, including some well known names. The President was Virgil A. Lewis, a former State Superintendent of Schools and author of "History and Government of West Virginia." Another staff member was Warren Wood, a Ravenswood native, a Professor of Rochester College of Business, and author of "When Virginia Was Rent in Twain" and "Tragedy of the Deserted Isle." Max Polsene of St. John's College, Danzig, Germany, taught foreign languages and music. He married Jessie Fleming of Ravenswood. The curriculum was literary, music, normal training and commercial. Tuition was $27 for 40 weeks. The school was discontinued after five years when F.P. Harris, Vice-President and the very energetic leader of the enterprise was killed when he fell from the building under construction. Such deep gloom was cast over the school that it, too, died away.

ECHO SCHOOL

Echo School #44 was located on Stone Ridge, two miles from Ripley. It was situated on one-half acre lot conveyed to Board of Education, 1894. The 30x36 school house was built in center front of the rolling lot with flag pole in front and outhouses opposite back corners. In later years a coal house was built. The Echo school was so named because the sound of pounding hammers echoed during construction. A pot-bellied stove was in center, desk seats at each side; boys on right, girls on left. The windowless side had long fiberboard painted black. The planed "recitation" bench sat parallel to blackboard, teachers desk and chair nearby. "Dinner buckets" that were anything from syrup or lard buckets to occasional "bought" lunch buckets were kept on shelves in front corner. Coats were hung behind the door. Water carried from nearest house was in bucket on wall shelf with dipper for dipping into individual cups. A large oak bookcase, termed "The Library," built by Frank Hogsett was attached to the wall. Proceeds from annual pie socials were used to purchase books, crockery water fountain with spigot, dictionary and hanging world globe. Students were termed pupils. Mathematics was called arithmetick. Spelling, penmanship and grammar was stressed. The teacher usually had Normal Instructor and Primary Plans magazine for helps in teaching all the grades.

School "took up" at 9 a.m., day ended at 4 p.m. with one hour noon and 15 minutes recesses mid-morn and mid-afternoon. An older pupil was the janitor. He arrived early to build fire and leaving after cleaning the blackboard and floor, earning but a few dollars for the 7-8 month term. Teachers salaries were meager. An earlier teacher was Robert Riley, later Lula Hogsett in intermittent years, D.M. Dorsey, Faye French Bowles, Georgiann Woodard Hutchinson, Mary McGrew Parsons and Lillie Simmons Winter.

Echo School

Echo School was the hub of most community events. There were also Spelling Bees, Literary debates, special occasion programs such as Christmas, Thanksgiving, Easter, and last day of school. Last day of school was a picnic event with old and young in families attending. Each school district had three trustees appointed by the Board of Education. A county Superintendent visited every school during the year.

At noon and recess time, the boys played marbles in a large ring, base, ante-over and stilt walking. The rest played London Bridge, blind man's bluff, drop the handkerchief and skip-to-my-lu.

Enrollment gradually decreased. Echo was closed at the end of the 1927-28 term, because the required minimum 12 pupil enrollment couldn't be met. The building was used by Farm Women's Club for meetings, programs and picnics, until 1934, when the Board of Education auctioned the buildings which Fred Hogsett bought. The property reverted to the land owner at that date, Fred Hogsett. Submitted by Leora Sayre

EMMA SCHOOL

Before the first school house was built on Lockhart's Fork, the students attended school in a combined log church and school building. This was located at Wiseburg and Providence, sometime in the late 1830s or early 1840s.

The first school house on Lockhart's Fork, in Grant District, was on a farm now owned by Lewis Sullivan. In 1876, one fourth of an acre was given by George Steele for the school. In 1890-91, a second school building was built on the Lincicome farm, replacing the first one. This was built by Charley Barlow and was named for Emma Lockhart Lincicome. The last school was built in 1904 on the Keebaugh farm, at the fork in Niggletytwist

ERA BELL SCHOOL

In 1897, land was obtained from John Burkhardt to build a school for the community which was located at the head of Maul Camp Road, Beech Grove Hill and Gates Ridge Road about one-half mile from the Wood County line in Grant District. The school was originally named New Era but was later renamed Era Bell.

The one-room school had a blackboard across the front of the room with a row of windows across each side wall. A pot belly stove was in the center of the room. The source of fuel was coal, which was hauled in the summer and stored in a small building. During the winter, children placed their two-student desks around the stove to keep warm since the school was not underpinned. Being located on top of a hill, the wind seemed to find every crack in the floor, wall and windows. Water was carried daily from a neighbor's house and stored in a stone jar which was kept on a shelf at the back of the room. Two outside toilets were located behind the school. Some children walked as far as two miles to attend school.

Since there was no area for a playground, the children would play in the road or woods. They skipped rope and played ball, marbles, tag and high jump when the weather was nice. During the winter, the children played fox and geese in the snow, as well as building snow forts and having snowball fights. They also went sleigh riding, mostly on pieces of boards. Spelling bees and math bees were usually held on Friday afternoons.

At one time the school was closed due to a small enrollment. It reopened in 1933 and was permanently closed in the spring of 1942. Most of the children in attendance at that time transferred to the Beech Grove School. The school building was later bought and torn down by Otho Scarberry. The only thing remaining is the coal house.

Some of the teachers before 1933 were: Alva Archer, Clare Sheppard, Nate McBride, Tony Lockhart, Lucy Lockhart, John Lockhart, Davis Seals, John Holiday, Eunice Moore, Amos Gault, Cecil Holiday and Leona Peters. Children of the following families attended before 1933: Will Young, Jack Hupp, Jim Sheppard, Arthur Anderson, Jake Collins, James H. Boyce, Ernest Bever, Stansberry Bowers, Leonard Holiday, Henry Holiday, Frank Boyce, Taylor Thompson, John Archer, Jim Seals, Oliver Kerr, Audrey Ball, and John Skinner.

Teachers between 1933-1942 included: Grace Vannoy, Alice Depue, Sam Blair and J.D. Cooper. Children from the following families attended at that time: Charley Boyce, John Carothers, Forest Anderson, Tink Skinner, Ernest Bever, Frank Young, Lennie Thompson, Charley Steele, Howard Hamrick, and Bill Brown.

FAIRVIEW SCHOOL #17

The Fairview School (#17) was located near the Fairview Church, on the Garfield-Leroy Road (Ravenswood District), on property donated by Ed Nuzum. When the school was permanently closed, the land went back to the Nuzum heirs who in turn donated it to the Fairview Cemetery. In 1911-12, Flossie Barnes was the teacher and the students were: Ora Mallett, Carrie Mallett, Mincra Powers, Ivy Mallett, Clara Brotton, Thelma Anderson, Ethel Conant, Mabel Brotton, Georgia Brotton, Angie Conant, Isabel Heater, Vergie Conant, Hollie Allen, Frank Brotton, Carl Brotton, Roy Nuzum, Joseph VanFosson, Johnny Brotton, Virgil Utter, Rollie Allen, Clyde Mallett, Homer Nuzum, Johnny Heater, James VanFosson and George VanFosson. Submitted by Aubry Walter

FAIRVIEW SCHOOL #29

In 1888, land was obtained from Nathaniel Thomas for the purpose of building a school. The Fairview School (#29) was located north of Lockhart, in Grant District, on the hill south of Pleasant Ridge. In 1907-08, Samuel Sommerville, Henry Pickering and Willard Archer served on the Board of Education for Grant District. Mersylla Hardesty was the teacher that year at Fairview. Students were: Pearl C. Kelbaugh, Minty Culver, Carrie Balis, Maywood Thomas, Cicero Thomas, Leonard Thomas, Yancy Thomas, Raymond Lockhart, Ester Lockhart, Nettie Thomas, William Wells, Charley Thomas, Earl Balis, Dewey Thomas, Roscoe Lockhart and Roscoe Hardesty. This school was closed in the spring of 1908.

FIRST STANDARDIZED SCHOOL IN JACKSON COUNTY

Honor Goes to H. Paul Parsons in Being Teacher Who Helped to Make It

One of the most important historical events in the rural schools of this county occurred on Wednesday, April 12, 1922, when the Centennial school of Ripley district, situated on Sycamore Creek about four miles from Ripley and taught by H. Paul Parsons, was scored by Mr. Stewart, of the State Department of schools, assisted by County Superintendent W.C. Casto in the presence of President T.E. Stewart and Commissioner E.L. Cross of the Board of Education and citizens of the entire community and declared to be in an official way the first one room standardized school in Jackson County. Of course the bringing of this very important event to a reality means that Mr. Parsons as the teacher had the solid support of students, patrons, trustees, board and the public in general to accomplish this important task.

The Requirements of Standardization

The public will wonder just what the requirements are for the standardization of a one room rural school. We must say that they are rigid and necessarily must be so since the privileges enjoyed by these schools and their communities over those not standardized are far reaching and mean much to the future citizenship of the community, county and state. A first class standardized school like this one must have scored at least 90 points divided as follows:

- (a) Yard and outbuilding, 20 points.
- (b) The school hours, 20 points.
- (c) Furnishings and supplies, 15 points.
- (d) School organization, 15 points.
- (e) The teacher, 30 points.

The school house, grounds, outbuildings, furniture and interior decorations all meet the requirements of State Board of Education. They also have ample supply of pure drinking water.

The building contains modern apparatus, devices and a library of 60 approved volumes.

Mr. Parsons is one of the county's progressive teachers and too much cannot be said in behalf of the teacher and these good farmer boys and girls assisted by their parents and the board of education in securing this highly prized honor, the first in the county and helping to make educational history in this state.

GILMORE HIGH SCHOOL

Gilmore High School, located at New Era, in Ravenswood District, was completed and opened in 1924. The first class completed their studies and graduated in 1927. This class included: Wayne Barnhart, Aurella Campbell, Ruth Critchfield, Yale Hogue, Elizabeth Scyoc, Clara Shimp, Glen Smith and Rex Smith.

The school was discontinued after the 1944-45 school year and reinstated in the fall of 1950, with an auditorium constructed the same year. The Sandyville Grade School and a gymnasium were located behind the high school building. In the spring of 1953, natural gas which had collected in the walls from a leak, resulted in an explosion which destroyed approximately half of the original building and damaged the roof of the new auditorium. After reconstruction, the school continued here until a new building was completed in 1961, about one-half mile north on U.S. Route 21.

Gilmore High School existed until the fall of 1965 when it was once again closed. Students had to transfer to either Ripley or Ravenswood High School. The building was then utilized as a grade school, housing grades five through eight. Later, the remaining buildings at New Era were converted to maintenance buildings and the lower grades were also moved to the newer facilities. The original high school building served as a senior citizen's center for many years until it was demolished in 1987. The old gymnasium, already deteriorating, was damaged by an explosion in the 1960s and was later torn down. Submitted by Charles Morris

The community of Sandyville had needed a high school for some time, but it seemed practically impossible. Taxes were already oppressive in some cases, but on the other hand reasoned the parents, "What will our boys and girls do without the essentials of life which is the second only to religion — education?"

Nearly every parent has a desire for their "Johnny" to have a white collar job so he will never have to wreck his body by hard labor such as his father did before him.

There was a will and with it came a way. There were three patrons who were very influential and persevering, but these people were staunchly supported by the other members of the community.

The Board of Education agreed to sponsor the movement and real work started in the spring of 1924. Pride blossomed forth in the hearts of all people concerned as the foundation was embedded and the buildings began to grow.

By September the building was incomplete but the second floor was almost finished. It was that part that held the first students. To reach the classrooms, each student had to climb a wooden stairway in front of the building which in turn led to a platform where the first landing was.

The first session was held on Monday, September 15, 1924, with Guy Wilson from the Clarksburg school district as principal.

There were just enough students with the proper qualifications to organize sophomore and freshman classes. At the opening of school there were four members of the sophomore class, but the freshman class already large, increased steadily during the first month of school.

During the first four weeks of school, classes were held only between the hours of nine and 12 in the mornings because the carpenters worked in the afternoons.

Helping Mr. Wilson was Howard Johnson of Ethel, Logan Co. Basketball and football were soon initiated into the program of the school.

Soon the building was completed with Forrest Hutchinson, contractor. The general appearance of the grounds was very much improved, including a gymnasium of the first rank, trees planted, a water system installed and laboratories and a library equipped. Among the newer additions was a vocational agricultural dept., and soon after the home economics division. The school purchased a very instructive set of Smithsonian books. A downfall was that the school board didn't furnish any typewriters to teach typing when, at the same time, Ravenswood and Ripley High Schools were furnished typewriters.

The school stepped forward to a very prominent place in both the scholastic field and the athletic field. The quota of students reached an approximate average of 105 per term and the number of teachers was increased to five.

Where is the Gilmore High School building now? A hole was dug and it was buried on the spot by the Board of Education in 1987. Submitted by Chester H. Moore

MEMORIES OF GIVEN SCHOOL

Rosa Carney Boswell (1886-1970) wrote the following in 1961:

"My school years were from 1892-1904 at Given, Jackson County, West Virginia, located nine miles from Ripley.

My first year in the school was in a new schoolhouse. It was the first term held in it. It was a one room, very large house for those days.

The first patented seats in a country schoolhouse in Jackson County were put in it. Up to that time all seats were wooden benches.

As to what we did in the 1890s: all we as children and young people had to look forward to was our church and school activities. There was nowhere else to go.

Some winters this school would have as many as 60 pupils with one teacher. We could not have all the classes each day. There were certain days for the higher subjects. Primary, first, second, third, and fourth grades had their classes each day. Now for the more advanced pupils' subjects were Ray's New Practical Arithmetic. Book's Mental Arithmetic, algebra, U.S. History, general history, civil government, geography, grammar, and bookkeeping. Those are the subjects taught to prepare one for the examinations who were going into teaching or to higher education in whatever field of work they were going to take up.

Among my classmates were five doctors: Dr. Royal Kessell, Dr. Ray Kessell both of Ripley, Dr. Russell Kessell, a surgeon in Charleston. All are brothers. Dr. Edgar Parsons, Chicago, Illinois and Dr. Everett Starcher of Logan, West Virginia.

At one time there were more teachers from that school than any other one in Jackson County. One of my teachers was attorney J. Luther Wolfe. He was one time prosecuting attorney of Mason County. Another one, Fred Wolfe, was editor of the Mountaineer (newspaper) of Ripley until his death. Also one of my teachers was Dr. Everett Kessell, uncle of the three Kessell doctors mentioned above.

In the Given School we always had first grade certified teachers as there were all the advanced subjects taught. Many of the schools in the county didn't have all subjects.

Now as to what we did for a good time: one Friday after recess in the afternoon of each month we would have a spelling match. Two of the best scholars were selected by the teacher to choose up. We would stand along the wall on each side of the room. The teacher would pronounce the words. As we missed we would take our seats. The last one spelled down was the side that won. Once each month there would be a spelling match at other schools, as many schools as were near enough would go. Best spellers from each school would spell.

Then another thing we would have were Literary Societies. At those we would have readings, recitations, little songs such as "The Old Cat Came Back," "The Spider Weaver," "The Old Man Who Chewed His Tobacco and Spit It on His Chin" and many others.

The highlight of the Literary Society was the debate. It was always last. There were two sides of the best students, mostly young men, in the schools. There were three selected as the judges to decide which side won. At the close of the meeting the subject for the next debate was announced. Over weekends we would meet at each others homes and study together whatever we were to put on at the next meeting.

As to how we went, we would walk as many as three miles or more when the roads were good, or ride horses. The horses were broken to carry double, some big draft horses would carry three but the little riding horse just double. When there was snow we would go in sleds and sleighs.

Schools were only five months then. Schools were out while the weather was yet bad. Our father, Alexander C. Carney, was our teacher until spring came. He would give us our assignments and hear us recite every day. He was a teacher when young. Others who were out for higher education did the same." Submitted by Judy Keefer Matheny, Warren D. Keefer, II

HEMLOCK SCHOOL

The old school house by the side of the road. The Hemlock school house is still in use and is one hundred years old. The Jackson County Board of Education bought the land in 1890.

This is a letter from one of the teachers, Dot Rector. "William, I taught at Hemlock two terms — 1947 and 1948. Several years ago when one room schools were numerous in Jackson County, one of the better ones was Hemlock School near Flatwood. At that time some of the young families in the area preferred to have their children go to a local school, while the upper grades went by bus to Ripley or Ravenswood. While I was there I taught first through the fifth grades. Hemlock School was sponsored by a Women's Club in New Jersey. They wanted pictures of each child and their sizes. Each holiday, they would send gifts to the children and things we could use in the classroom. During my first term, 1947, the Board of Education built a kitchen in one corner. It contained a hot plate, sink and cooking utensils, dishes and silverware. I just served one hot dish with what ever they brought from home. Often the home room mothers would bring a big pot of soup or some other hot dish to go with our food. When we had a program for the public we would get permission from the Church just above the road from the school house to have the program up there, so there would be more seats and a piano. The children and their parents always gave their full support to all school activities." signed Dot Rector

I will add that since they discontinued school there, in the early '50s, we have leased the building from the Jackson County Board of Education for a Community Building. It is used regularly for 4-H meetings, family reunions, community gatherings, and a voting place. It has also been a school bus shelter for all of my children and grandchildren.

Hemlock School, 1989

My wife, Frances Lucille Bourgeois, went to school here in 1937. Lucille has been a 4-H Leader for 34 years and is still active in 4-H and Home Makers Work in the community.

KENNA AND GARNES SCHOOLS

The first Kenna School was located on Route 34 near the present Warren Chapel Church. The original building was a log structure and was destroyed by fire. It was replaced by a one room clap-board building. This school was closed in 1933 due to the small enrollment and the students were transferred to the Garnes School.

The Garnes School was located below Kenna near Pleasant Valley Road. The Garnes School was a one room, one story building, however about 1914 a second story was added. It was one of the few two room schools in the county at that time. School terms were short, consisting of three or four months in the middle of the winter. Some children compensated for the brief terms by attending until they were 17 or 18 years of age. High school to most students was unheard of at that time and place.

Garnes School, ca. 1942

Normal school sessions were held at Garnes School during summer breaks. These classes were for students to receive a teacher's certification upon completion of the term.

In 1942, a new four room Kenna School was opened at the present site with an enrollment of 111. Students from the Garnes School were transferred to the new school. The teachers for that year were Estel Simmons, Principal; Margaret Greene and Eunice Harpold. The following year all four rooms were used with an enrollment of 127. In 1950 two additional rooms were added making it a six room school.

In 1960, construction began on a new modern complex of school buildings which exists today serving grades K-5 with an enrollment of 285 students and a staff of 35 professional and service personnel. Submitted by Dallas W. Skeen

LEROY GRADE SCHOOL

Leroy Grade School opened in 1898 for its first term of school with both rooms well filled. It was the first of its kind near about, so it attracted many older students from surrounding neighborhoods.

Martha Sayre was the first teacher of the senior room — I don't remember who the primary teacher was. July 2, 1899 was Graduation Day for 30 students, after two years school work with Martha Sayre instructing.

The graduates were: Ada Hutchinson, Allie Spicer, Bud Hartly, Blanche Buchanan, Cora Hutchinson, Charley Mason, Clarence Knotts, Daisy Mason, Delbert Cole, Daisy Cain, Effie Hess, Ernest Fetty, Flossie Cole, Frank Tatterson, Florence Nuzem, Howard Tatterson, Hattie Nuzem, Maggie Price, Mable Ruble, Maud Cole, Mary Walters, Numan Walters, Ona Ruble, Ora Spicer, Rosa Price, Sell Curry, Verda Knotts, Van Arnold and Wesley Roach.

On Graduation Day or the last day of school, a group picture of the entire school and the two teachers were taken. Martha Sayre gave each graduate a copy of the picture along with a presentation card with her picture and the names of each graduate listed on it. All these graduates are in the picture along with the younger students from the primary room.

Leroy Grade School

My mother was very proud to have been a member of the first graduating class of the new school. My mother, Maggie Price (Shields) and her sister, Rosa Price (Harris), both graduates, are pictured in the first row of the standing students. Their brother William Price, primary class, is seated among the primary students. They are the three eldest children of Henry C. and Delia Price. They lived on Rush Run.

Delbert Cole and his wife Cora Hutchinson were among the graduates and are in the picture. The Coles lived for many years in Ravenswood, where Delbert was a banker. They are the parents of Robert Cole, longtime owner and manager of JCo Lumber Co., of Ravenswood and Ripley.

It's been many years since I have heard my parents discuss the students who are in the picture. I believe Flossie and Maud Cole were sisters to Delbert. I have met Delbert and Cora Cole and I knew Howard Tatterson when I was young. Frank Tatterson was his brother.

I believe Frank Spicer, another graduate, lived his entire life in the area, near the school.

They continued to have class in the Leroy Grade School building until it was discontinued, in 1947. After which the building stood many years empty. The children are now bussed to Gilmore School, at Sandyville.

The building was finally torn down by Clair Hill, in 1985, since it was deteriorating. Submitted by Darlie Ledbetter

LIBERTY SCHOOL

The first school at Toppins Grove was located on the Harry Boso property, along the Little Pond Creek Road, in Grant District. Some of the teachers at the old school were: Alice Cather, Fred Smith, Clayton Pilchard, Robert King, Wilma Howard, Ester Barnes, Everett Rawson, Wesley Stephens, Cassel Hale and Thad Farnsworth. Children of the following families attended the old school in the 1920s: George Morehouse, Dick Morehouse, Bob Morehouse, William Kimes, William Lambert, George Slaven, Nate Boso, Thad Farnsworth, Frank Pifer, Will Lane, and Charley Lane. This school closed when a new one was built on the William Lambert property in 1929. Pete and Hazel Slaven now own the land where the first school was located.

George Cox and Ulysses Talbott built the second school near the junction of the Little Pond Creek Road and Claylick Road. At the time of construction, Everett Rardin, Philip Miihlbach, Frank Conner and Charley Conner were serving on the Board of Education. Teachers at the new school were: George Kelbaugh, Alice DePue, Roland Haught, Betty White, Russell White, Ann Howell, Jim Jarrett, Jess Jarrett, Delbert Rardin and Jess Flinn. Children of the following families attended the school: Charley Kimes, Ott White, William Lambert, Harmon Reed, Floyd Rawson, Bob Clem, Jim Clem, Everett Rardin, William Smith, Fred Joy, Cliff Milhoan, Bill King, Henry Shafer, Chester Kieffer, and Pete Slaven.

Liberty, the last remaining one-room school in Grant District, was closed about 1960. The school went back to the landowner, Ira and Dora (Lambert) Slaven. Gene and Patty Slaven obtained the property and converted the school into a home. Submitted by Hazel (Lambert) Slaven

21 was a one room school house. There were no hot lunches and drinking water was carried from a house close by. There were two out houses and heat was supplied from a pot-belly stove filled with coal which was hauled in by truck from a coal mine, near Charleston. For sports, the students played baseball and dodgeball. In the winter time, they enjoyed sleigh riding, bringing their own home-made wood sleds. There are many happy memories of that old school house! Submitted by Frank J. Moore

LOCKHART SCHOOL 1929-1930

Lockhart was a one room school with 37 students. One teacher taught all eight grades from nine o'clock to four in the afternoon, with one hour for lunch and two 15 minute recesses. Students carried lunches from home and water was carried from a well close by. At Christmas time we had a program with Santa Claus. At the end of the year we had field day competing against other grade schools. In 1924, Lockhart received a large banner that all were proud of, even years later.

MORNING STAR SCHOOL

In 1876, land was obtained from Israel Nesselroad for the purpose of constructing a schoolhouse on Meathouse Fork, in Grant District. It was located about a half-mile from the Little Sandy Road. Chris Nesselroad was a teacher there for many years. Some other teachers were: Ramona Rowley, Grace McKown, Carroll Derenberger, Israel Nesselroad, Nelle Farnsworth, Pearl Battin, Sam Safreed, Jim Jarrett, Walter Lemaster and Otmer Kelbaugh.

The photograph was taken in 1908 at the Morning Star School and includes: Delma Smith, Lizzie Nesselroad, Clayton Lange, Is Nesselroad, Mollie Argabrite, Margaret Flinn, Iva Nesselroad, Roxie Batten, Lena Argabrite, Virginia Nesselroad, Wesley Howard, Wesley Batten, Evert Hafer, Carrol Derenberger, Bud Smith, Elmer Whitc, Dick Angus, Denzil Derenberger, Joe Argabrite, Charley Nesselroad, Rodney Lange, John Whitc, Wilmer Howard, Charity Batten, Catharine Drenberger, Flossie Smith, Clyde Lange, Oat Flinn, Chub Flinn, Bill Cook, Martin Nesselroad and Russel Flinn. MORNINGSTAR SCHOOL

The Morningstar School was located near Pleasant Ridge in Ravenswood District not far from the Wirt County line. Some people in the area called it the Balderson School. One of the school buildings here was built from the lumber which had been from the dismantled Negro School building on Little Sandy Road. There had probably been a log school here before that time. The last school building was constructed in the early 1930s by Charley Wilson and Logan Beymer. When the school was permanently closed in the late 1930s, the same men tore down the building and took the lumber to Parkersburg to be used in a house.

Some of the teachers were: Ray Palmer, Harry Palmer, Clara Palmer, Minnie Robbins, Nettie Thomas, Walter Cline, Gertrude Campbell and Sumpter Archer. In the 1920s some of the families who attended here were: Palmers, Pursleys, Baldersons, Wells, Cheuvronts, VanFossons, Buchannons and Smiths. Submitted by Glen VanFosson

MOUNTAIN FLOWER SCHOOL

About ten years after Appomattox the time had come to put the War into the history books. To build a new one room school was paramount to the community. Land was deeded for the life of the school by Lewis F. and Sarah Parsons, a life lasting approximately 60 years.

It was situated equidistant between two Methodist churches in more or less neutral territory. The division of North and South is reflected notably in the church cemeteries. In the Pleasant Hill Cemetery rests Brooks Kessel and Henry Stout of the 17th Virginia "Wildcat Cavalry." In the Foster Chapel Cemetery are buried Allen Robinson and James Williams — Union men until the day they died.

The building was a replica of hundreds of other one room schools nationwide. Almost square, the interior was painted green — a color supposedly easy on the eyes. Inside the front wall from the door to the corner was a fine slate blackboard and chalk tray.

The furnishings were rows of double desks, shelves behind the door for dinner pails, a common water pail and dipper, a corner cabinet for the meager school library and occupying the center of the room a pot bellied stove sitting firmly in a square sand filled box.

The outside painted white was distinguished by a beautiful bell tower atop the roof to call the students, ranging in age from five to 21, to classes. At times it was rung to bring to attention the community for good news or bad.

Mountain Flower School

One joyous bell ringing was the night of November 11, 1918 when news of the Armistice Signing to end World War I came over the party line. It was rung all night by willing hands and happy young people. One of their own, John Wesley Frey would come home safely from France. The teacher that year was Oliver D. Kessel.

As time went by improvements were made — oil lamps around the walls, American and Stat flags over the blackboard, pictures of Washington Crossing the Delaware, Christ in the Temple, and New England Poets adorned the walls. Also, of memory was a huge and much used Webster's Dictionary. In time the green paint vanished under a coating of cream and buff color. During the regime of W. Perry Pinnell curtains adorned the small paned windows.

Being a community center the building was also used for extra-curricular activities such as pie and box socials, spelling bees, meetings of the Literary Society where weighty subjects were debated by parents and students. There were always programs to celebrate Thanksgiving and Christmas. In time 4-H meetings were added to the list of community activities. Mountain Flower was among the first to organize a 4-H club. No term of school was ended until the last day's big basket dinner. Even the mailman, Mr. Puckett, on Route 2 out of Ripley, always managed to be there for dinner that day.

The generations of children starting their first day of school were admonished without fail, "If you get a whipping at school you will get another when you get home." They were also expected to not lie, cheat or steal. Learning the basic three R's was top priority.

Discipline then and now are vastly different. The term that the late Dr. C. Royall Kessel had the opportunity to educate the students, he arrived the first day with half a dozen supple hickory switches. He placed them behind a picture above the blackboard for all to see — a warning. In due time the school bully got his attention and the young man got the benefit of the hickory tea. It is not known if his father later took him to the woodshed. However, this episode was a great deterrent to crime not lost on the very young in attendance.

This school was blessed with first rate teachers. Countless students became teachers or used teaching as a stepping stone to other professions.

Some of those who chose teaching as a life's work were W. Perry Pinnell, Blanche Williams, Fay French Bowles, Flora Parsons Hoult and Lola French Stone. In fact, at any given term the teacher and generally all or most of the students were related. Brother or sister returned to teach younger siblings. For the life of the school it was not only a community affair but a family one as well.

It is not known the identity of the first teacher but the last term was taught in 1933-34 by Samuel D. Kessel, a former student. Those he taught were swept up in World War II. They all survived into the Atomic and Space Age. Some may see the 21st Century. The building no longer sets by the road but the principles learned there are being passed to future generations.

From the good old days of perhaps 70-plus years ago a picture gives us an idea of those by-gone days. The late Dr. C. Royall Kessel was the teacher in charge.

Of this group at least ten taught school, about half of those were lifetime teachers. Wesley Frey went to World War I. Russel Kessel became a doctor, and others became farmers or went into industry and the business world with equal success.

While Nancy Isabel Skillinger was a teacher, there were more Milhoans than any other families in her school. At one time, there was a two-room school here. F.L. Flesher assisted in erecting the first school after free schools were established.

Teachers from 1933-1946 were: Lettie Gillaspie, Clyde Hupp, Bert Stallings, George Lee, Gay Frashier and Mildred Kirkhart. McKINLEY SCHOOL

Teaching school is an experience that could last one day, one week, one year or a lifetime. At the tender age of 18, I was initiated into the joys, trials and tribulations of this unique vocation. I received a letter from our school board which I opened with mixed emotions. It stated, "You have been selected to be the teacher at McKinley School for the coming year, etc." This was a one room school located in a remote section of the Jackson County hills, on a Secondary road. Later, much to my chagrin, I discovered that in the dead of winter the only way to reach my school was on foot.

I packed by belongings, and my dad, wishing to further my career, loaded me into our black, top-heavy, Model T Ford, and off we went in search of McKinley School, which we found without too much trouble. A family who lived near by, Mr. and Mrs. Ike Smith, rather reluctantly agreed to let me board with them for $25 per month. They became my "family away from home" for awhile, and I'll always remember them.

That first day of school will always stand out in my memory. I arrived early and met my 15 eager students, who were all ages, grades and sizes. After finding a desk to fit each one, I rang the bell and our day began. The first thing on my schedule was the Lord's Prayer and, by then, I was so nervous that I almost forgot it. However, things fell into place, as they generally do, and I made it through the first day.

Elaine Rowley and Isabelle Sargent

The long autumn days were brightened by the scenic beauty around us. The daily changing of the bright leaves was as though mother nature was wrapping us in a rainbow of colors. On one of those alluring days, our Superintendent of Schools, Mr. Reuben Kiser, paid us a kindly visit. No one knew he was coming until he entered the door. At first, his face wore the melancholy expression of one who traveled a wild and bleak road alone. However, a smile brightened his broad, thin-lipped face when he saw my energetic students and our colorful classroom.

He conversed with all of us and, on leaving, remarked, "Everything looks fine except that scrap of paper under the huge, pot-bellied stove!" I didn't worry too much about that unscen wad of paper. I had too many other worries at that time.

We lost the fading beauty of summer's bloom, and soon the multicolored leaves were whipped from the trees by the raw and biting November winds. Soon the trees grew naked and grotesque, and the gray rocks slept like scaly monsters on the rugged hills. Autumn was passing, and soon the white mantle of "Old Man Winter" was upon us. My thinly-clad students crowded around the fiery, red-hot stove to keep warm, it's glow hurting our eyes. We placed our seats around it like an amphitheater, and that's how we studied and lessons were done.

Outside, we would have periods of sunshine, and then blowing snow would swirl down and cover the earth with a white mantle. When it thawed, we waded through a sea of mud. The hills grew dark ugly, and the hungry birds flew by looking for seeds, chirping their sad winter notes. Looking from the windows at this barren, desolate scene, I whispered a small prayer—"Lord, take me home." I now knew why everybody worked so hard to prepare for winter. My last thoughts before sleep were of the fable of the "Ant and the Grasshopper."

NORMAL SCHOOLS

Normal schools had for their purpose the training of teachers. They originated in Prussia, like the kindergarten, but it was the French who gave them their lasting name to this new institution, the normal school (ecole normale). On July 8, 1839, the first normal school opened in the United States at Lexington, Massachusetts.

Jackson County has a historical record for the number of teachers it furnished the profession. In 1903, the legislature passed a law that established the uniform examination for the certification of teachers. The examinations were prepared by the State Department of Education and held on the same days in every county.

The uniform examinations created a need for students to prepare for the test. A.S. and C.W. Lee opened a normal school in Ripley which attracted hundreds of students from many counties over the state. In 1912, it had an enrollment of 202 students of which 69 were from Jackson County and 133 were from 23 other counties of the state. Of the 69 students from Jackson County only one is still living (1990), Dr. Gay H. Duke of Ripley. A few of the counties represented were Wyoming, Mineral, Doddridge, Monongalia, Hancock, Lincoln and Wetzel. Tuition was $10.00 per term and board and room was $5.00 per week. The terms varied in length from ten to twelve weeks, or a student could enroll for half a term, five or six weeks. A.S. Lee published a series of 11 books which condensed the subject matter that was taught. They included penmanship, orthography and theory and art of teaching. An entire set could be purchased for $3.25 (1909). Classes were held in the elementary school building.

Ripley Normal School

Gradually, the emphasis upon examinations was shifted by certifying teachers by approved normal schools, colleges and universities due to higher standards and Jackson County was permitted to have one normal training high school which was for the granting of college credit equal to the first year in college (16 hrs.). In 1922-26, Ravenswood High School added the 13th year which included normal training for teachers. It was under the leadership of Elmer H. Flinn, who was the principal of the school for 30 years. The legislature abolished this type of normal school after 1926.

Compiled by Dr. Delmer K. Somerville, Ed. D., by personal interview with Dr. Gay H. Duke and the assistance of James C. Kessel, who furnished a scrap book containing a newspaper clipping about the normal school in 1912 which belonged to his sister, Alberta Kessel Hutchison.

Charlie Pilchard. One acre of ground was bought from the John Gorrell farm for 40 dollars with the understanding that when the school was closed, the land would go back to John Gorrell for 40 dollars. The school closed in 1944 and the land went back to John Gorrell.

The school was named after Ona Tumlin, daughter of Everett Tumlin. Charlie Pilchard stayed at the Tumlin home while building the school. Hugh Flinn now owns the property where the school was located. Jess Wright, of Murfreesville, was the first teacher. Other teachers included: Joe Cooper, Thad Farnsworth, Georgia Kelbaugh, Anna Swain, Rose Swain, Marshall Jarrett, Roy Kirkhart and Alma Anthony.

Between the years 1915-1920, some of the students included: Harry Gorrell, Edison Tumlin, Curtis Tumlin, Grace Tumlin, Johnny Tumlin, Della King, Benny Foggins, Oscar Gorrell, Armour Wheaton, Cletus Wheaton, Raymond Michael, Harold Michael and Ida Thomas.

Some of the students a few years later were: Geraldine Cather, Mabel Gorrell, Troy Gorrell, Don Gorrell, Alonzo Gorrell, Violet Gorrell, Orvetta Cox, Mary Cox, Withrow Cox, Herald Cox, Mildred Gorrell, Virginia Gorrell, Opal Gorrell, June Gorrell, Bell Gorrell, Laura Bigley, Virginia Staats, Orville Staats, Okley Ellis, Grace Tumlin, Alice Gorrell, Denzil Gorrell, Alice Lee, Bill Lee, Vinnie Staats, Burley Staats and Thelma Staats.

PROVIDENCE SCHOOLS

The Providence Schools were located in Grant District, about two miles south of the Wirt County line, along Route 21. The first school located in this area was a log structure. The following was written by H. D. Somerville and published in the Jackson Herald, July 7, 1950: "In 1858-59, Albert Lockhart taught school at Providence Chapel. Pupils attending this school were: James Sheppard, Tom McPherson, Jess McPherson, Manda McPherson, Jasper McPherson, John Full, Sarah Full, Webster Full, Jesse Full, Harriet Grant, Francis Grant, Will Stephens, Malinda Roush, Elmira Somerville, Isabell Stephens, Susan Somerville, Amos Lockhart, Sam Somerville, Sarah Lockhart, Lafe Somerville, Susan Lockhart, Ellen Somerville, Samuel Lockhart, William Somerville, Isaac Lockhart, Frank Somerville, Clarisa Springston, Virginia Somerville, James Springton, Caroline Somerville, Robert Somerville, Edmond Somerville, Monroe Somerville, Caroline Sheppard, George McFee and Jonathan Lockhart. Clarisa and Joanne Springton both stayed with their aunt, Mrs. Andy Somerville, while attending this school. Miss Emily B. Montgomery taught at this place 1862-63. In 1864-65, Albert taught another term. The pupils were not listed among his papers, but the patrons were as follows: James Somerville, Jackson Somerville, John Nicholson, James Harris, S.K. Morehead, Jackson Full, Andy Somerville, Ab Full, John Somerville, Isaac Lockhart, Aaron Cheuveront, George McFee. Other teachers were: Lemuel Cheuveront, Abe Gandee, George Lent 1867-68; William Dent, Mr. Cora, Levi Stephens and John Kerr. . . In 1870-71, Grant Myers had a contract to erect a new frame school house nearby. The Methodists continued to hold meetings in the log building until 1888-1889.

The second school was built a few hundred yards away from the location of the present building. It was used until another building was constructed by Hamilton Blair, on land obtained from the McPherson family, in 1915-16. Sam Blair was one of the teachers in the 1920s. Some of the teachers after 1933 were: Ray Palmer, Tracy

Kittle, Church Balis, Otho Clem, John Bachtel, Charles Wilson, Marie Hall, and Martin Archer.

The photograph, furnished by Ireta (Holliday) Sayre, shows the students at Providence in 1945. First row: Larry Braniff, James Wines, (?), Rollin Kittle, Paul Braniff, Evelyn Crum, Ireta Holliday and Pauline Braniff. Second row: James Braniff, Patty Corns, Charlotte Kittle, Ellen Archer, Willidena Knopp and Charles Wines. Third row: Beulah Holliday, Norma Braniff, (?), James Cooper, Barney Cooper, James Kittle and (?).

Classes were held at Providence until 1951. The property reverted back to the landowner, Charley and Edna (McPherson) Thomas. They later sold the building and some land to Olen and Lila Thomas who remodeled the school into living quarters. Submitted by Lionel Thomas

RARDIN SCHOOL

The Rardin School, located on Little Sandy Road in Grant District, was about two miles from Sherman. The Board of Education purchased land from William L. and Mary A. Safreed on October 1, 1885. Some of the students were: John, Jess, Carl, Eleanor and Anna Lou Howell; Gail Baker; Jennie, Edith, Harley, Ellen and James Bunner; Virginia, Helen and Thelma Bunner; Elmus Rardin; Grace and Merle Funk; Helen, Mildred, Homer and Edwin Safreed; Harold, Virgil, Oncie, Aulene and Lorene Archer; Clinton, Clifford, Milan, Roy, Hattie, Cora and Francis Rardin; Isaac and Grace Cooper; Ray, Grace, Clair, Ora and Bert Barnhart; Clifford Bogard; Fred and Virgil Black; Mae and Carl Safreed; Darrell, Claude, Jessie, Mamie and Erma Rector; Reuben, Wilmer, Bertha and Elsie Bates; Rodney and Clyde Lange; Brady, Ethel, Lizzie, Mae, Blanche, Alva, William and Paul Lindamood; Freda, Edra, Lena, Arlie, Olden; and Merle Barber.

After the school was closed in the early 1930s, H.E. and Hazel Bunner purchased the school building and lot in 1933. They used the school building for a residence and finally sold it to Harry and Leona Leonard in 1945. It was extensively remodeled by the Leonard family. The high ceilings were lowered and a basement was excavated by using dynamite, since the area under the school was solid rock. Mr. and Mrs. Ray Leonard currently live there and have built an addition onto the house.

RAVENSWOOD HIGH SCHOOL

From the beginning Ravenswood made opportunities for education of its citizens a priority. The first school house within the present limits of Ravenswood was a log cabin built in the early 1840s by Ephraim Wells. Teachers were paid $12 a month, and pupils were required to attend 16 weeks each year. This building was soon outgrown and school moved to the "Old Institute," a building also used for a town hall and religious purposes.

In 1858, William P. Hamon from New York built what was known as Union Academy. It opened with two teachers in 1859. Until 1864 schools were funded by subscriptions from interested persons.

In 1870, the Ravenswood Independent School District was established, and in 1883 a levy was laid to erect a new school building. The members of the school board gave personal checks to buy land for the new school until funds were available. On this site the "1887 Building," which was to serve as the first high school, was erected.

1887 Building

A two-year high school course was offered in 1890. In 1892 it was extended to three years and in 1899 to four. Students graduated each year except in 1892 and 1899 when the course was extended.

Just after Thanksgiving in 1921 the high school moved from the "1887 Building" to a new brick structure on Sycamore Street. The new building included a room for manual training. This class saved school funds by constructing tables, shelves, cabinets, and gymnasium equipment. The first band was organized in 1927, and the first yearbook, the Nautilus, was published in 1921.

The depression affected RHS much as it did the remainder of the country. In some years school terms were shortened because funds were not available. However, legislation was passed during the '30s that insured a more stable financial base and school terms were guaranteed.

Concerns with the war monopolized the thinking of many students in the 1940s. Students often left school as soon as age would allow them to join the armed forces. The class of 1945 dedicated a plaque with 180 names to honor the students and faculty from RHS who had served during the war.

Typical of the community involvement that has always been important were the $5 Banquets that began in 1948. When there was not enough money for football uniforms, a group of businessmen and the football coach decided to raise the money by having a dinner. All food was donated and everyone — speakers, cooks, waiters, dishwashers, and representatives of the press — bought $5 tickets. Their goal was to raise $500 but $950 was raised, and the banquet became an annual affair throughout the 1950s.

In 1954 with the ground-breaking for the reduction and fabrication plants at Kaiser Aluminum, the community and the high school began to deal with the changes that occur when population increases drastically over a short period of time. Crowded classrooms and limited facilities meant a building program.

Ravenswood High School

In 1961 the present high school building on Plaza Drive was completed. As the population increased problems of overcrowding and shortage of funds continued. Once again the community rallied to the cause, and the Ravenswood Education Foundation was organized. With these funds additional teachers were hired plus supplements were paid to teachers. Funds were also used for equipment and library books.

The largest graduating class was 219 students in 1975. Crowded conditions were finally alleviated in 1978 when seventh and eighth graders moved to the new middle school. The RHS campus grew with the construction of the Physical Education Building in 1978 and the auditorium in 1979.

The football field is named in honor of Elmer H. Flinn who served as principal for approximately 25 years in the early 1900s.

In 1973 the bell from the top of the original high school was erected on a platform on the north side of the school providing a link from the past to the present.

RED BRUSH SCHOOLS

The Red Brush vicinity is located near Nesselroad Run, about half way between Medina and Lockhart, in Grant District. There was once a log school, near the McPherson Cemetery, on the hill between the two branches of Red Brush above the Hayward farm. Lewis Warth was a teacher here. Another school was at the mouth of Red Brush, in a log cabin, on what was later Squire Robinson's farm. Early teachers there were: Rev. Robert Fox, Mr. Casto, Kate Warden, Mr. Caldwell and "Tickie" Hall. Pupils included children of: Dave and Sim Somerville, Reece Barnhart, William Powers, the Alexanders and others. In 1870, a frame school house was built just above the Robinson home. Teachers were: William Cheuvront, P.H. Slaven, Charles Nicholson, Cornelius Archer, Alonzo Areher and others. (The preceding is from information written by H.D. Somerville.)

In 1901, another school house was erected on Albert Lockhart's farm on the other side of the creek on the main Nesselroad public road. Students at this school in 1912 were: Elsa Spear, Lucy Lockhart, Bird McBride, Earl Thompson, Martin McBride, Elda Peters, Okey Thompson, Eva Spear, Myrtle McBride, Barbara Nesselroad, Ralph Archer, Ginevra Archer, Minnie Peters, Ila Franklin, Nelta McPherson, Edythe Morrison, Dale Nesselroad, Mancil Morrison, Harald Peters, Elza Thompson, Maude Spear, Muhrl McBride, Ray Alexander, Janet Archer, Marie Archer, Raymond Morrison and Henry Morrison. RIPLEY HIGH SCHOOL

Ripley High School came into legal existence during the early summer of 1913 when the voters of the Independent District of Ripley established it at a special election held for that purpose. The school opened in one room of the graded school building in the month of September following, with an enrollment of 23 students, most of whom resided in the town of Ripley, with A.S. Lee as the first principal. He remained in charge of the school until the following February, 1914, when he resigned, and Lewis H. Miller was elected in his stead. The following year, Mr. Lee again took charge of the school but, before the school year expired, the high school had practically gone out of existence and was combined with the graded school course in order not to lose its legal right to exist. During the school year 1916-17, the high school practically lost its identity as an educational institution because it had meager support from outside sources and but little interest from within. However, during the summer of 1917, school spirit passed through a rejuvenation process and a second attempt was made to again set the school upon its feet. Lewis H. Miller was employed as Principal and Miss Marie Sayre as Assistant; new equipment was purchased, a chemical laboratory was installed, the library supplemented and additional quarters provided. Under this regime the school was given a second class rating by the State Department of Schools and local funds were supplemented by State Aid. It was then that the large room in the graded school building was partitioned and made into two rooms for the use of classes.

The school was yet to see trying times in that World War I was on and demands were being made in every direction, both upon the teaching force and upon those who were bearing the financial burden of the institution.

In the fall of 1918, Mr. York was employed as principal but had barely started work with a splendid enrollment when an epidemic of influenza spread over the county completely demoralizing the school. The health authorities closed its doors and the time of suspension was so long that

Mr. York was released by the Board of Education in order to procure employment elsewhere. Thus, the school remained in a dormant state until January 1, 1919, when Lewis H. Miller as principal and Marie Sayre and May Parsons-Mooney again opened school with a complete year's work ahead of them to be finished by June 30 of that year. By teaching from early morning until late in the evening, including Saturdays and all holidays, they were able to perform the task. That year the State Department of Schools gave the school a first grade rating and furnished State Aid upon that basis.

It was soon seen that the old building would not provide quarters for both the high school and the grades; thus a new task confronted the residents of the District. Money was limited and nothing short of a bond issue would suffice, but nothing could be done before another school year. The attic of the old building was converted into a chemical laboratory and library and almost all the second floor of the building was used for classes.

In the fall of 1919, the school opened with Ben W. Miller as principal, Marie Sayre, Herbert P. Long, Ruth S. Souder, Edna Wood-Miller and Helen Hubbard-Caldwell as assistants. It was during this term of school that a bond issue of $18,000.00 was voted for the construction of the new high school building, with 20 dissenting votes against the proposition. This amount was supplemented by a special levy authorized by the Legislature upon a petition representing 90 percentum of the voters in the District.

In the fall of 1920, Mr. V.R. McKnight was engaged by the Board of Education as principal with Marie Sayre, Constance Smith, Anna K. High and Cora Lively as his assistants. Mr. McKnight died during the month of December while on his Christmas vacation and Miss Marie Sayre became principal, carefully and skillfully directing the destinies of the institution through a trying period. During that year many of the classes were conducted in the old Morrison Store Building on Court Street while the laboratory work was carried on in the graded school building.

At the opening of the next term, almost a new faculty appeared on the scene. Julian L. Archer, one of the first students of the high school in 1913-1914, was selected as principal, and Marie Sayre, Ruth DeNormandie, Conza Meathrell and Cora Lively, his assistants.

During the time covered by this short history, the school had graduated 62 young men and women. Many of these had entered institutions of higher learning while others embarked upon their careers in one field or another. Enrollment increased from 23 to more than 100 with a large number coming from the country. This showed the benefit of the school reaching those heretofore prevented from attending school beyond the grades.

During the month of June, 1921, work was commenced on the new high school building and the same was completed during the month of September, 1922. Thus for the first time could Ripley rightfully boast of a real high school. The cost of the building proper amounted to the sum of $31,000.00, with all the furnishings in addition. In the construction of the building, it often became necessary to raise funds beyond the expectation of the Board of Education, but at that moment practically all the business men of the town came to the rescue and provided the means by discounting joint notes for the benefit of the Board. These were later taken up by the Board and indebtedness cancelled. While we cannot name all those responsible for the founding of Ripley High School, this history would not be complete without acknowledging the Board composed of C.H. McKown, President, T. Clayton Parsons and J.E. Carson, members. Upon them fell the task of providing for the high school and this they accomplished in a remarkable manner. Even though they were confronted with almost insuperable opposition at times, they stood the test and performed their duties well.

And so it was begun. It was soon to be known by educators that with increased enrollment and expressed interest, additional classroom space and curriculum was fast becoming necessary. The 1930-40s brought about changes in building structure, added Vocational Agriculture, Home Economics instructors and a marching band. Football was introduced with the team and fans traveling west of Ripley for games played on a field commonly known as a "cow pasture." World War II interrupted this period with some teachers and students answering the call to serve their country. Supplies were scarce, some items rationed. The impact definitely limited the pace that had been set. The graduating class of 1945 could not have their yearbook printed, thus leaving a space in the chain of history.

Once again it would appear that the high school could not provide the space and needs for its students. Teachers, parents, and board members were united in their cause but divided in their efforts. Financial problems prevailed throughout the county. The Greer property, situated on Old 21 had been acquired and was the future site of Ripley High School. A bond levy was needed and the community was called upon to rally support but was met with opposition. The football stadium was used in late 1940 with construction beginning on the new high school facility and occupancy in

Ripley High School

1951-1952. Moving forward from "Old Ripley High," with the wisdom of educators J.E. Harrison, Principal, Elizabeth McGrew, Janet Riley, Raymond Parsons, Lucille Castrop, Marion Parsons, D. Wade Kessel, Morley Parsons, Ida Kathryn Johnson, (to name a few) and graduating 31 classes was quite a thrust into the future. Mid '50s brought about the greatest growth when Kaiser Aluminum made the decision to locate its facility in Jackson County. The school system experienced a sizeable increased enrollment with new families moving into the area. Again, demands were put upon the local people. However, with additional tax income from industrial and residential expansion, Ripley High School met all student needs with an added challenge.

Our present administration with Jack Wiseman, principal, and a staff of 68 professionals and 17½ service personnel, has directed students that have achieved outstanding recognition in academic and athletic competition and proudly boast an undefeated football season for 1989. Today is a computerized society and Ripley High School is on its electronic beam.

Major construction the last five years consist of a new music complex, all-weather track, main office renovation, new entrance and paved parking area. Total enrollment for 1989-1990 is 936 with 244 seniors. Scholarship money available in 1988 and 1989 was $500,000.00 each year.

It was written in "The Pioneer" — R.H.S. publication of 1922, by Homer Young, that, "Ripley High School is the greatest institution of our town even though its influence is just beginning to be felt. It has weathered its hardest storms and has stood, but the most lasting evidence of its existence will be in the work of those who pass from its halls to enter into the world of work and strife. May each perform his duty well and perform some service for mankind that would not have been done had not such an individual lived and learned."

SINAIVILLE SCHOOL

Classes at the Sinaiville School, Statts Mills, were first held in a log structure which was also used part-time as a church. Among the earliest students, about 1835, were Nicholas and George Casto, Charles H., Jesse, Jacob H., James M., James C., Joel, and David G. Casto.

This school burned about 1905, and the students went to school in a big barn on the Dr. Virgil L. Casto farm until 1907, when the last school was built, a white frame structure, adjoining the Dr. Casto farm.

SUNSHINE SCHOOL

The Sunshine School was located on Skull Run, in Grant District, near the Ebenezer Baptist Church. The schoolhouse was built in 1906, by Clark White and sons, John and Fred. The land for the school was from the Charles Burdette farm and the playground area from the Willie Buffington farm. Mr. White named the school Sunshine because the sun would shine on them all day while they were building it.

The teachers at Sunshine included: Delmar Delaney, Alice Cather, Edith Robinson, Earnest Swain, Jesse Swain, Clay Nohe, Pete Jackson, Gene Milhoan, Mr. Andrews, Mr. Logston, Roy Kirkhart, Thad Farnsworth, Jess Jarrett, Ethel Archer, Gay Frashier, Garnet Boyce and Nola Rowley (and possibly a few early teachers whose names are unknown). The school was discontinued in 1955 and dismantled in 1964.

Sunshine School, 1939

After the teacher would ring a bell for school to start, each grade would be called one at a time to the front to sit on a long bench for their lessons. Usually the teacher started with first grade and progressed through all eight grades. Coal and wood was burned in a pot belly stove which sat in the middle of the room. Toilet facilities were outside, one for girls and one for boys.

Water was carried from Willie Buffington's well and also from Clara Pifer's well. Two students would go to get the water in a large bucket. It would then be placed in a large stone jar and everyone would drink from the same cup. In later years a well was drilled and a pitcher pump used to obtain the water. At noon and recess, students would play on the rock cliffs and in caves. Other recreation included swinging on grape vines, playing shinney (similar to hockey) and ball games. In the winter months, marbles would be played on the wooden floor which had holes burned in it by a hot poker.

Some of the teachers and students had to walk several miles to school. In the 1940s, Bill Staats and Ulysess Talbott would use a horse and sled to take children to and from school when the snow was deep. Annual box suppers were held to raise money for the school. The school had its own library and two blackboards. One large blackboard was for the taller students and a small one for the little students. School hours were from nine till four o'clock.

My dad, Lloyd Burdette, and my mother, Cora Milhoan Burdette, and all seven of their children attended Sunshine School. Many happy days of childhood were spent there.

TURKEY RUN SCHOOL

The Turkey Run School was in Ravenswood District. It is located approximately two miles up Turkey Run Road which is two miles north of Ravenswood on Rt. 68.

In Minute Book No. 1, at the Jackson County School Board Office in Ripley, W.V., it is recorded, on July 14, 1933, that by a unanimous vote the Turkey Run School was eliminated from the Ravenswood District.

Among the teachers who taught there were: J.W. Howell, Sallie Argabrite, Jessie Alexander, Mable Ford, Dana Woofter, Dallas Woofter, J.D. Cooper, Harry Hall, Howard McGaughy, Harry Howard, George Lee, and Juanita Ables Crow who was the last teacher at the Turkey Run School.

Some of the pupils were: Orland, Mabel, Frances, Alice, Glazier and Pearl Jones, Florence Wetzell, Cleon and Velma Woofter, Marjorie McAtee, Russell Palmer Jr., Ruth Reese, Carl Paxton, Luther Lee, Effie Lee Ball, Cecil, Clair, Lawrence, Persey, Iva Francis, and Russell Bibbee, Jessie and Thomas DeBussy Saffreed, Abe Howard, Audra and Walter Tolley, Alvin and David Taylor, Robert, Helen and Lillian Campbell, and Evelyn, Ruby and Marjorie Palmer.

The school did not have a water well, so the children went with buckets to John Palmer's place and carried water back to school. Most of the children had their own drinking cups and there was a dipper in the bucket. The John Palmer place was across the road from the school, up on the hill, down the hollow ways.

On a geological survey map, Turkey Run School is shown to be in existence in 1908.

The above information was gathered from Jessie Alexander, Earl and Mary Howard, Delta Hafer, Orland Jones, Lacie Lee and Velma Salser. Submitted by Betty Jean Fournery

UNION HIGH SCHOOL

Pictured is Union High School at Cottageville. For years, the only high school in the county was in Ravenswood, then later in Ripley. Many students traveled by train to Ravenswood, and many boarded in the town, Monday through Friday. At that time, the districts had their own Boards of Education, operating under a County superintendent. The money to build Union High School was raised by people in Union district, and construction was begun in 1926.

Fourteen students received their diplomas in the first graduating class in 1929. These students attended their first two years of high school in the large elementary school, located in the center of Cottageville, then moved into the new high school building in 1927.

Union High School

The school served a much needed purpose in rural Union district in that many boys and girls, who might not have attended the distant high schools, were able to attain a high school education closer to their homes. There were four teachers at the school, and the student body numbered 80 in 1938-39. There were 35 students when the County Board of Education closed the school in September, 1944. The students were given the option of attending either Ripley or Ravenswood high schools by agreement with the Board of Education, and this agreement is still in effect with high school students in the district, who would have normally attended the school at Cottageville.

Over the years, the teachers were: Hunter Hardman, Tressie Hacker, Charlotte Muldoon, Betty McGlothlin, Violet Hockenberry, Denzil Jarrett, Lucille Castrup and Dale Hoff.

Several months after the school closed in 1944, the elementary school was closed, and the students were moved to the newly painted and renovated high school building. The building was demolished in 1985, and the remains are covered by a black-top parking lot.

In the 17 years that the school existed, there were only four principals (who were also teachers); Robert Ferguson, C.P. Smith, C. Otis Casto, and Juanita Vineyard. C. Otis Casto was county superintendent when the school closed.

The Union High School Alumna is quite active, and meets for a potluck banquet each Memorial Day Saturday. Submitted by Virginia Hogsett

WILDING SCHOOL

Located at Wilding, in Ravenswood District, the Wilding two-room school was built in the 1890s, on the Francis Marion Stephens property. It also served as a summer school for those adults who wanted to become certified to teach school. Walter Lemaster and James Willard Archer were two instructors who held summer school. After the school was closed in the 1950s, it served as a community building, and continues in that capacity.

Wilding School

Among those who taught at Wilding were: Monnie Carmichael, Zella Howard, Ruth Carmichael, F.L. Shriver, Helen Hupp, Rex Smith, Walter Lemaster, John Bachtel and Dick Lockhart.

Some of the students in the 1920s and following years were: Walter, Ruth, Freda, Emmet, and Francis Hupp (children of Charley Hupp); Harley, Chester, and Violet Shockey (children of Earl Shockey); Juanita, Dorothy and Lawrence Ables (children of Roe Ables); Edwin, Elva, Emma Jean, John, and Evelyn Patterson (children of Lon Patterson); Ruth Carmichael; Leonard and Junior Lemaster (sons of Walter Lemaster); Catherine and Carroll Klein (children of Frank Klein); Eddie, Frank, Kitty, Velma, Jim, and June Britton (children of Bill Britton); Charley, John M., Rodney, Georgia, and Russell Maple (children of George Maple); Milton and Margaret Ellen Lane (children of Jonah Lane); Richard, Warren, and Kathleen Patterson (children of Emmett Patterson); Eivine and Ona Flinn (daughters of Henry Flinn); Wesley Westfall (grandchild of Ike Westfall); Glen, Geraldine, and Bill Ables (children of Frank Ables); Eileen, June and Evelyn Lee Taylor (children of Wilmer Taylor); Rebecca and Henry Cline (children of Chessie Cline); Woodrow Haught (son of C.M. CHURCHES

ANTIOCH CHURCH

The early settlers on the right hand branch of Cow Run worshipped in the log Cherry Grove Church until it was too old to be used. Then they worshipped in the log Antioch and Brown school-houses.

The people became interested in a church building and in 1881 Thomas Hartley deeded a lot between these schools to the following board of trustees: Joshua Wright, James Kerwood and Christopher Hartley for a church building.

Men instrumental in building Antioch Church were Stephen A. Hartley, who hauled the foundation stone. "Fish" Hunt, "Pete" Sayre and others hewed the sills from timber cut on the Abijah Sayre farm, now owned by his great grandson Robert Q. Sayre. Carpenters were Christopher Hartley and Theodore Wright. Hanson Hughes made the roof shingles of yellow poplar and Henry T. Hartley helped roof the church.

The building was dedicated July 29, 1883 by Rev. S. J. Graham, presiding Elder of West Columbia District of the United Brethren Church. The pastor was John W. Martin. Some of the first members were the Wrights, Kerwoods, Hartleys, Sayres, Hunts, Hughes, Smiths, Kings and Shinnis.

For 60 years this building served the community until June 24, 1943 when the cupola of the church was struck by lightning. People of the community gathered quickly and succeeded in saving the furniture but failed to save the building. The furniture was moved to the Antioch school building where they continued to worship. Descendants of the early settlers quickly made plans to rebuild and September 20, 1943 ground was broken for a new building at the same location.

The first worship service in the new building was on Sunday, February 13, 1944 at 10:30 A.M. with Rev. Roy Davis preaching from the theme "Victories of the Christian Faith." The building was officially dedicated on Pentecost Sunday, May 28, 1944, by Rev. E. Ray Cole, Conference Superintendent of the United Brethren Church.

In November 1946 the United Brethren and Evangelical Churches merged and Antioch became Antioch E.U.B. Church. Then in 1968 the

Antioch Church

Evangelical United Brethren and the Methodist Churches joined to become the United Methodist Church. In the 1970s after the death of many of the older people and the younger ones having moved away there ceased to be any services at Antioch. On November 30, 1987 the United Methodist Conference sold the Antioch property to the following trustees: Quentin Sayre, Claude Finch, Jim Crum and Alvin Hunt who plan to reopen the building as the Antioch Community

Church. Submitted by Mrs. Landon (Betty) Hartley

APLIN METHODIST CHURCH

The Aplin Methodist Church at Gay, W.V., is another one of the old Hereford Circuit Appointments. The Aplin Church was organized in 1910. U.S. Edgel was the pastor of Hereford Circuit in 1909-10 and Rev. W.C. Price in 1910-11. Some of the past members were: Mr. and Mrs. Lon Parsons, Mr. and Mrs. Brady Westfall, Mr. and Mrs. Dow Whited, also, Mr. and Mrs. Flao McClain.

Esther (Aplin) Waybright Thomas donated the original land, and the timber for the church that was named for her father William Henry (Billy) Aplin. On November 2, 1914, the sale of this property was recorded in the Jackson Co. Court-house, Ripley, W.V. The trustees at the time were: William Evans, Lon Parsons and J.M. Whited.

Some of the people who helped in the construction of the church building were: Lon Parsons, John Westfall, Bailey Westfall, Charles Patrick, J.M. Whited, Pete Lupardus, Flao McClain, Sank Westfall, William Evans, W.H. Westfall, Lou Westfall, Henderson Patrick and W.H. Waybright. Henderson (Sank) Westfall is said to have done the carpentry on the altar railing. The Aplin Church was dedicated on November 8, 1914. Many of the first members worked on the church long after dark on November 7th to have the church ready on dedication day.

The first one to be buried in the Aplin Church Cemetery was Mr. and Mrs. Bailey Westfall's baby boy, Ray Westfall. Then the little Litton baby.

On June 27, 1972, William Dorsa (a great grandson of William Henry Aplin) and Edith (Thomas) Rogers donated about 27,900 square feet of land more or less, for $1.00 in cash to the Aplin Church. The land was used to extend the church cemetery. On November 23, 1973, William Dorsa and Edith Rogers donated another 8,711 square feet of land more or less, for extending the church cemetery. The trustees at the time were: Orin McClain, Garland Cummings and Roy Stalnaker.

In 1985-86, three rooms were added on to the Aplin Church. These rooms were very much needed for the growing Sunday School classes. The trustees at that time were: Russell Jones, Roy Stalnaker and Junior Westfall.

The present trustees are: Russell Jones, Jimmy Jones and Erman Lupardus. Submitted by Joy A. Rogers

BACHTEL CHAPEL

Bachtel Chapel, near Ripley, had its beginning in 1837, when Joshua Montgomery, Presiding Elder, of United Brethren Scioto Conference of Ohio, held first Quarterly Conference meeting in George Stone's barn on Mill Creek. Peter Appel-man, minister 1837-1840, preached at Stone's and John McKown's homes (McKown lived just across Mill Creek at the mouth of Parchment). It was first called "Stone Appointment." English was spoken at all the meetings but it is said that the majority of the preachers were also versed in Dutch and German.

Members of first class were: George Stone, Lucinda Stone, John McKown, Sarah McKown, Andrew Slaughter and Tabitha Slaughter. Andrew Slaughter was granted license to preach (first license in Conference territory). He was father of Jonah and grandfather of Rev. Fred Slaughter and Rev. W.E. Crall of West Virginia Conference. A log house was built for U.B. Church and school purposes in 1850 below Elias Stone's residence, 1 1/2 miles west of Ripley on what is now US Route 33.

In 1869, a church building was erected, just west of where Appalachian Power Company building now stands, and named Bachtel Chapel in honor of Rev. Jacob Bachtel, who was pastor. John Ferguson (father of Armor Ferguson), — Barnhart, Elias Stone, George Stone and others were responsible for erecting this church.

Among the early pastors before the construction of the building were Reverend William Miles and Reverend John Perry. At that time and for quite a few years after the building was finished, Bachtel Chapel was still on the Scioto of Ohio Circuit.

Bachtel Chapel

Some of the men who preached at this church either as regular pastors or presiding elders were: Bishop William Weekley; Dr. Davis, who was Dean of Union Biblical Seminary and later a bishop; Bishop Glasburner; Bishop Markwood; and Bishop Wright. Bishops Glasburner and Markwood were pioneer religious workers in the U.B. Church in West Virginia. Bishop Wright was father of the Wright brothers who invented the Wright Biplane.

On June 10, 1921, the Mountaineer of Ripley published an article giving most of the above information and stating "Two weeks ago last Sunday, through the efforts of Rev. E.C. Williams and others, a Sunday School was organized, there being 40 present. And in the near future it may become one of the leading Sunday Schools of the County and Bachtel Chapel again may occupy the position to which her illustrious past entitles her."

However, in spite of the efforts of this congregation, the 1927 Conference Journal published this note, "Bachtel Church of the Ripley Charge sold for $125.00. Check given to Ripley Church since Bachtel's membership joined the Ripley class. (Another item said lot sold for $100.00.)"

This historic old church was demolished sometime in the 1940s or '50s and graves removed to other cemeteries, a house and trailer occupying its former space.

BEECH GROVE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

The Beech Grove Church is located north of the Medina exit of Interstate 77 in Grant District of Jackson County. The Beech Grove Evangelical United Brethren Church was organized in 1908 and land was acquired from Finley Peters in 1909. Prior to the construction of a church building, meetings were held in the Beech Grove School. The first trustees of the church were: William Rardin, Frank Stanley, Ed Sands, Hiram Sands and F. E. Peters. These men along with other charter members constructed the building of wood which was obtained from trees (mostly beech and white oak) that were on the hillside behind the church. An organ was first used at the church but later removed in the 1950s when a piano was purchased from Mr. and Mrs. Martin Archer.

Beech Grove U.M. Church

Until the 1930s, the Beech Grove Church was served by a minister who also served at the Klondyke E.U.B. and Silvertown E.U.B. Churches. Beech Grove was then changed to the charge which included Mt. Hope E.U.B. Church (in Wirt County), Bethel E.U.B. Church (in Wirt County) and the Pleasant Ridge E.U.B. Church (in Jackson County near the Wirt County line). In the 1940s, Gates Ridge E.U.B. Church (in Wood County) was also added to this charge. After the merger of the E.U.B. and Methodist denominations in 1969, the charge was again changed to include Beech Grove, Warden Chapel, Drift Run and Lockhart. In 1985, Wilding and Silvertown were included with the above and called the North Jackson County charge.

The parsonage at Providence which had belonged to the E.U.B. charge was sold after the reorganization of the charges. Later, the parsonage, which was located beside the Lockhart Church, was used for a few years and then torn down. The parsonage beside the Silvertown Church is now used for the current charge.

When Interstate 77 was being constructed in the 1960s, the church members and others in the community rallied together to insist that an underpass be built to prevent the closure of the church due to a lack of access. This was accomplished, and since that time, there have been many changes made in the church building. In the 1970s, classrooms were added to the back of the church along with bathrooms and a small kitchen. Many other improvements have been made to the inside of the church as well as the outside, including the construction of a picnic shelter.

BRISCO U.M. CHURCH

Mr. Glen Staats, who was born and lived most of his life at Gay, WV, was told by his mother, Eliza (Johns) Staats, that the Brisco Church at Gay, WV, was built by his grandfather, William Johns, and Lou Wolfe in 1864-65.

J. W. and Moriah Shafer deeded the church approximately $\frac{3}{4}$ of an acre of land, situated on Elk Fork of Mill Creek, Gay, WV, to John Greenleaf and trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, on October 28, 1871, witnessed by Justice Anderson Staats (grandfather of Glen Staats) and recorded January 12, 1872. The church was named for its first pastor Rev. Briscoe, but down through the years the "e" was dropped from the spelling.

In the early 1900s, school was held in the church because the schoolhouse had burned down. Mr. Jake Staats (Glen Staats' father) was the teacher in 1903-04.

Periodically, the church has been closed, probably due to the number of nearby churches. In the late 1960s or early '70s it was occupied by a Baptist minister under the name of the Victory Baptist Church, but closed again after a couple of years.

In the mid '70s it was reopened and taken into the charge being served by the Rev. Wayne Hinzman, of the United Methodist Conference, to which it remains today.

The building was in such a state of disrepair that much work was required to restore it for worship services. The foundation had to be replaced, the pews from a former E.U.B. Church of Hemlock, WV had to be shortened, hymnals ordered, a prayer bench was hand made and donated by Clyde and Sharon Nutter, and a new roof to replace the old, leaky one.

The Rev. Paul Parsons of Sandyville, WV served as pastor for $3\frac{1}{2}$ years, and enjoyed preaching in the old church, because his mother, Alice (Sheets) Parsons, attended it when she was a young girl.

During the Rev. Parsons' pastorate the congregation decided to build a fellowship hall that would also serve as classrooms, but the fruition of this plan was not realized until after Rev. Hinzman was reassigned to the charge.

Brisco U.M. Church

Most of the labor in the building of the fellowship hall was contributed by one of the trustees, the late Willard (Red) Varney and his wife, Iris Varney. Finally a bell tower was constructed by Roger Casto, for the new bell purchased for the church by Sharon Neeley.

Much prayer, time and effort has gone into many various projects and fund raising activities, to improve and maintain this small country church with approximately eight active members and an average weekly attendance of 15-20.

The present trustees are: Christine Rhodes,

Michael Varney and Ann Casto. Submitted by Gail Rhodes

CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH

The birth of Calvary Baptist Church was during Ravenswood's "boom" period when many new families were moving to town with Kaiser Aluminum. On June 24, 1959 Calvary Baptist Church was organized and later affiliated with the Parkersburg Association of the West Virginia Baptist Convention, American Baptist Churches, USA.

In August a store building on Sand Street was renovated into a place of worship. Rev. Hillard C. Billups was called as pastor on January 1, 1960 and charter membership was closed at 55. Property on Henry Street was purchased in 1961 and under the leadership of Rev. Billups, an ex-contractor, members and friends built the basement unit which was used as a meeting place until the sanctuary was dedicated on September 15, 1963. The Sunday School annex was added in 1969.

Calvary Baptist Church

From the beginning one-tenth of all un-designated offerings was sent for missions. In 1966 the church went on record to not cooperate in any way with the National Council of Churches.

The Calvary Baptist Women organization and its Circles have been active since 1959. "The Calvary Crusaders," a puppet ministry, was begun in 1978. Junior Church started and the Men's Fellowship was chartered in 1984.

Four men have been licensed to preach the Gospel and are pastoring churches today: Clyde Newman, Darrell Johnson, William West and Bruce McConihay.

God has guided Calvary Baptist Church these 30 years, over mountaintops and through valleys. The church's prayer is that we will be faithful to our Lord Jesus Christ until His coming.

Pastors: Hillard C. Billups, 1960-1965; William Fox, 1966; Rankin Roach, 1967-1973; Charles Scott, 1973-1977; Alvin Cox, 1977-1980; Thomas Long, Jr., 1980-1982; Alvin Cox, 1982-1983; Ronald George, Sr., 1984-1988; William Kent Lowther, 1-1-1989 to present. Submitted by Opal Lancaster

CALVARY UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

The United Brethren Church had its beginning in 1766 and was formally organized in 1800. It was the first American born denomination with background among the German speaking colonists.

The Reverend Moses Michaels began preaching in Ripley in the old Jackson County Courthouse in 1833. The Stone Class was organized and a church built a short distance below Ripley on what is now Route 33 in 1837. It was known as Bachtel Chapel. The first class in Ripley was organized in 1840.

Our first church building was dedicated in 1888

Calvary U.M. Church

and J.W. Martin was the pastor. The cost of the property was listed at $1,500. The building stood across Court Street, north east of the present church on the present parking lot of the First National Bank. The present church was dedicated in 1926 with Dr. T.L. Miles, pastor.

A Board of Trustees, composed of Lovell M. Parsons, C.C. (Neal) Staats, Dr. Virgil Casto, Forrest Barnhart, T. Clayton Parsons, Dr. Oshel C. Staats and Fred A. Casto, were appointed to conduct the affairs of the church. They acquired a deed for the property we now occupy in April 1925.

Plans were made by Dr. Miles to build the church and parsonage in one unit. Bids were received on the project and it was decided that the trustees would do the purchasing and supervising. Lovell M. Parsons, Dr. Miles and C.C. Staats were appointed as a building committee. Mr. W.L. Pinnell was given a contract for the basement, which he completed in 1925.

In March 1926, construction was started on the sanctuary and parsonage with Lovell M. Parsons and Dr. Miles supervising the work. Progress was rapid, and in July the dedication date was set for the second Sunday in October.

Dr. Miles had charge of the dedication services and was assisted by Dr. F.H. Capehart, the Conference Superintendent. Dr. W.R. Funk, publishing agent of the denomination, was secured as the guest speaker.

J. E. Harrison organized all classes and teachers. The Senior Choir was led by Mr. C.F. Kerwood, the Junior Choir was directed by Mrs. T. Clayton Parsons and Madeline Casto Parsons. Mrs. C.C. Staats, with the help of many others, provided a wonderful basket dinner for those present at the dedication.

The total cost of the church was $31,360.

In 1973-74 the interior of the church was refurbished with new carpet in the sanctuary and basement, new altar furniture and new pews. The Conference now values the church property at $200,000. In 1955 a garage was added at a cost of $1,500. The pews that were replaced had been in use since their placement in the original building in 1888.

Calvary United Methodist Church, our new name after merging of the two churches in 1969, has continued to grow and serve the needs of our congregation. Its membership numbered about 20 in 1833 and has grown to the present number of about 330 members.

The first child born in the new parsonage was Mary Lou Miles, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Miles. The first wedding was King Parsons and Madeline Casto. The first funeral conducted in the new church was for Fred Robey.

If you will observe the stained glass windows, you will see the family names who sustained this church over the early years. Unfortunately, it cannot show all of the faithful ones who have kept up the good work until the present time.

Our church served as a center for a variety of activities. Ripley High School used it for graduation ceremonies and other school activities.

Civic groups, including Rotary, met here regularly.

The Ladies Aid contributed monies and extensive services.

It has been a center for Scouting over the years.

As we view the past history of this church, we are impressed by the effort and devotion of many people.

We can now be very proud of those in our church today who are busily fulfilling the needs of the total church.

So much is being accomplished by our United Methodist Women, the Men's Brotherhood, Bible Study, Orientation for Membership and Teaching Classes.

It is our belief that all facets of this church will continue to grow and our heritage will have many worthwhile additions. Submitted by Willard A. Kessel

CEDAR RUN UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

The cornerstone for the Cedar Run Methodist Episcopal Church was laid in 1896. The deed for the original lot was made on June 26, 1897, by William F. Blackburn and Lucy A. Blackburn, his wife, to the trustees of the church: J.W. Heck, H.A. Blackburn, L.P. McGlothlin, S.S. Ball, and J.Q. Rowley. Trustee S.S. Ball was the grandfather of Gene, Mark, and Evan Morgan. The William F. Blackburn was the grandfather of William James Blackburn who resided in Ravenswood until his death.

Prior to and during construction of the Cedar Run building, services were held in an old schoolhouse on Latham Ridge on property now owned by Gene and Mark Morgan.

Clay Rowley of Ravenswood remembers some important information about the church. He said the interested men in the community cut trees and hauled the logs by wagon to a sawmill owned by the father of Wayne W. Hughes, who sawed the foundation sills and sleepers. Mr. Rowley further said that Rev. Meadows married his father and mother in 1897. Rev. Meadows, indeed, was pastor and served in 1897 and 1898.

Cedar Run was dedicated on October 31, 1897 with Rev. Meadows and Rev. Upton present. Rev. B.W. Hutchinson from the seminary at Buckhannon delivered the message; he was also in charge of finances. He raised over $300 during morning services. The beautiful little church was solemnly set apart for the worship of Almighty God. The people were delighted; the building was one of the neatest and best in the county, a real gem for the amount it cost — $1,000.

Cedar Run U.M. Church

Information on the church is scarce for the years 1900 to 1930. However, Rev. Harry Blackburn said he remembered the great revivals at Cedar Run in the early days and that his paternal grandmother would shout up and down the aisles.

The Claud Adams family came to Cedar Run in 1921 and were devout Christians and supporters of the church. Included in the list of other staunch supporters were the Hoyt Jones family, the Hart Morgan family, the Wetzel family, the Coit Rowley family, and the Faren family.

Mary McCoy Hughes attended Cedar Run from an early age. She recalled David Gorrell as her Sunday School teacher in the Card Class. Mary later married Wayne W. Hughes, who first came to Cedar Run in 1935, and has been active in the church since 1937. Mary taught Sunday School and played the piano for many years. Gene Morgan remembers Mary as his teacher in the Card Class.

In 1967 the church purchased an additional acre of land adjoining the church property for future expansion. That same year the church began work on a basement and three classrooms. This project was finished and dedicated on October 3, 1971. Rev. Charles Boice was pastor when this addition was started, and Rev. Ernest F. Marty was pastor when it was dedicated.

Cedar Run U.M. Church

The remodeled and enlarged sanctuary was completed and dedicated in 1977 while Rev. William J. Sullivan was pastor. Part of this remodeling involved refinishing the sanctuary entrance doors and the window facings. The handmade lectern in the center of the podium is the original lectern and is now used for a communion table. All labor on the remodeling project was done by volunteers.

Dr. Kenneth Ball from Parkersburg currently serves Cedar Run on the West Jackson Charge.

CENTENNIAL CHURCH

September 12, 1895, Phillip and Sara Ann Landfried deeded a tract of land to Phillip Landfried, Daniel Ludwig, D.W. Casto, J.J. Wolfe and J.H. Jewell, trustees of the Centennial Methodist Episcopal Church to erect a place of worship. The church was erected by the trustees and members of the community from lumber that was kiln dried. A little incident recalled was that a member was overseeing the drying, fell asleep and let some of the lumber burn. Some of the charred lumber that was usable can be seen in the attic of the church. The building was finished and the little group saw their dream come true as the church was dedicated in 1896.

The main structure of the church is much the same as when it was first erected, with exception of what we consider the front of the church was at that time the back. The road went behind the church. Later, when it was changed to go in front, as it is now, the doors were boarded up and two new doors were put in, one on each side. Not too many years ago, a double door was cut and two classrooms added to the back, and new brick siding added. A new steeple and bell were installed in 1966 to replace the original one, which had been taken down for some repairs to be made. During that time, a serenade was being held in the community, and the bell was used as a noise maker during the activities. This cracked the bell and it could no longer be used at the church.

A most welcome change came into being when electricity replaced the oil lamps, and natural gas replaced the old wood burning stove which sat in the middle of the room. The first organ was purchased from Mary Straley. It belonged to her mother, Lucy Straley. The piano now used was purchased with money accumulated from the sale of black walnuts.

Some of the descendants of Phillip and Sara Ann Landfried are still members of the little church today. One of the oldest living members is Lelia Landfried Garrett. Other were the late Audrey Landfried Sayre and Elah Landfried Murray.

Some of the past ministers were H.K. Rife, A.C. Rife, Homer Cummings, also a composer of hymns, John King, Frank Caltrider, Ernest Marty, James Gumm, Joe Hatcher, Paul Parsons, and Christopher Randolph, who attended the church as a young boy. The membership of this church was not many in members, but a faithful few, with much difficulty at times, was able to keep it open and available to those who cared to worship there.

The church was part of the Methodist Conference until 1986, but was abandoned by the Conference and is now known as the Centennial Community Church. Submitted by Roberta Murray Beckett

CHAPEL HILL M.E. CHURCH

Chapel Hill M.E. Church

The Chapel Hill Church was built on land obtained from Amos Wise in 1891. It was located on Dutch Ridge, which is between Little Pond Creek and Cavin Fork, in Grant District. The Ernest Stephens family later owned the property around the church. Surnames of the families who attended Chapel Hill in the 1890s include: Kieffer, Greenlee, Beach, Nohe, Sollberger, Smith, Wise, Jordan, Mills and Parks. The church closed in the late 1920s and was torn down several years later. A cemetery is located beside the church site. Submitted by Daina Stallings

COMET UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Early day church services were held in the log school house located near the Mount Pisgah Cemetery. The cemetery is located on a hill to the right of Cherry Camp Road within sight of the Comet United Methodist Church. This property was known as the Crum Farm before the Civil War. The current owner is Dale Smith, but to several people in the community it is still known as the Roscoe and Helen Smith home place. Early circuit preachers who organized Methodist services were: the Reverend Sam Black and the Reverend Samuel Sheppard.

Around the turn of the century a framed school was built on the present site of the Comet School. Church services were held there until a fire consumed the building. A third school was constructed around 1911. It was during this third construction period that the name was changed from Mount Pisgah to Comet.

The need for a separate building for worship prompted the community to work together to construct the present church. (1920-21) The Luther Cole family donated the property.

The church was built of brown glazed block by members of the congregation. The oak pews and pulpit were made by Sonny Casto of Ripley, WV. The day of dedication, the congregation was so large, there was not room inside for the crowd.

Comet U.M. Church

The first trustees were: D.L. Floyd, R.C. Smith, and W.H. Tallman. Some of the early congregation were: the Dave Floyd family, the Roscoe Smith family, the Joe Haynes family, the A.A. Coe family, the W.A. Stanley family, the S.A. Husk family, the Henry Balser family, the W.H. Tallman family, the Bowser family, the Jim Fisher family, the W.D. Sullivan family, the Charlie Coast family, and the Standsberry family.

Following is a listing of ministers past to present:

Ministers — Lockhart Charge: the Reverends Eskew, A.C. Riffe, J.W. Haught, H.K. Riffe, Albert Poling, Fred Simmons, Ryder, J.W. Idleman.

Ministers — Sandyville Charge: Sarver, Richardson, Atkinson, L.C. Morris, J.W. Hanlon, Jack Sayre, Earl Seaman, Bill Eaton, Paul Morrison, Ulysses Rhea, Marvin Miller, Russell Crawford, William Sullivan, Wilbur Hardin, Melvin Conley, Dan McVey (present).

The rural Comet Church survived the exodus of the ones that moved from the farmland to a more convenient way of life. During World War II the church doors were kept open by a few loyal and devoted members. Older members are deceased — new families have moved into the community from different parts of West Virginia. Improvements of the building continue — a Sunday School room was added in the late 1960s. In the 1970s the tin roof was replaced with shingles. The walls were paneled and a new floor was put in during the 1980s.

In the early 1970s, there was a need for a new parsonage. All of the churches on the charge helped to finance this brick structure.

Present Trustees are: Robert Raines, George Henry Smith and Patricia Martino. Submitted by George H. Smith and Rosemary Smith Curry

COLEMAN CHAPEL

In 1858, Thomas Coleman (1801-1890), an earlier settler of Muses Bottom, proposed to several of his grown children and other persons in the community, his desire to provide a house of worship. He specified that it should be "brick with a good stone foundation," and that on the completion of such a church, he would deed the land to the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Persons who gave money and/or labor to fulfill Thomas Coleman's wish are listed as: Franklin Tumlin, Thomas Benton Coleman, William Roberts, Sarah Coleman, Nancy Roberts, Euoth Goldsmith, Mariah White, William Hicks, John Lobdill, M.D. Hicks, Thomas Bruer, Levi Mumaw, P.D. Williams, W.H. White, Allen Bloomfield, Warren White, Adour Starkey, James Goldsmith, George Vagley, H.R. Coleman, Joseph White, Nancy Mumaw, William Goldsmith and William Gardner.

The first service was held on June 22, 1860 and the property was deeded to the church. It has been in continuous service for 129 years, except for a brief period during the Civil War, when it was occupied by Union Troops.

Coleman Chapel

Thomas Benton Coleman inherited his father's home, and he and his family assumed responsibility for much of the care and maintenance of the church. Each Saturday the wooden benches were dusted, the floors swept and the oil lamps, which were placed in brackets around the walls, were cleaned and filled with kerosene. One of my pleasures as a child when we visited my grandparents in the summer, was to take part in the Saturday event. I was allowed to clean the globes of the lamps!

On June 16, 1982, a tornado swept through sections of Jackson County and a funnel cloud touched down at Muses Bottom and tore the roof from one side of the church. Members of the congregation gathered immediately and the roof was replaced. The spirit of community concern that characterized the founders of Coleman Chapel is still present in this active United Methodist Church.

The only known ministers who have served in Coleman Chapel are Reverend McClung and Reverend Gosling, who presided at the funeral of Thomas Coleman, who died February 24, 1890, and was buried in the family cemetery at the rear of the church.

Prior to the construction of the church, Thomas Coleman set aside land for a cemetery with ten sections, one for each of his ten children, with a circle in the middle of the area for the family monument containing the name, birth and death dates of the ten children and for the graves of his wife and himself. Cement walkways lead out from the center to each of the four walls. The wall is made of hand-hewn stone from a quarry in Long Bottom, Ohio, and was floated across the river on rafts and pulled to the site by ox teams. Large trees which were around the outside of the wall are no longer there, but the beauty of the area lives on.

COTTAGEVILLE-EVANS BAPTIST CHURCH

The Cottageville-Evans Baptist Church was begun as a mission of the Second Baptist Church of Ravenswood after a tent revival on July 7, 1962, showed a definite need for an interest in a Baptist church in the Cottageville area. The mission was established and began meeting in the house across from the Cottageville Post Office. Services were held on Sunday afternoons by Pastor Earl Miller after his regular services in Ravenswood.

In June of 1963, Fred Mann became the first pastor. A bus route along Cow Run was begun by John Lynn, the first deacon of the church. The mission became an independent Baptist church in July of 1964 with 37 charter members.

As more room was needed the church rented the vacant garage across the street from Hunt's grocery store. A search for property on which to build turned up land available between Cottageville and Evans on the Old Evans Road at Highway 33, five miles west of Ripley. A deed for the Maywood Williams property was signed on October 7, 1964. Church members used their skills and crafts in constructing the building. The Sunday School wing was completed in December of 1964. Eighty-nine people were present for the first service in the new building with two receiving Christ as their Savior.

The auditorium was completed by July of 1966. An addition to the auditorium including a classroom and two offices downstairs was added in the summer of 1978.

Cottageville-Evans Baptist Church

The church has a preschool that meets during the week as well as Sunday School, a morning service and a Sunday evening service. Wednesday evenings there is a full program for children and teens and an adult Bible study and prayer time. The missions program includes support for seven families, a Bible college, and a world-wide radio station.

Pastors following Fred Mann are Carl Dabney, Glenn Watts, Bill Barker, Gilbert Cubbinson, Gary Smith, Mark Broke, Steve Atkinson, Robert Gandee, David King, and the present Pastor David Sanderson.

COTTAGEVILLE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

The land on which the Cottageville United Methodist Church now stands was deeded September 2, 1871 by Daniel D. Rhodes and his wife, Mary, to the trustees Phineas Stanley, William Crow, A. McCoy, Mr. Rosenberry, and William Christy, for the purpose of building a Southern Methodist Church and a cemetery. July 12, 1878, a second deed was made, adding a piece of land for the purpose of an additional cemetery joining the first piece of land. This deed was made between George W. Gilpin and others to the trustees R. Swan, G.W. McCoy, John Ball, J.H. Rand, S.H. Hayman, J.W. Williamson, and William Sayre. The deed said it was out of the consideration of pure love in the interest of Christianity that the land was given for one dollar.

Cottageville U.M. Church

Over the years several improvements were made. The first one was the digging of the basement in the early 1930s, which was sponsored by the Ladies' Aid. The next improvement was the building of an educational building in the late 1950s, which was under the sponsorship of Rev. Fred Lemon. The final improvement to the Church was the renovation of the inside and outside as well as a vestibule.

In the early 1980s a donation from the Powers family permitted the building of a chain link fence around the cemetery and an endowment policy which made it perpetual care. The Powers family's father was an early minister in the Church. Some other early ministers were J.W. Lambert, A. Mick, Ulysses Pribble, C.R. Shackelford, J.W. Griffith, O.C. Phillips, A.A. Kelley, E.L. Meadows, E.A. Davis, T.H. Hawks, and Cyrus Poling.

In 1969 there was a merger of the United Brethren Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church. It was renamed United Methodist Church and was housed in the Methodist Church because that church was larger and had recently been renovated.

DRIFT RUN UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Located near Odaville in Ravenswood District, services were first begun in a log school house on Drift Run in 1880. As the local population increased, it was becoming evident a church building was needed. In the year 1896 the deed was made and the ground given by Adam Devore and Johnny Daily. George Robinson and Michael Archer hauled most of the lumber while many others donated work. Adam Devore was the main carpenter. This church was located on the point above the existing one. A cemetery is located on the hill near the site of the old church. Several years later the church was once again too small for the growing population. After much planning, it was decided to build a new church down near the highway where it is now located.

Drift Run U.M. Church

In 1943, Orville Thomas donated the ground. E.C. Thrash and Orville Thomas were the main carpenters. The entire community responded with donated work and money. In approximately three months, the new church was completed with a full size basement. The church cost approximately $3000. The first church service was held November 21, 1943 with 62 present. The Rev. George Caltrider was the last minister to serve in the old church and the first to serve in the new church. Ministers who have served in the new church: George Caltrider, Lawrence Morris, Marvin Freed, Charles Potts, Frank Caltrider, Holbert Melrose, L.J. Lunsford, P.W. ELK FORK CHURCH

The Elk Fork Society of Gay, WV, was formed in 1840. Rev. Archibald David Thomas, his son Rev. William H. Thomas and John Wesley Rhoades were the leading men in the organization. The land, one-half acre more or less, located on the Elk Fork of Mill Creek, was donated by John and Catherine Greenleaf. The building contractor of the church was Rev. Nicholas Casto. The building committee was William H. Thomas, J.H. Westfall, S. Harpold, William Rollins and Watson Rollins. Henderson

Elk Fork Church

(Sank) Westfall did the carpentry on the altar railing. Rev. Joseph Dunn was the pastor at the time. The church was dedicated on July 26, 1875, by Dr. George Nestor.

The membership of the Elk Fork Church grew to over 100 in 1926. Families came from miles around walking, carrying their babies, riding in buggies and in Model T Fords. This congregation was noted for its religious enthusiasm. It was said, that no man could live in this area for two years without becoming a Christian.

In 1939, the Methodist Episcopal Church merged with the Methodist Protestant Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church South, to form the Methodist Church. The Elk Fork Church became the Elk Fork Methodist Church. In 1968, when the Methodist Church merged with the Evangelical United Brethren Church to form the United Methodist Church, the Elk Fork Methodist church became the Elk Fork United Methodist Church.

In 1986, the W.V. Annual Conference of the Methodist Church declared the Elk Fork United Methodist Church abandoned. The members of the Elk Fork Church then bought the one-half acre more or less, that their church house is built on.

The present active workers of the church are: Estel and Tressie (Tolley) Skeen and their granddaughters, Jennifer and Samantha Skeen; Okey and Bernice (Waybright) Knopp; Gladys (Coon) Aiello and her great niece and nephew, Tara and Brandon Postalwait; Ellias Hackney; Glen Chancey; William Paul and Joy (Somerville) Rogers and their daughters, Sheri and Tina Cristea. Some of the members of the past have included Benjamin Thomas, John and Alice Kelley. Mrs. Kelly visited the sick faithfully. She was very often seen walking to church carrying a vase of flowers for the altar. Other members were Alfie and Aldie Rhoades. Alfie liked to sing and for a time, there was singing class once a week, for any one who wanted to come. Homer and Mary Evans were also members. Mary Evans was instrumental in organizing the Easter and Christmas programs. Other faithful members were: Lloyd and Virgie Casto, Walter and Minnie Tolley, W.H. and Agnes Tolley, S.O. EMMA CHAPEL UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Emma Chapel United Methodist Church located on Route 34 South, across the Jackson line in Putnam County.

A Methodist class had been organized in 1902 holding service in the Lane schoolhouse, on Young Hollow Road. The people of like faith were meeting in the Kermit school in Putnam County.

The two congregations decided that a church should be built to serve both communities.

At a quarterly conference February 25th, 1906 at Rock Spring Church, delegates from the two communities presented and were granted their requests for a church.

Rev. John Beddow was presiding Elder and John W. Good recording secretary.

A building committee of Charlie Pitchford, Perry Casto, J.R. Monday, E.C. Ranson and W.S. Bonnett appointed to choose a location and build the church.

The ground chosen was adjoining the cemetery that had been established in 1884. Work began and progressed rapidly, with volunteer labor and most materials donated.

Dedication service was held November 4, 1906, with Rev. Beddow as presiding Elder and Church congregation shortly after completion of the first church building, 1906

Rev. J.J. White the speaker. Rev. Marion Taylor appointed first minister. The trustees were: Conrad Fisher, D.F. Hill, John Monday. Perry Casto was appointed School Superintendent and E.C. Ranson assistant.

Emma Chapel U.M. Church

The old church has served its purpose well, but the ravages of time had taken its toll. In 1947, it was torn down and replaced. The new church was dedicated May 29, 1949 by District Superintendent, Dr. Yoak, with Dr. Shaffer delivering the sermon.

Rev. M.V. Fisher was the pastor. Submitted by Troy Fisher

EPWORTH UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

After slavery issues divided the Methodist Church in 1844, the Reverend Samuel Black organized the Methodist Episcopal Church, South during 1845 in what was then Jackson Courthouse. Records show the congregation held worship services in the Courthouse. Reverend Warren Briscoe, the second pastor, continued to preach there until objections were made about the Courthouse being used for church purposes. Then they held services in the Schoolhouse, which was then located at the corner of North and Seventh Streets. The first Sunday School was organized in 1856, by James A. Park, the first Superintendent.

The first church building was erected in 1858, about three lots north of the present site on Church Street, for $1,400. The land was donated by J.H. Staats. For many years, this building was also used by the Methodist Episcopal, Baptist, Episcopalian, and United Brethren. The first church wedding in Ripley was in that church, March 10, 1869, when William Thomas Greer and Mary Virginia Bennett of Baltimore, Maryland, were united in marriage by Reverend W.S. May.

In 1867, the Methodist Episcopal congregation was organized, and in 1869 St. Paul's M.E. Church was built on Bridge Street, being dedicated November 24, 1889, by Rev. E.D.W. King, pastor.

Then in 1899, a lovely brick structure with stained glass windows was erected on present building site, corner of Church and North Streets. The Epworth Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was dedicated November 4, 1900, by Bishop H.C. Morrison. Reverend Sam Robinson was pastor. That building cost around $3,000. In 1914, Pfof Memorial addition, one large meeting room with kitchenette, was donated by Mrs. Flora Pfof.

Epworth Church, 1907

The Methodist Episcopal congregation of St. Paul's rebuilt on South Maple Street, and dedicated November 4, 1928. This church was named King Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, in honor of Reverend E.D.W. King, and cost $7,500. Dr. Homer Wark, President of WV Wesleyan College delivered the dedicatory sermon, and Rev. F.V. Arnett was pastor.

In 1939, General Conference voted to combine three branches of Methodism — ME North, ME South, and Methodist Protestant. Under the leadership of Reverend J.J. Loudin, the Methodist Episcopal joined the ME South congregation and became the Epworth Methodist Church.

The adjacent Dr. Rymer property on North Street was purchased in 1949, and house remodeled for a parsonage. The Church Street parsonage was torn down to make room for an Educational Annex which was erected to join the sanctuary. Six Sunday School rooms and a church office is downstairs; Fellowship Hall with kitchen is upstairs. Cost was $25,000. Bishop Lloyd Wicke preached the sermon at the formal opening, February 15, 1950. Reverend W.W. Harvey was pastor.

Disaster struck Epworth February 9, 1955 — the sanctuary and Pfof addition were destroyed by fire! Worship continued in Ripley High School Auditorium (present City Building) until Fellowship Hall was repaired. Our people responded to the task of rebuilding, and on March 20, 1957, an evening worship service with Bishop Wicke delivering the sermon, marked the opening of a beautiful Colonial type sanctuary which cost $90,000. Reverend Robert Fuqua was pastor. Rev. R.M. Parker conducted three fund-raising campaigns for building programs of Annex and Sanctuary.

Epworth U.M. Church

A lot on West North Street was purchased and new parsonage erected, being first occupied by Reverend Paul Beal family in 1963, and dedicated by Rev. Rossing Smith in 1971. The present sanctuary was dedicated February 6, 1966, by Bishop Fred Holloway.

The United Brethren Church had joined with the Evangelicals to form the Evangelical United Brethren Church in 1946. That denomination united with the Methodists in April, 1969, making the present name of the denomination EPWORTH UNITED METHODIST CHURCH. The 1989 membership of Epworth is 562.

All these buildings were dedicated "to the glory of God and the service of men," so that we might worship God and grow spiritually. Our church has a great heritage of ministry to Ripley and surrounding area. Submitted by Ocie T. King

FAIRVIEW CHURCH

(Located on the Leroy-Garfield Road)

Sometime in the year of 1880 a small number of Christian people met at the Fairview Schoolhouse on the farm of E.L. Nuzum, and organized the first class of the Methodist Church. The following names are but a few of the charter members: Mr. and Mrs. E.L. Nuzum; Mr. and Mrs. E. Crew; Mrs. Mary Baker; Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson; Mr. E.J. Smith. They held prayer service about once a month and preaching service when a preacher was available. These were mostly local men. Mr. D.B. Warren was a great help to the class when time would permit. This small class later organized a Sunday School which was very successful. It continued to grow until the enrollment reached 120. The church finally secured a preacher that came once a month. The first regular pastor was the Rev. J.W. Bibbee, followed by the Rev. George Evans. It was during the stay of the third pastor, the Rev. J.P. Varner, that the church building was planned and construction began early in 1887. Members and other volunteers constructed the foundation and arranged for the building material for the church. The contract was awarded to Mr. William Zahrandt, a resident of Wood County, WV and he employed the help that was needed in the construction of the church. In the meantime the Annual Conference sent another pastor, the Rev. Joe Dunn, who was still pastor at the time of the dedication of the new church, the third Sunday in May 1888.

FANNIN CHAPEL UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

The Fannin Chapel Church is located near the junction of Route 68 and the Little Sandy Road at Sherman in Grant District. The ground was donated by Theodore and Nancy J. Cline and recorded on April 2, 1897. Those building the church were: Will Safreed, G.W. Safreed, J.E. Debussey, I.S. Rector, John Barnhart, Theodore Cline, Jim Nesselroad, J.R. Ball and Samuel Palmer. The foundation was set up out of hand carved sandstone. The church building was dedicated December 17, 1896. The first minister was I.N. Fannin and the church was named in his honor. R.L. Rector was the first superintendent and T.P. Cline served as assistant superintendent as well as secretary. When the big floods of 1913 and 1937 occurred, holes had to be drilled in the floor to drain the water out. Will Safreed and his son, Edwin, put stay-bars through the church in three places to straighten the walls that were beginning to sway. A new steeple was built by Tony Blankenship and Louis Sands in 1965. Remodeling and new flooring have also made the church more attractive.

FISHER MEMORIAL CHURCH

The Fisher Reunion was organized in 1929 and met at various sites on the fourth Sunday in August of each year. In 1938 members of the Fisher Reunion selected a site at the Old Duddon School grounds at the Forks of Duddon and Fisher Ridge Roads. The reunion and a revival was held at this site each fall.

In September 1942 the following individuals met at this site and formulated plans to build a church in memory of Leonard G. and Hannah Fisher: Ed Fisher, Marco Games, Parvin Cunningham, W. Odra Fisher, and Roy Pfof. Land was donated by R.O. (Bob) Fisher. Construction of Fisher Memorial Church started in the fall of 1942, with the first service being conducted in January 1943. The original church was expanded three times.

A building fund was started for a new church in 1973. When construction began in July 1978, the building architect estimated that total construction costs would exceed $400,000. But with church members, both men and women, and friends, donating materials and construction labor, the actual cost was about $225,000. The church was paid for when it opened for the first service in August 1979. The new church, twice the size of the old sanctuary, seats about 500, including 56 choir seats.

Fisher Memorial Church (new building)

The first officers of the church were: Pastor, Rev. Charles Scraggs; Sunday School Superintendent, Jim Fisher; class leader, W. FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

The Ravenswood Baptist Church was organized as the result of meetings held by Rev. J. Swiger, missionary of the American Home Mission Society.

The organization was effected Saturday, November 10th, 1866, with 15 members. Eleven of these, Mrs. Rachel Blackburn, Mrs. Hannah L. Haworth, Miss Alma J. Haworth, Miss Alice E. Haworth, Miss America King, Miss Virginia Long, Mrs. Nancy J. Law, Miss Kate Parker, Mr. John Rudman, Mrs. E.J. Rudman, and Miss Josephine Taylor, had been baptized October 21st. The others, Dr. S.M. Haworth, William Long, Mrs. Sarah Long, and Mrs. Mary A. Parker united with the church by letter.

For a while the meetings of the church were held in the old Ravenswood Academy, but after a time the door was locked against them and the meetings were held in a room in Charles Harpold's Tannery until a room was arranged suitable for services in the building belonging to Robert S. Brown. This arrangement continued until March, 1875, at which time the building was thought to be unsafe and the meetings were again held in the Academy.

In June, 1875, the church purchased for the sum of $200.00 the lot on which the present building stands. In the fall of the same year the foundation was laid for a building 36 x 61 feet, and in May, 1876 the frame was erected. In July the church was much discouraged because of the damage done to the building by a storm. However, courage was revived and the work of rebuilding was begun at once. By September 1st the building was enclosed and the work went slowly on until it was completed. The dedication was held on Sunday afternoon, June 9th, 1878.

First Baptist Church, Ravenswood

On April 4th, 1955, dedication services were again held in recognition of improvements made including an educational unit which was built on to the existing church building.

In February, 1954 the church voted to change its name to "First Baptist Church, Ravenswood, WV."

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH OF RAVENSWOOD

Organized in March of 1895, with 13 charter members and ministered to by J.A. Joyce, then a student at Bethany College, the congregation built and dedicated on December 29, 1895, the present sanctuary. The lot was given by William Milhoan, half of the bricks were given by Anthony and J.R. Keller, cash was given by Esbia Wells, and the large memorial window was given by Mrs. Anna H. Brown. The original building was completed for a cost of $3,300 and used virtually unchanged until 1958.

Mr. J.R. Keller served for over 50 years as elder of the congregation and superintendent of the Bible School. His influence and memory still are a part of the heritage of the Church. During much of the immediate past, the financial problems of the Church were met with income provided for in the estate of C.E. Mason.

In 1957 when faced with renewed opportunity and challenge in a growing community, the Church decided to work together with the churches of the Disciples of Christ in West Virginia in order to better fulfill the work of the Kingdom. As a result of the resident pastor, B.J. Hannon, working with the congregation and seeing to the needs of the community, a building program was proposed and undertaken. Joining the efforts of the local congregation with the support of other churches across the state, the present educational building has resulted.

Pastors that have served in the last 30 years are the Reverend William Clay Allen, Jr., the Reverend Carl Smith, the Reverend William A. Gerrard III, the Reverend Russell Smith, Jr., the Reverend Charles Guthrie, the Reverend Warren Harry, and the presently serving pastor, the Reverend Earl W. Bailey. Submitted by The Rev. and Mrs. Earl W. Bailey

FIRST UM CHURCH OF RAVENSWOOD

Methodism arrived in Jackson County in 1803. Records show that the oldest member of the charge was Eligah Staats, who resided about three miles below the present site of Ripley on Mill Creek. About 1808 Thomas Lasley began preaching at Abraham Staats' dwelling, and also on the Ohio River a short distance north of the mouth of Mill Creek. In 1809, during the pastorate of Lasley, the first class of two members and four probationers was organized.

In 1812 a preacher by the name of Turner came into this section of the Ohio valley from the Baltimore Conference and organized some classes.

The first Methodist services in Ravenswood were held in 1830 in the home of Bartholamew and Hannah Warth Fleming. Mrs. Fleming was the first name placed on the church register.

In 1844 sectional differences in the fields of politics, economics, and slavery caused a split. From this conflict grew the Methodist Episcopal South. There being no Methodist church building in town, services were held in a building which was also used for a school, place of worship for other denominations and for all public meetings. This building stood just above the old passenger depot and was known as the "Institute."

At a meeting on December 5, 1846, plans were made for the construction of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. This building was completed eight or ten years later.

During the Civil War it was used as a barracks for Union soldiers, and at the close of the war it was in a very damaged state; so much so, that it was unfit for use. In time a few faithful members repaired and restored the building. Like most churches in the days of slavery, this had a gallery extending across the front for the slaves.

In 1867 Reverend W.D. Warren organized the Methodist Episcopal Church. Reverend Samuel Ball gave a lot on which to build a church. This lot was located on Mulberry Street between Washington and Virginia Streets. The church building cost $2,000, and it was dedicated October 1870.

The only time the church was threatened with disunity and had fear for its survival was about 1920 when the Ku Klux Klan was active in Ravenswood. Reverend A.C. Riffe was sent to the church to see if he could bring the congregation together, as this organization had disrupted the church as well as the community.

In 1928 a second and larger church was constructed by the ME South at the corner of Henry and Walnut Streets. It was named Walton Memorial in memory of C.E. Walton, who was the largest contributor.

In Kansas City, April 26, 1939, a Declaration of Union was issued uniting the Methodist Episcopal, Methodist Protestant, and Methodist Episcopal South. The first union service was held in Walton Memorial Church September 13, 1939. Reverend James P. Hutchinson was the first pastor. The Woman's Society of Christian Service was chartered September 2, 1940.

With the continued growth of our community and the crowded conditions in the church, plans were made in 1957 to construct a larger building. The new church, located on Flinn Street, was completed in 1962. First Methodist Church was the name selected.

FLATWOODS CHURCH AND SCHOOL

The land was deeded, March 15, 1897, from James H. Mahon and Mary M. Mahon to John Hamilton, R.D. Custer, James H. Mahon, W.H. Mahon, L.M. Coe, A.C. Rowley, and John H. Mahon, Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Flatwoods, the deed said, the lots on which the new church at Flatwoods is being built and the Flatwoods graveyard with a small portion of land adjoining.

A deed made April 25, 1903, from H.V. McCoy and Myrtle (Hartley) McCoy and Hugh Hamilton to the Trustees of Flatwoods M.E. Church for more graveyard, additional land for burial was obtained September 13, 1981, from Dorsie Mae Workman, now Kerwood, and the cemetery is under perpetual care.

The beautiful wood work of the building inside, with its curved ceiling is really unique. In May 1971 a letter of intent was sent out asking for donations to build a church addition of a basement and two rooms upstairs for classes, with the cooperation from community and friends the project turned out well.

Some of the names appearing on the books were Dickerson, Stone, Custer, Weekley, Harpold, Kneff, Hughes, Rowan, Gillaspie, Matthews, Balser and Ankrum. Present day Trustees are Adrian McCoy, Roy Boggs and Howard Robinson.

Our accompanied photo of year 1919-20, had a school house, the building was removed and the

FOSTER CHAPEL

For some time prior to the year 1887, a small class of Methodists had been using the Cherry Grove schoolhouse on Long Hollow as a place for worship and Sunday School. Early in this year they decided they wanted a church in consequence of which, through the leadership of E.D.W. King then their pastor, they built the Foster Chapel Methodist Episcopal church on land donated for that purpose by L.M. Harpold, and it was dedicated by Bishop Warren, December 4, 1887, with an all day service and basket dinner. The first members were R.M. and Nancy Duffield, James A. and Rachel Williams, John M. and Nancy Parsons, Samuel and Samantha Knox, Harrison and Lydia Hill, Lewis F. and Sarah Parsons, Wesley Harpold, Elizabeth Stewart, Rebecca Doyler, Sarah Smith, Roxey Harpold.

Foster Chapel

These were soon followed by Emory Duffield, W.H. and Dora Parsons, R.E. Williams, Addie Parsons, Noah Parsons, Helen Smith, and many others till the class reached 86 active members all of whom are gone to their reward.

Julia Knox was the first convert in the new church and James A. Williams sang the first song.

This land being in woods, after the men had cleared it, the women and children met there on a Saturday afternoon and burned the brush.

The first few Sunday School sessions were conducted before the floor was laid.

The following pastors served the early church and did much through their leadership to make this a prosperous little church: E.D.W. King, W.R. Hennen, J.F. Arnold, Dell Lyton, W.T. McCutcheon, A.J.L. Curtis, O.A. Kelley, W.P. Gwinn, P.D. Fisher, C.A. Whippo, M.H. Cummings, W.R. Eskew, H.A. Riffe, Grover Johnson, A.C. Riffe, W.T. McCarthy, John Cumberledge, Rev. Idleman, Rev. Fiber, Rev. Nuzum, Rev. Caultrider, Rev. Harpold, Rev. Cunningham, and Rev. Earl Seaman.

Due to so many leaving the community, there was insufficient attendance, and the church was closed in the 1940s.

From time-to-time people went back for a homecoming. In the early 1960s the old church needed so much repairs that it was decided to build a small cinderblock one to replace it. The last homecoming in the old church was held August 1961 with nearly one hundred present. At this time it was decided to rebuild just north east of the old church so the timbers could be used. In the afternoon session officers were elected: J.O. Casto, president; Georgia Grady, secretary; Harry Kay, treasurer; and a building committee of Harry Kay, William Davis, and James Barnes.

J. O. Casto said he would match all contributions for the new church. By evening $1,566 had been collected or pledged. The new church was dedicated June 24, 1962. It was presided over by Rev. Earl Seaman, pastor of the Cottageville Methodist charge of which Foster Chapel was a part. The District Superintendent of the Parkersburg Charge, Rev. Charles Goodwin, delivered the dedicatory address.

Due to lack of attendance, the United Methodist Conference wished to dispose of their abandoned church properties. Foster Chapel was one of these since it had not been used as a church for several years.

April, 1977, the W.V. Annual Conference of the U.M. Church made it known that for $275 they were willing to transfer this property to three willing trustees. Oris Lathey, Adrien Parsons, and Dorn Grady took the responsibility since they were interested in the upkeep of the cemetery.

Since that time money was collected, the cemetery is well cared for, and a chain link fence has been installed. Submitted by Georgia Grady

GOODWILL COMMUNITY CHURCH

The original founders of Goodwill Community Church were George and Christina Hall, Carl and Eva Parsons, and Kermit and Pearl Skeens, who desired to build a church sanctuary for the people of the community in which they might worship freely. The land was donated by George Hall and was cleared by George Hall and Kermit Skeens. The building was constructed by Delmer White and Newton Rhodes. Before the building was completed, the original founders were joined by Guy and Oma Parsons, and French and Opal Groves. Upon arriving at the Jackson County Court house, Mrs. Christina Hall discovered that a name for the church had to be listed at the time of recording the deed. After prayerful thought she was impressed to write GOODWILL COMMUNITY CHURCH.

Goodwill Community Church

Through the generosity of many people, the new structure was furnished. Carl Parsons provided the hand-made pews which he had acquired from an old abandoned church building. The first piano was delivered by French Groves who received the donation from the Ripley Tabernacle Church of Ripley, W.V. Loreen Skeen gave the chandelier which hung over the pulpit. And Carl Parsons built the first pulpit. To complete the sanctuary for services, a pot-belly stove stood near the center of the room and kerosene lamps hung on the walls to provide the light for evening devotions. Then to call the people to worship, an old bell was found by Toy Smith in a school house that was being demolished. Toy sold the bell to the church for $50.00.

In November of 1957, the building was ready for use. Many progressive changes have taken place in the little church by the road through the years since its humble beginnings. Electric lights were donated by O.J. Morrisons of Ripley, W.V. Gas heat came in 1964. Classrooms were added to the back about the same time. By 1986 additional classrooms, entry, plumbing for water and sewage were added to the front of the sanctuary. This and many other improvements were made thanks to the generous friends, members, and citizens of our community.

Today the church continues to grow in number and spiritual blessings due to its early founders and community members who remained faithful to the Work of God and the Lord's great commission to "go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." (Mark 16:15). The church's ministry has grown to include a YOUTH program, visitation ministry, storehouse ministry, choir, missionary support, and a ladies' community outreach ministry. Some of the early founders' descendants remain in the membership and continue the work begun by their ancestors.

The first secretary-treasurer was Pearl M. Skeens and the original trustees were George Hall, Kermit Skeens, Guy Parsons, Victor Skeens, and French Groves.

Former pastors of the church include: Macel Raines, Lincoln Jones, Junior Casdorph, Stanley Skeens, Noble Harper, Anton Hager, Jacke Reynolds, Columbus Hackney, Thomas Young, Wilburn Lucas, and Clyde Syner. The current pastor is S.R. Parsons, Jr.

The church is located one mile east off I-77 Kenna Exit, on Kentuck Road. Morning services are 10:00 a.m. Sunday. Evening services are 7:00 p.m. Sunday and Wednesday. Submitted by Judy Taylor

GOSHEN BAPTIST CHURCH

The Goshen Baptist Church, of Kentuck, W.V., was organized June 9, 1877, by Rev. Swagger, with the following charter members: Franklin Skeen and Phebe Skeen, his wife; Isaac Counts and Margaret (Peggy) Counts, his wife; Abednego B. Kiser and Rebecca Kiser, his wife; John Henry Skeen and Margaret Skeen, his wife; and Henry Kiser. The members built a log house near the residence of C.C. (Canaan) Counts, for a church, and called S.M. Farrell as pastor. He resigned after two years, and the church was without a pastor for a while, but had meeting every month, the Rev. A.B. Kiser preaching for them occasionally. On August 4, 1884, J.C. Richardson became pastor, and served until July 3, 1886. A council meeting was called to ordain John H. Skeen, and license him to preach. The council consisted of the following ministers, Jonathan Smith, J.C. Richardson, W.A. Cadle, J.C. Stump, P.S. Chandler, and a Dr. Bond, a deacon of the Ripley Church. On August 3, 1886, J.H. Skeen became pastor and served for many years. On December 2, 1899, W.H. Maddox became pastor, and during his term of service, scores of members were added to the church. After he resigned, the church was without a pastor for some time, but still had their regular meetings, with J.H. Skeen, moderator pro-tem.

On January 21, 1921, Rev. Skeen passed away. The church then called D.D. Smith, of Roane County, who served for one year. Then a P.C. Moore, of Kanawha County, served for a short time.

On July 5, 1909 the members met and voted to build a new church house on a lot that had been secured from the late J.P. Kiser, on what is known as the Cleek Flats, near the residence of Adeline Poling, and the following committee was appointed to secure funds: S.J. Smith, Henry Kiser, F.P. Skeen, W.K. Skeen, W.B. Smith, J.P. Kiser, C.C. Counts, M.S. Smith, Cora L. Smith, N.A. Skeen, Clara Skeen, Ida Counts, M.E. Skeen, Martha Skeen, Mary Skeen, Rebecca Lee, and Maggie Skeen. Funds were soon secured, the building completed, and dedicated the following September. A Rev. Summers preached the dedication sermon. Joshua Skeen, F. Skeen and W.B. Smith were made trustees of the church. S.S. Rhodes was called as pastor, and during his term he held a protracted meeting, assisted by Rev. T.O. Powers, that was very successful. After his resignation, Rev. Powers was called as pastor, and he served approximately 14 years, and was much loved and respected by the members. Rev. Jack Slater, of Fishers Ridge, followed Rev. Powers as pastor, and served five years. After him came Ed Hutton, who served three years, followed by Vairl Winters who served five years; a Preacher Ross, who served only a short time; then Mr. Hutton came back for two or three years. Then a period of time elapsed in which there was no pastor, but the many young people in the area had young peoples meeting every week. Then, from 1946 to 1950, Clessie Casto served as pastor. He was followed by Herbert Anderson, for one year. Then Orville Walker served one year, followed by Ott Smith for two or three years, and he was followed by Noble Harper, for two or three years, then Orville Walker came back as pastor, in 1960. During his tenure, Warren Anderson, of West Charleston, substituted for him while he had eye surgery. Walker resigned in September 1983, and was followed by Buck McClanahan who served till July 19, 1984. Jim Jordon served from August 9, 1984 to July 1986. Gary White, the present pastor, began his tenure August 4, 1986, and is still serving at the present time, January 1990.

GRACE EPISCOPAL CHURCH, RAVENSWOOD

From 1836 Mr. Henry Fitzhugh held the Episcopal service in his home. Rev. Mr. Wheeler held services from 1842-1844. The first Episcopal visitation was made in 1843 by Bishop Johns.

Grace Episcopal Church was built in 1851 on Washington street between Walnut and Sand streets. The church building was consecrated on November 4, 1851 by Bishop Meade of Virginia, who at the same time confirmed a class of eight persons. The selection of a name for the church had been referred to Mrs. Henrietta Fitzhugh, who called it Grace Church. Ravenswood Parish was admitted to the diocese of Virginia at the Diocesan Council of 1852.

Original Grace Episcopal Church

In 1881, while Rev. Jacob Brittingham was vicar, the first steps were taken toward securing funds for building a vicarage upon lots donated by the Fitzhugh family, at the corner of Walnut and Ann streets. The vicarage was sufficiently completed for occupancy in July 1884.

In 1895 the (Washington street) Church was beautified by the addition of a tower, removal of the gallery, new pews, new carpet, and redecorating of the walls and ceiling. This work was made possible by a legacy of Mrs. Henrietta Fitzhugh Barre.

On Sunday night October 7, 1900, the church building was totally destroyed by a fire which originated in a nearby store. Most church furnishing including the new organ were lost.

The thousand dollars received from insurance together with $360 secured from the sale of the lot gave a start on the building fund for the new church, which was to be built next to the Vicarage on Walnut street. It was completed within a year for the sum of $3,134.90 which included the cost of the bell and memorial windows. Mr. Henry Progler, the contractor, deserves much credit for the simple church building with its excellent acoustics. The stained glass windows were probably made in Wheeling.

On July 27, 1902 the new Grace Church was consecrated by the Right Reverend George W. Peterkin, the first Bishop of West Virginia.

In 1946 extensive repairs and improvements were made on the Vicarage. That fall the Rev. Frederick F. Valentine, Jr. came to Grace Church as Vicar.

From this time on the church has had various vicars but there has always been a small but active congregation, with regular services and church school.

In 1948 the decision was made to build a Parish house. A building plan and method of financing presented by Rev. Valentine and the Vestry were unanimously approved by the congregation on Sunday, February 13, 1949. Groundbreaking services were held on Sunday April 3, 1949. The Parish House was dedicated by Bishop Strider on December 17, 1949.

To mark the 130th anniversary of Grace Church, in 1981, the floors and pews were refinished, new carpeting put down, and a memorial garden planted.

Service records of the church since 1852 and other historical documents are preserved at the church. For information write Grace Episcopal Church, 404 Walnut Street, Ravenswood, WV 26164. Submitted by Edwin D. Rauh

GRASS LICK BAPTIST CHURCH

The history of the Grass Lick Baptist Church, of Kenna, WV, began in 1853 when the North-Western Virginia Baptist Association appointed the Rev. Joseph A. Wright as a Missionary; his salary was $25.00 a month. According to records preserved at the West Virginia Baptist Historical Archives at their Parchment Valley Camp, near Ripley, WV, the Rev. Wright's job was to go to the western counties of Virginia that bordered the Ohio River, and bring together at various points the Baptists scattered throughout the country, organizing them into new churches. The work was very hard. In a report to the Virginia Association he writes that in 1854 "he preached 99 sermons, baptized one convert and collected $8.52 for the Board." He also notes, "the moral condition of my field is bad, but not hopelessly so. The cause is slowly but steadily progressing."

In 1854, the Grass Lick Baptist Church was organized by Rev. Wright, with nine members as follows: Abraham Litton and Barbara, his wife; Zadock Goodwin and Mary, his wife; Matthias Goodwin and Amanda, his wife; Alphius Armstrong, Thomas Power and Rachel Greene. By 1857, the membership of the Grass Lick Baptist Church had increased to 29.

For the first 20 years after the church was organized, services were held in the members homes because there was no church home. Then in 1874, according to an account by Mr. Alonzo Maddox, "the good Lord put into the minds of the people to build a church house. Soon the ringing of axes were heard in the woods; the finest poplars and white oaks were felled, scored, hewed and hauled to the site and a house was soon erected."

The first church stood about in the center of what is now the main church parking lot, and served as church home until the church was destroyed by fire on November 23, 1916. At a meeting on November 30, 1916, the membership decided to rebuild on the same site where the first church had burned.

Original Grass Lick Baptist Church, built 1874

The work moved along slowly due to a lack of money and materials, but finally the second building was completed and on Sunday, October 20, 1918, a dedication service was held. As the years went by, the church membership grew and in the late 1940s the congregation decided the time had come to build a new and larger church home. The new masonry building was constructed by the side of the old church and contained a larger sanctuary, classrooms, kitchen and fellowship hall. This present structure was built in 1949 and was dedicated June 25, 1950. The old church was then dismantled to make room for a parking lot for the church.

Grass Lick Baptist Church, 1989

As the church continued to grow additional space was needed and in 1973, three more classrooms, a pastor's study and a baptistry were added to the back of the church.

From its inception in 1854 to the present date of October, 1989, our church has had 29 pastors. The Rev. Vairl C. Winter served the church longer than any other pastor. Rev. Winter pastored the church from 1930 through 1943; and also from 1960 to 1971, for a total of 24 years.

The attendance for Sunday morning worship is between 100 and 110, while the Sunday School attendance averages about 90.

The church is also open for Wednesday Bible Study and Sunday evening worship service.

The Grass Lick Baptist Church is located 1/4 mile West on Pleasant Valley Road from its intersection with Route 21 at Kenna, West Virginia.

DEDICATION OF HICKORY GROVE CHURCH

Editor Herald

The largest crowd of people that ever assembled in this part of Jackson County met at the dedication of the Hickory Grove M.E. Church near Rev. W.B. Parson's farm and near W.T. Paxton's store, about one mile southeast of Kenna on November 5, 1916. The crowd was estimated to be from 2,500 to 3,000. Rev. Riffie preached a very able sermon, and the best of order was maintained all day and 40 or 50 wagons were in evidence loaded with fine things to eat. Everybody was made welcome and there was plenty of food taken away after everybody had eaten, and everybody seemed to be well-pleased and a great many spoke in the highest terms of the progress of this section in Christianity.

The church is supposed to be worth 2,000 dollars and stands on an ideal mound about one and a half miles east of the Ganes Knob, which is the highest elevation in Jackson, Putnam and Mason counties. The church can be seen a distance of 20 miles.

Hickory Grove Church

This section, including upper Grass Lick, Kenna, part of Duddeon Fork and Kentuck is as fine a country as can be found anywhere, the people are prosperous and cattle can be seen on a thousand hills; the people are well up in farming, education and refinement. Rev. W.B. Parsons deserves great praise for over-seeing and pushing to completion this fine church. He gave it his entire time and contributed from 260 to 300 dollars in various ways. Brother Parsons is well liked and respected by his people.

I am informed that 70 or 80 years ago this section was almost a wilderness, no roads, only the old Indian trail as they traveled from the Great Kanawha to Fort Randolph. No schools, no churches, the scream of the panther and the howl of the wolf was very common; the country abounded with wild hogs which fattened on acorns. John Parsons, grandfather of Rev. W.B. Parsons, was the first settler of Stonelick, about three miles from this new church. He was the first white man to cut a tree where Ripley now stands; he climbed an elm tree and cut a bear out of it, near the little bridge just above Ripley on Mill Creek, at the present Walton farm. Adam Ganes was the first settler at Kenna near the spot where Dr. F.S. Casto's house stands. Jack Lanham was the first settler of Duddeon and built a house near the mouth of Rock Hollow over 80 years ago, about a mile from the new church. John Good was the first settler in Kentuck and built a log house near where G.P. Kerns now resides, about three miles from this church. He killed a panther in a cliff of rocks just above John H. Skeen and Sons present store. Then a few years later Hiram Faber, John Duff, Francis Good, Isaac Counts, James Garrett, Peter Cleek and others settled within from three to five miles of the new church, and they would all meet with their hunting dogs and kill wild hogs for their bacon. Think now of the toil and hardships those old pioneers underwent that we could enjoy roads, schools and civil government. Think of the pioneer mothers way back in the early dawn toiling and the schutching knife, schutching flax and at the spinning wheel to provide clothing for her children and then think of our conveniences of today and it will cause us to repeat the great words sent on Morse's telegraph, "What hath God wrought." INDEPENDENCE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

McGee Chapel, Methodist Episcopal Church South, also known as Independence Church, was organized in 1872 on land deeded to M. Crow, J.G. Crum and other trustees by J.D. Custer et al., Elizabeth Custer, his wife, George W. Blake, Mary J. Blake, Ursula Starcher, Levi Hopkins, Rebecca Hopkins, E.E. Starcher, A.G. McGee and A. McGee, and later named for Minnie Crum McGee, sister of T.C. Crum.

This area was sparsely settled at that time but donations were received from surrounding communities. Men donated labor and the women brought baskets of food and carried buckets of water to the men who were working.

Since there were no hard roads at the time the Church was organized, people came from Sandyville, Beattys Run, Copper Fork and surrounding communities often filling the house. Many of the charter members were from some of these communities. The first Women's Society organized on May 24, 1896.

Then about the year 1901 the Sandyville Church was build and dedicated. Since many of the Church members belonged to the Sandyville Community, they transferred their membership to Sandyville leaving only about nine members to carry on at McGee Chapel. From 1901 until 1903 the records and stories indicate that the Church fell into disuse. Many windows were broken and the roof and floor was in bad condition.

Then with donations from Charles B. Howes and C.E. Crow and others, the Church was repaired about the year 1905. The Church was papered, lamps and an organ was purchased. In 1909 the Methodist Conference decided to reinstate old McGee Chapel and to supply one sermon a month. The First Minister after the reinstatement was Rev. T.C. Davis and the first elder was J.H. Jackson.

Since that time many improvements have been made to the Church: the Church walls were plastered, a basement laid, a vestibule added, dropped ceiling, a stairway to the basement was built inside the sanctuary, furnace replaced little gas stoves, carpeting, storm-windows and a bathroom. The big pulpit Bible was donated by Mary

Independence U.M. Church

McElroy.

According to the records, services have been held regularly in the Church since 1909. The proximity of the cemetery has occasioned many funerals but it was not until 1953 that the first Church wedding was performed. Since then there have been many such happy occasions.

The Church and grounds are in good repair and it sits on the knoll ready to welcome any one who cares to come.

CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints was founded in Seneca County, New York on April 6, 1830, and in 1832 missionary work began in what is now West Virginia.

James Jacob Riggs was born in 1842 in Greene County, Pennsylvania. He married Margaret Jobes in 1865. Years later the family moved to Wetzel County, West Virginia where in 1893 both James and Margaret were baptized in the Mormon Church. During this time, they raised nine sons and one daughter with five of their sons joining the church. In 1902, the family moved to Jackson County.

Charles was their sixth child. He was born in 1879, married Sally Estep in 1900, and in 1901 was baptized. They had two daughters and one son before Sally died in 1906. Charles married Mamie Daily in 1907. They had five daughters and four sons.

Their oldest son, John Matthew Riggs, was raised in the Mormon faith. He was baptized in 1909 and became a priest in 1917. John married Goldie Cayton in 1929 and eight months later was ordained an elder. Johns' brother, William, married Goldie's sister, Wilma, in 1930. Wilma and Goldie both converted and were baptized.

John and Goldie raised five daughters. Because they wanted their daughters raised in a gospel atmosphere, they attended a nearby church. However, they wanted to teach their daughters about their own faith, so in 1952, they started a Home Sunday School. Two years later, they became a dependent branch of the Charleston Branch.

In 1955 a number of new families started to attend the Home Sunday School. Noble and Evelyn Adkins were one of the new families that joined the group. The group had met in the Riggs home for 8½ years but had outgrown it. The Sunday School was moved to Ripley over the Farmers Feed Store on Court Street. Several fund raising projects were begun at that time that have become traditions for church members in Jackson County. One is the making and selling of candy Easter eggs. Another is the booth at the courthouse for the fourth of July celebration.

In February 1962, the saints in Jackson County were officially named the Ripley Branch. There were 110 people in the congregation, and Noble Adkins was sustained as the Branch President. Sister Ernestine Tribett was called as the first Relief Society President.

In October 1962 work began to build a chapel. Church officials instructed President Adkins to locate three places with at least two acres for a chapel site. A site on Ritchie Avenue in Ravenswood was selected. During this time, the saints continued to meet over the feed store. With no chapel available, funerals were usually held at the Independence Church near Sandyville. Sister Eva Cochran relates: "We had wonderful times over the feed store. Nothing fancy; none of the lovely facilities which help to make a church comfortable. But the spirit of the Lord abided in those three rooms and in the hearts of the people who met there." After five years over the feed store, the branch rented the old Silverton School house and moved in on December 4, 1966.

President Adkins and his counselors were released in May 1968, and Seldon Angus was sustained as Branch President in June.

The summer of 1969 brought the realization of a chapel closer. Bids were let in August. The low bid of $96,400 was submitted by Grim Construction. On October 8, 1969 ground was broken. Many of the older people in the branch were about to have a dream come true. Goldie Riggs had said on several occasions, "I'll never live to see us have a chapel." Sister Riggs happily conceded that she had been wrong.

The first sacrament meeting in the new chapel was held on August 9, 1970, and the new chapel was dedicated on March 21, 1971.

The Ravenswood Branch

On September 27, 1971, the name of the Ripley Branch was officially changed to the Ravenswood Branch. By 1972, the Ravenswood Branch members were well settled at the new chapel. Kaiser Aluminum had an impact upon the Branch. New families would move into the area only to see others transferred. This had been the pattern almost from the beginning as a Home Sunday School.

In February 1976, President Angus and his counselors were released. He had served in this capacity for seven years and eight months.

Brother Troy Rhodes was sustained as the Branch President the day brother Angus was released. Under his leadership, the branch purchased ten acres of land on Sandy Creek to be used as a welfare farm.

During the next two years, because of transfers, there were a number of changes in the Branch presidency. Brother David Janke was sustained in March 1977, Brother Seldon Angus served again as president in October of 1977, and Brother William Engels was sustained in March 1978.

Brother Engels was instrumental in the creation of the Spencer Branch. In June 1980, the Spencer Branch was organized with Brother Jerry Jensen as Branch President. President Engels started work for the building of a second phase to the chapel.

Brother Engels was released in September 1980 with Brother Tony Beardsley being sustained as the new president.

1981 saw several occurrences that would change the branch. In October, a new bridge spanning the Ohio River between Ravenswood and Great Bend, was opened, and in December ground was broken for the second phase of the Ravenswood Chapel. Phase II would double the classrooms, add a baptismal font, and a cultural hall.

In February 1982, Brother Steve Orme was sustained as a president, and in June the work on the chapel was completed. The chapel was dedicated in February 1983. Once again, the saints in Jackson County had reason for rejoicing.

The saints in Jackson County would long remember to praise God for the restoration of the gospel, and to thank those early settlers who first brought the church to West Virginia. They would long remember the difficulties they had encountered throughout the years. They quote the words of Paul in the New Testament: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith."

KLONDYKE E.U.B. CHURCH

The Klondyke Church, also called Mt. Olivet, was located at the head of Wilding Road about two miles from Nesselroad Run, near the Ravenswood-Grant District line. This church was built, in 1892, during the pastorate of Rev. I.N. Smith and dedicated by Rev. J.M. Conaway. In 1895, the Walters, Patterson, Stephens, Doolittle, Carmichael, Maple, Hall, Wilcox, Snyder, Miller and Brown families were members here. A few of the ministers who served at the church were: Rev. Simpson, Rev. Haught, Rev. Combs and Rev. Roush. Church services were last held there in the 1940s. The building, which had been purchased by Vane Walters, was destroyed by a tornado in the late 1950s. A small cemetery is located nearby. The Klondyke School, which was torn down in 1933, was also located in the same vicinity. Submitted by Carolyn Miihlbach

LIVERPOOL METHODIST CHURCH

The village of Liverpool was named for Liverpool, England, in the mid-1800s. The Harmony School Building served as a Church of the community.

Being a thriving village, a need for a church arose there. In June, 1890, the first Methodist Protestant Church was built and pastored by Rev. Joe Dunn, the builder. The church was a one-room structure, located on the hillside, near the Liverpool Cemetery, which was laid out in 1862.

The original building stood until the 1960s, when the people of the church and the community joined together to build a new building. The new building would be larger and contain Sunday School Rooms and rest rooms, as well as a sanctuary.

They practiced the old idea of "Tilling the Lord's Acre," and all turned out to produce two acres of sorghum cane. The molasses were said to be the best and cheapest available.

The officers for the project were: Ronald R. Smith, Chairperson; Jennings B. Tolley, Secretary/Treasurer; Francis F. Ball, Project Leader; Holly McVay, Bookkeeper.

The Ladies Aid Society of the church made delicious apple butter to sell also.

This church was definitely built on a sweet note! It was completed in 1962.

Liverpool Methodist Church

Later on the Methodist Church and the Evangelical United Brethren Church merged and the church is now known as The Liverpool United Methodist Church.

After 100 years, The Liverpool United Methodist Church is open for worship and we welcome you to join us.

Over the years many people have passed through the doors of this church and have been blessed for having been there. Many good pastors have led the congregations in this place.

This church was built on faith, prayer and work. Let us, the people of this community, unite to keep it active for another 100 years. Submitted by Mary K. Hill

LOCKHART UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

In 1886, Peter and Jane Archer deeded land to the Methodist Episcopal Church and the first church was built in 1887, by William Thomas and Valentine Cooper. It was located at Lockhart, in Grant District, a short distance up the creek on the north side of McGraw Run. Before the construction of the church building, services had been held at the schoolhouse with Rev. Kelley as minister. Trustees for the church were: John Thomas, W.H. Beymer, Levi Weekley, John Ball and Stephen Robbins. Rev. Grose was the first pastor in the church building and it was named in his honor. The circuit at this time was comprised of Warden Chapel, Wilding Church, Providence Church and Simpson Church. Later, White Church and Sycamore Church were added. John Ball was the first class leader and continued in that position 50 years. The first parsonage was built up McGraw Run a short distance above the church. The church was moved to its present location and rebuilt in 1921 on land deeded by Lawrence and Lillie Burke. At this time, the church was named Lockhart. The parsonage was also moved and rebuilt closer to the church. The trustees at that time were: John Ball, W.H. Beymer, J.G. Beymer, L.C. Burke, C.D. Cooper, Enoch Black, Albert Morris, N.B. Thomas and T.A. Wilson. Later, the old parsonage was torn down and a new one built by Ed Thrash and A.L. Beymer. It was used many years and was dismantled in the 1970s. In the late 1950s, Rev. John Lockhart with the help of the young people's Sunday School Class and other members of the community remodeled the church. William Beymer served as an organist for over 50 years until 1961. Mrs. James Currey gave the church a piano and Sharon VanFosson Wilkinson served as a pianist for many years. Homecomings have traditionally been held in September with a covered dish dinner and special services. Christmas programs were organized by Christine (Moore) Rasel and Easter sunrise services have been held at the home of George and Margaret Houchen.

LONG HOLLOW CHURCH

Long Hollow Church is near the Jackson and Mason County line in Ripley District, two miles beyond Foster Chapel. The deed for the Long Hollow Church property was made October 12, 1889, between Obediah Woodall and Mary Woodall, his wife, to the trustees consisting of T.A. Casto, Philip Ward, William A. Cadle, J.W. Woodall, and Obediah Woodall. A Baptist Church was erected on this property. It was dedicated December 1, 1889.

Long Hollow Church

This continued to be a thriving church for many years until most of the people had moved out of the community. A picture which appeared in the Jackson Herald was taken in 1914 and showed an attendance of 54. One of the early ministers was a Rev. Haught. To the best of my knowledge, the last service held there was during World War II when Rev. Fred Harmon held a revival service. Mrs. I.J. Smith and I walked over the hill from her place and attended the services.

Just above the church on a steep hill is the cemetery where I went a few years back and recorded the names of those buried there. Nobody had been buried there for many years until 1988 when Edna Woodall Kay was buried there. It was interesting to note that the ones donating the land, Obediah and Mary Woodall, are buried there.

Those buried there are: Fox, Arnold Lee, son of Lee and Bertha Thornton Fox; Fox, Leroy; Lathey, Emily (Ward), wife of Joseph Lathey; Lathey, Myrtle (Smith); Lathey, Mary, daughter of Myrtle (Smith) Lathey; Lathey, Marie, daughter of Myrtle (Smith) Lathey; Hysell, Alice; Kay, Edna (Woodall), wife of John Kay; Norris, Malinda, wife of Cornelius Norris; Whaley, two infant children of John Whaley; Woodall, James; Woodall, Obediah; Woodall, Mary J., wife of Obediah; Woodall, Willie (French), wife of William Woodall; Woodall, Bertha, daughter of William and Willie Woodall; Woodall, infant son of Boyd and Viva Woodall.

The picture shown of the church which is still standing and in good shape was taken by my husband a few weeks ago (Fall of 1989). Submitted by Georgia Grady

LONE OAK BAPTIST CHURCH

The Lone Oak Baptist Church building is located at Rockcastle, WV near the forks of the two streams which unite to form the headwaters of Thirteen Mile Creek. The church received its name from an immense black oak tree that stood near the front of the building. The church organization was constituted in 1895. On February 4, 1899, Perry and Ella Barnett deeded one-eighth of an acre of land, more or less, to be used by the Lone Oak Baptist Church for church purposes. The original deed named J.A. French, Levi Moore, J.M. McCroskey, Amos Riffie and J.M. Eskew as trustees. The original deed was written and notarized by T.I.C. Parsons, Notary Public. In 1897 Rev. T.E. Wallis was pastor and W.A. French, church clerk. In 1899 the Rev. B.F. Redenon, pastor and the clerk was T.M. Riffie. In 1902 the Rev. T.W. Drinen was pastor with F.M. Riffie, clerk. In 1914 the church clerk was D.B. Casto. The church was a member of the West Virginia Baptist General Association which is now the West Virginia Baptist Convention.

On August 11, 1951 the church organization appointed the following trustees: Clyde Barnette, Corda Paxton and J.C. Casto with Auline Barnett as church clerk. There is no organization of the church in existence today. Submitted by Lorraine Barnette

MEDINA CHURCH OF GOD

The Medina Church of God met at the home of Lee and Patty Ramsey on Sarvis Fork on April 19, 1981. There were 35 men, women and children. The congregation then got busy and built a concrete block building on the Larry Thomas property. The building was completed and the first service there was on August 5, 1981. Larry Thomas was the first pastor.

Property was bought from Lewis Morrison, and a larger brick building was built on the Medina Road. The congregation moved into the new building and had their first service on January 6, 1985.

Larry Thomas resigned as pastor and Bernard (Bud) McVey was elected pastor in 1987.

The Medina Gospel Mission was built in 1972, on Rush Run, at Medina, WV. The non-denominational church was built on land donated by Rev. Enoch Pursley, who has pastored the church since it was started. The first service was held on September 14, 1972, with 28 people present. The church has no membership. The doors are open for all to worship within its walls. While Rev. Pursley has pastored the church, there have been several assistant ministers. MILHOAN RIDGE BAPTIST CHURCH

The Milhoan Ridge Baptist Church is located on Route 68 north. The old Milhoan Ridge Church located on Milhoan Ridge Road is where the Church was first started in January 1962 with Rev.

Milhoan Ridge Baptist Church

Charles Parsons as pastor. Preacher Richard Batten then became the pastor of the Church asking all to build the new church on Route 68. In August 1977 we had our first meeting in the new church. The church was built by the members all taking part in helping out. The men cut the timber donated by Roy Hackney for the church. All wives helped by bringing food to the men and doing the work at home to help so the men could work on the church. Gene Waybright was pastor for a few years and Cecil Marlow was, too. Darrell Johnson has been our pastor for the past nine years. Our piano player is Deloris Alfred. Three of our oldest members passed away recently: Richard Hoselton, Bob Sams and Glen Alfred. Preacher Morris, from Ravenswood, who attended the Church, died and his funeral was the first in our new church. We invite all who do not have a church to attend to come worship with us. We usually have from 75 to 100 in attendance. Submitted by Gertie White

MILHOAN RIDGE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The church building is located on Milhoan Ridge in Grant District. It was built in 1880 by John Anthony on land obtained from William Howell. The first trustees were George W. Milhoan, John Delaney and Thomas Piatt Jr. The Milhoan Ridge cemetery is located in front of the church building and the Howell Cemetery is located across the driveway from the church. Church services have not been held there for many years. (See photo in Milhoan family history.) Submitted by Carolyn Mithlbach

MILLWOOD METHODIST CHURCH

In 1897 a Methodist Church was planned for the village of Millwood, Jackson County. It was to be built on land donated by Matthew Blackburn. The church was completed in 1899. The first trustees were: Lafayette Sayre, W.C. Batten, and James Holstein. From 1899 until 1966 uninterrupted services were held in the church, i.e., uninterrupted except for acts of God over which the good folks of Millwood had no control. We're speaking of the floods of 1913 and 1937. Only we who have lived through such calamities can understand the loss and trauma associated with them. The two above-mentioned floods were of such magnitude that they took several houses, a hotel and other buildings down river as the great Ohio overflowed its banks. In the late 19th century, just as today the Millwood Church was the focal point for many community activities.

Original Millwood Methodist Church, built 1899

On October 25, 1966, the members, with their pastor, Reverend Armor Sayre called a meeting to discuss building a new church. Reverend Sayre was the last pastor in the original church and Reverend William Sullivan was the first pastor in the new church.

Work on the new church was begun in 1967 and completed in November 1968. Many hours of labor and planning were given by the good people of Millwood. Many were not members of the church but were interested in having a new church that would be both sound and beautiful. It is of block stone construction and hardwood flooring with a full completely-furnished basement that is used for classrooms, church social functions and community activities.

Millwood U.M. Church, built 1968

During the time the church was being built, Sunday School and worship services were conducted in the basement rooms of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bowen of Millwood. In 1970 a dedication service was held at which time the church building with beautiful furnishings was dedicated completely debt-free.

Present day trustees are: Erma Burge and Mrs. R.L. Handley of Millwood and Clair Roseberry of Ravenswood. Fred Bowen is Sunday School Superintendent and Reverend Norman Wilcox is the pastor. Submitted by Mrs. R.L. Handley and Mrs. Thomas Combs

MOUNT HEBRON CHURCH

This church is better known as the Jackson Chapel Church. It is located two miles from Mt. Alto, WV, on what was then known as the Clarksburg Turnpike.

Mount Hebron Church

The dedication program reads: "Be it remembered that on Sunday July 10, AD 1887 this church was under the name of Mount Hebron dedicated to the worship of God our redeemer according to the rites and ceremonies of the United Brethren in Christ." Dedication by the Right Reverend Bishop Weaver. The Bible for the church was presented by Andrew Click, farmer. The Pastor was John Martin. The builder was J. Purdy. The land donor was John Gerlach, and the trustees were, John Gerlach, J. Fulgert, George Click, J.I. Wedge and Andrew Click.

The property for this church was bought by John and Dorothea Gerlach from Jackson Smith on September 2, 1859. The deed says there were 169½ acres for $750.00. It also states that Jackson Smith reserved 1½ acres as a burying ground known as Jackson Chapel Cemetery and School House lot.

The school house sat beside the cemetery and was also used as a church when the roads were too bad to go elsewhere. Some of the preachers at this church were, Rev. John Martin, Rev. Wilson, Rev. Waltz, Rev. Roush, Rev. Blessing and Rev. Rader.

This Church is now closed for regular services but is used for homecomings once a year for family and friends on the Sunday before Labor Day. Everyone is welcome. Submitted by Velma Gerlach Burris

MT. OLIVE E.U.B. CHURCH

The Mount Olive E.U.B. Church is located near Rockcastle, was organized in 1856, and was originally named Barnett Chapel. Mrs. Lucretia Barnett was the first member of the church and the presiding elders were Moses Michaels and the Rev. W.H. Miles. In later years the church became part of the Rockcastle Circuit and the church organization is no longer in existence. Submitted by Lorraine Barnett

MT. MORIAH CHURCH

The Mt. Moriah Church sits on a hill, overlooking beautiful Parchment Valley.

The church now stands on a lot that was deeded May 16, 1891, for the sum of $15.00, paid in hand, by S.J. Lewis, R.W. Scott and G.L. Stone, trustees, for and on the behalf of the church of the United Brethren in Christ, by the late Frank Sayre and his wife, Belle Sayre.

This Church is never to be sold, as long as it is used for a meeting place.

This Church was built and dedicated in 1896.

To my knowledge, this church is the only one around that has tiered seats. There is no problem seeing who is in the pulpit speaking.

The former log Church stood down in the lower section of the cemetery.

Some of the older families that attended Church at Mt. Moriah were the Stones, Stewarts, Scotts, Freys, Parsons, Lewis's, Hogsetts, Sayres, Castos, Woodards, Winters, Morrisons, Harts and Kessells to name a few.

In April 1887, the Superintendent of Sunday School was G.M. Morrison, the Assistant Superintendent was T.J. Rankin, the Secretary was N.M. Stewart and the Treasurer a Miss Williams.

Sunday School on Sunday, May 8, 1892: Song, Walking in the Light; Prayer by N.M. Stewart; Total Attendance, 35; Collection, 55 cents. The weather was fair.

We still have Sunday School at Mt. Moriah.

The attendance is small, but from the first Sunday in April until December we gather at the little Church on the hill to have Sunday School. The reason for closing in the winter months is due to the lack of good heating. Submitted by Mrs. Stewart (Virginia) Sayre

MT. ZION METHODIST CHURCH

The following is from The Methodist Protestant Church in West Virginia, written by Rev. I.A. Barnes, in 1926, "This is one of the appointments of the Rockport (old Wadesville) circuit, but is located in Grant District. This church began its official existence as the Lee Creek mission, then changed to Lee Creek circuit; later to Wadesville and now as Rockport circuit. Mount Zion class was organized about 1861 by Rev. D.H. Davis. It is located near the ford on Pond Creek.

Isaac Cross, James Swain, James Buckley, S. Anderson, Peter Mills, Sarah VanHorn, Lucretia Boso and Riley Wilson were charter members. The church was built during the pastorate of Rev. Joseph Dunn in 1877. Dr. J.J. Mason held a gracious revival here in 1899. There were 50 converts and additions to the church. In 1920, Rev. L.W. Loudon had a fine revival at this church in which there were 53 conversions and 46 additions to the membership of the church. This society is now in a very prosperous condition with a membership of 123."

Mt. Zion Methodist Church

In 1903, the church building, which was located near the site of the present church, was destroyed by wind. Sometime later, a new church was built. At this time, James Mills donated land for a cemetery. In 1903, the church trustees were: T.J. Mills, Hezekiah Swain and Isaiah Swain. David Swain donated land for the newer part of the cemetery in 1919. Trustees at that time were: W.S. King, B.H. Petty and H. Swain. In 1932, the church building burned and two years later, it was rebuilt on the same site, by Wilbur Keiffer, Jess Swain,

MURRAYSVILLE CHURCH

The Murraysville Methodist Episcopal Church (North), was located at the end of the Murraysville Road, in Grant District. It was about 150 feet from the railroad crossing and near the Murraysville Post Office, which was operated by Norma Polk Snyder for many years. There was probably an earlier Methodist church at Murraysville, as indicated by H.D. Somerville, in information written about the Peter Hoselton family. He stated that Peter Hoselton was one of the first trustees of the Murraysville Methodist Church, in 1850. In 1878, a Murraysville Methodist Church was built on land obtained from A.J. Flesher. The trustees at that time were: A.C. Tidd, S.S. Bigley, and A.J. Flesher.

Murraysville Methodist Church (Northern)

The church was dismantled in the late 1940s and the usable material went into the construction of a parsonage, in North Ravenswood, for the use of the minister serving Coleman Chapel and other churches on that circuit. There is a cemetery on the flat above the church site. The picture shows Mrs. Harkins on the left, and Mrs. Leona Bonar (wife of Perry M. Bonar) on the right. Submitted by Daniel Bonar and Carolyn Muhlback

MT. CARMEL BAPTIST CHURCH

Mt. Carmel Baptist Church was organized and built in the year 1912, under the leadership of Rev. T.O. Powers, who was the first pastor. The trustees were as follows: L.M. Sheets, J.M. Winters, Robert Young, Goldie Sheets was appointed Clerk. Rev. Powers served as pastor for several years.

Later on, there were several pastors until 1950 when Rev. Orville Walker came as pastor, and during his ministry, due to the deterioration of the old church, a new church was built which now stands where the old building was. The land was donated and on record by E.H. Parsons and Janetia Parsons and J.E. Hodge and Lola Hodge. Later on

Ira Mills, and others in the community. The church closed in the early 1960s. John Mills serves as the trustee for the large cemetery located beside the church. Buzz Kieffer, Ira Mills and Dale Morehouse serve as trustees for the church building. A Mt. Zion Homecoming has been held the third Sunday of August for the past several years. NEW MOSS CHAPEL

The New Moss Chapel was built and dedicated in the year 1924. The dedication sermon was preached by the Rev. C.C. Perkins. The trustees at that time were Frank Casto, Theodore Bowles and W.A. (Bill) Carney.

The New Moss Chapel was built on the site of the first Moss Chapel. The first Moss Chapel was named for the Rev. R.H. Moss. It was torn down and the new church built.

The timber for the new church was furnished by Howard M. Gore, who was a former Governor of the State of West Virginia. The farmers logged the timber, sawed and planed the lumber, and with the help of Rob Bush, who was the carpenter, they helped to build the new church.

At the time the church was built, the Rev. J.H. Bailey was the minister.

NORTH UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

The First United Brethren Church in Christ was organized in 1923. The Reverend R.L. Kelbaugh organized the North Ravenswood branch of the church in 1923. That same year it was placed on a circuit with the following churches: Silverton, Mt. Olive, Pleasant Ridge, Beech Grove and Hemlock, with the parsonage in Silverton. Rev. G.W.

United Brethren Church, North Ravenswood

Simpson was assigned as pastor with a salary of $800. There were ten charter members in the North Ravenswood church and the total enrollment of the Sunday School was 22. George W. Kellbaugh served as the first Sunday School Superintendent.

The merger of the United Brethren and Evangelical churches took place on November 16, 1946, becoming the Evangelical United Brethren Church. The membership at North was then 95.

By 1955 the church realized a need to expand because it would soon become a station church. The Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corporation had located south of Ravenswood, bringing many newcomers to the area. Attendance continued to grow and the church became a station church in 1958. The congregation purchased two lots on Virginia Street and built a parsonage at a cost of $15,000. Robert Lawson of Sandyville was the building contractor.

Reverend Denzil Proudfoot, who had served the circuit as pastor since 1956, accepted the Ravenswood charge in 1958 and moved his family into the parsonage in August of that year. He remained there until 1968. Under Reverend Proudfoot's leadership, the educational unit was constructed during 1959-1960. The addition was completed at a cost of $31,000. Winifred Barker was the official builder.

Continuing growth made it necessary to build a new sanctuary. Reverend Proudfoot presented outlines and plans for the sanctuary to the congregation and conference for approval. In August 1965 the sanctuary was completed. Bishop J. Gordon Howard presided at the dedication ceremony on October 17, 1965. Harry Gorrell was the official builder and supervisor. The note burning was in September 1975.

North U.M. Church

In 1968 The Evangelical United Brethren and the Methodist Church merged into one estate and was placed under the control of a single body, becoming The United Methodist Church.

A total of 22 ministers have served the three churches that have made up the North United Methodist Church. They are the following, with the date they came to the church in parentheses: Rev. R.L. Kelbaugh, who organized the church in 1923, Rev. G.W. Simpson (1923), Rev. W.M. Combs (1924), Rev. Roy Alkire (1928), Rev. Earl E. Roush (1929), Rev. C.G. Knapp (1930), Rev. J.C. Swain (1933), Rev. OLD CHERRY GROVE CHURCH

The Cherry Grove Church was built at an early date. From information I can get it was in the 1850s. The lot was given by Jobe Hughes. The Church was located on Cow Run about four miles from its mouth, in Union District, Jackson County, West Virginia. It was used for Church and Subscription School until the Antioch school house was built in 1861. It was built of hewed logs. Two windows on one side and part of a log cut out on the other side and greased paper put over the open place to make more light. The pulpit was a frame made of rough lumber large enough to hold one candle and a Bible. The seats on each side of the pulpit were made lengthwise of the house — one length of lumber 12 feet long. These seats were rough plank laid on trussels made of logs split in two, round side down with legs on under side. This was the Amen Corner. I can remember my little body got awful tired as my feet would not touch the floor.

Cherry Grove M.E. Church (South), 1900

The seats in the back of the building were cross-wise, made same as the front seats. This lumber was whipped-sawed.

There were pins put in the logs to hold a plank for a desk so the children could learn to write on the window side. Candles were used for lighting this Church.

I can remember when this Church belonged to what was called the Mason Mission. The ministers came from near Point Pleasant. The first preacher I remember was Rev. Rue. He always lined the hymns two lines at a time. So well do I remember him, singing the song "Let the Lower Lights be Burning." Then told of the writer and about this hymn. The next minister was Rev. Verdin, who was a very large man. When father introduced him to Henry Greathouse, he said, "Greathouse and he isn't as large as I am." When asked how large he was around the waist he replied, "I am 59 inches around the middle. I have no waist."

When this Church was too old to be used, the people of this neighborhood went to Antioch school house to worship. The Antioch school house and the Brown school house were used for worship till 1883, when the Antioch Church was built between these two school houses which housed both congregations. Father wanted a new church built at Cherry Grove. A committee was appointed and gave Thomas Hartley, Jr. the contract of building the new church for $400.00. It was completed and dedicated as an M.E. Church South in 1894.

Cherry Grove got its name by being built in a wild cherry grove. This church served that neighborhood until May 11, 1913, when one Sunday a trash fire was built in the stove and the shingle roof caught fire and the building burned to the ground. That was the end of the Cherry Grove Church. However, the cemetery is still being used. Members of the Hartley, King, Kerwood, and other families are buried here.

This church was the first building built for a church in that part of the country and the only one built for a church and a subscription school that I ever heard of. Until this building was built, the people had their services at people's homes, I have been told long ago. (Written by William M. King in 1953 at age 88.) Submitted by Ada Ruth Sayre

OPEN BIBLE CHURCH

Under the leadership and direction of Jesus Christ, Open Bible Church was started in 1971. It was started as an independent, inter-denominational, full gospel church and today that description is still accurate. The name, selected by Raymond Skeen, is meant to describe a church where the full and complete word of God is opened for study and individuals are free to come and go as God directs. For this reason, the church has never initiated a formal membership program.

The founders of the church were Raymond and Ann Skeen and Frank Ashworth. In 1986, Raymond Skeen who had held the office of pastor and co-pastor for several years voluntarily resigned. He now holds the office of an elder. Upon his resignation, Ann Skeen, who had previously served as co-pastor, accepted the full responsibility of the pastoral duties. Presently, in 1989, she is assisted by Ben Skeen who serves as the assistant pastor. Both Raymond and Ann Skeen are ordained ministers through the Calvary Evangelistic Association in Hagerstown, Maryland, and Ben Skeen is now completing the ordination process.

Frank Ashworth served for several years as an associate pastor and was ordained through the Assemblies of God. In 1975, he left Open Bible Church to pursue an evangelistic ministry. He is missed by all who knew him.

The first church services were held in a small building owned by Mrs. Ella Rhodes. The building was located at the beginning of Straight Street in Ripley, West Virginia, and is the current location of the Mason Glass parking lot. Mrs. Rhodes was gracious and charged no rent for the facilities. So, the church's only expenses were electricity, water, and supplies. All of the ministers worked at other jobs in order to support their families. Pews, a piano, and a pulpit were all purchased for approximately $270.00. The building was small, but for a period of time it was able to house the fledgling congregation.

Then, as the church grew, property was purchased and construction started on a sanctuary. The new property, approximately one-half acre, was located at the end of Straight Street. After many hours of joyful labor provided by the congregation, services were held in the new sanctuary on Easter Sunday, 1974. Throughout the years, there have been renovations and additions to the building. In the early 1980s, a foyer was added and the church's front entrance was extensively landscaped. In 1986, a full basement, located directly behind the original sanctuary, was added. In 1988 and 1989, the upper level of the sanctuary was extended to cover the new basement. Presently, the facilities provide over 5000 square feet of space. Future construction plans include a separate building behind the church to conduct teaching seminars and minister to the needs of the poor.

Open Bible Church

When the church first started, services were offered on Sunday morning, Sunday night and Wednesday. Now, the church offers a variety of services and is involved in a number of ministries. On Sunday morning, there is a worship service and classes for all ages. On Sunday night there are services and once a year for a period of three months there is a class offered before the evening service on Bible foundational truths. Also, on Sunday night, there is children's church for ages three through fourth grade. On Tuesday morning, there is a service for the ladies in the area. On Wednesday night, there are services for the adults, younger boys and girls and teenagers. Also, every other Saturday night, the church offers a Bible study. Over the years, the number of services and the types of services have changed, and as the Lord directs, we expect additional changes in the future.

In addition to the services offered, the church is also involved in other ministries. Every Saturday since September, 1976, a radio program, the Blessed Hope Program, has aired on WMOV, a radio station broadcasting from Ravenswood, West Virginia. Also, most messages given at the church are taped and made available for others to purchase or use. Another ministry is the article entitled, "And So It Is," which has been placed in The Jackson Herald each week since 1987. In 1989 a new endeavor was launched, the Open Bible Church Pre-school. This is a non-profit operation which provides instruction to pre-school children three mornings each week. Along with these ministries which impact the local church, ten percent of all church funds are set aside for contribution to missionary works and many individuals in the church also support foreign missionaries.

This history has provided one with some facts and figures related to events at Open Bible Church. However, the events of eternal significance are fully known only by God and are recorded in heaven. Therefore, as we look back at the past and forward to the future, we recognize our dependency upon our Father God and like the Apostle Paul we press on.

OTTERBEIN CHURCH

According to records, earliest members of the United Brethren denomination in the Angerona Community were Rev. Joseph Sayre, Mrs. Adaline Stutler, Anna M. Ong, Rachel Sayre, Rev. and Mrs. William Cunningham, Kate Parsons and likely others. In 1864, William and Elizabeth Cunningham deeded to a Board of Trustees, consisting of Elias Stone, Joseph Sayre and others, a tract of land on which the first Otterbein Church was built.

After 30 years, while G.W. Pringle was pastor, it was decided to tear down the old church building and erect a new one. The present Otterbein Church was dedicated October 25, 1896, by Bishop N. Castle. The following is a description of the dedication: (taken from files of "Religious Telescope," WV Wesleyan College, November 4, 1896) "The house is a beautiful frame structure, 30 x 51 ft. It is the most beautiful country church in the bounds of the Columbia District, an honor to the community in which it is located, and an honor to the denomination. It was completed at a cost of $1,144.78, there being a debt of $430.00 to be provided for on the day of the dedication. The weather being pleasant, there was a large audience present, and after a very interesting sermon by the Bishop, he proceeded to provide for the debt. In a short time we had reached over half the amount when we adjourned in the afternoon. Preaching began again. After hearing a noble sermon the debt was provided for, having reached the sum of $453.50. After singing the hymn "The Crowning Day," the house was solemnly given to God. Another victory has been won. Let us thank God and take courage." Those who were instrumental in building the church were Sayres, Staats, Hunts, Crows, Stewarts, Harpolds, McKowns, Norrises, Witherows, Greers, Kings, McIntyres, Castos and Cunninghams.

Otterbein Church

In 1986, the building was purchased from the United Methodist Church Conference (the E.U.B. and Methodists having joined denominations in 1969) by friends and community residents who repaired the building to its present condition. The Otterbein Memorial Cemetery Corporation now has a Board of Trustees that is responsible for the upkeep of the church building and cemetery. In 1989, those trustees were Adrian Parsons, Geraldine Parsons, Golden Raines, Chardean Cunningham Hutchison, and Hazel Sayre Johnson. Submitted by Chardean Hutchison

OUR SAVIOR LUTHERAN CHURCH

With the construction of the Kaiser Plant and the start up of operations a number of persons accustomed to Lutheran worship practices moved into the Ravenswood area. The majority of these people were from the west coast. Due to the combined efforts of these people and the Lutheran synodical leaders, worship services were begun and eventually a congregation was formed.

Worship services were first held in the fall of 1957 in the Ravenswood Community Building by visiting Lutheran pastors. In the summer of 1958 the worship services were moved to a rented store room on Sand Street and Sunday School was added. Also, beginning in 1958 the worship services were conducted by seminary students in the summer and during other months by the Rev. Dr. John Pettit, professor at Marietta College. Starting in the fall of 1960 Daniel H. Bennett was sent by the Lutheran Synod of West Virginia to serve as lay pastor.

In the fall of 1961 the building of the Walton (now First) Methodist Church at the corner of Walnut and Henry Streets was purchased with the help of the Lutheran Mission Board and worship services were moved to that location. In January 1962 the congregation was officially organized and the Rev. George C. Weirick was called as the congregation's pastor. He began his ministry on June 1, 1962. Improvements made to the building at this time included new rest rooms, new kitchen cabinets, new electrical wiring and an additional stairway. The property behind the church building was purchased, the house removed and the area paved for a parking lot.

Our Saviour Lutheran Church

As Kaiser transferred its employees in and out of the Ravenswood Works so the membership of Our Savior Church moved. The average length of stay was four or five years. In the meantime local residents joined the congregation and helped to make the membership more stable. During the period from 1962 to 1970 a number of educational and social ministry programs were provided by the congregation. Also a Cub Scout Pack was sponsored by the congregation. As the community became more developed some of these needs were provided by government resources and the need for the congregation to provide these programs diminished.

In May, 1976 Our Savior Church became part of the Mason-Jackson Lutheran Shared Ministry with Pastor Weirick continuing as pastor. In 1983 the indebtedness on the church building and parking lot was completely paid. In January 1984 the old furnace broke down and a completely new heating system was installed with air conditioning in the worship areas. Pastor Weirick retired at the end of February, 1989. The Reverends Richard and Patricia Bonds-Krug accepted calls to the shared ministry and began their work on September 15, 1989.

Our Savior Church continues to provide a confessional witness to the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, worship and educational programs according to the practices of the Lutheran Church.

PLEASANT HILL CHURCH

The Pleasant Hill Church is located in Parchment Valley about seven miles southwest of Ripley on a high point overlooking the valley in both directions.

The first settlers of the community were natives of Franklin County, Virginia, and arrived here about 1818. In the year 1844 a circuit rider named Sam Black came through Jackson County. With the help and encouragement of Jabel Bowles, a class of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized at the Bowles home. Charter members were Jabel and Nancy Mason Bowles, Job and Frances Bowles Kessel, Samuel and Melinda Simmons, Mason and Sarah Stout Bowles, Joseph and Mercy Carney Stout, Henry and Mary Elizabeth Simmons Parsons, Jephtha and Rachel Lewis Mason.

Jabel Bowles was the leader in building a log church a few yards from his home. The new church was called the Bowles Church for many years, sometimes Parchment, then later Pleasant Hill. It was located about 300 yards down the hill from the present church. Jabel Bowles was licensed as a local preacher in 1860 and was continued in this status until his death.

The congregation grew and by 1875 the little log church had become inadequate. The present building was started in 1876 and was dedicated September 1, 1878, with Rev. F.L. McGee as pastor. The building committee consisted of L.W. Bowles, James M. Kessel, Ammon H. Boswell, George R. Casto and William A. Kessel. Land for the new church was given by George R. and Margaret Casto. The church was built adjacent to the cemetery which had been established some 50 years earlier. The first person buried in the Pleasant Hill cemetery was Miss Susannah Parsons, who died in 1826.

Pleasant Hill Church

During most of its history Pleasant Hill was a part of the Ripley Circuit. For many years the circuit consisted of Ripley Epworth, Mount Olive, Briscoe and Pleasant Hill.

In 1887 Rev. S.F. McClung reported that Pleasant Hill Sunday School was organized and lessons for 60 persons secured. We do not know whether this was the first Sunday School or simply a reorganization.

With outstanding leadership and an energetic membership, Pleasant Hill became one of Jackson County's outstanding rural churches during the latter part of the 19th and the first part of the 20th century. In 1944 in spite of wartime travel restrictions, more than 160 people attended the centennial of the church's founding. At that time a memorial to Jabel and Nancy Bowles was dedicated.

Unfortunately, by the late 1960s, declining population of the community brought about discontinuance of regular worship services. However, an active board of trustees makes sure that the church and adjoining cemetery are kept in good condition. A homecoming is held annually the third Sunday of August. Submitted by James C. Kessel

PLEASANT RIDGE E.U.B. CHURCH

The Pleasant Ridge Church was located two miles from Route 21 on the Dewey Thomas Hill Road (also known as Pleasant Ridge), in Grant District. Land for the church was obtained from J.M. and Bedilia Cheuvront in 1880. The first trustees were: A.W. Sutton, J.M. Cheuvront and Jacob Midkiff. Land for the cemetery was also obtained from J.M. Cheuvront in 1899. The trustees at that time were: J.M. Cheuvront, Silas VanFosson, James Smith and John Kelbaugh.

Pleasant Ridge E.U.B. Church

Pleasant Ridge was on a charge of churches with Beech Grove, Gates Ridge, Mt. Hope and Bethel for several years before the church was closed. Church services were discontinued in the late 1960s and the building was dismantled in 1980. The cemetery is maintained by the following trustees: Glen VanFosson, Russell Wells, Henry Sullivan, Elzie Palmer and Eugene Pursley. Submitted by Carolyn Muhlback

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

As early as 1836, Rev. Francis Dutton, who was then stationed at Pt. Pleasant as pastor of the Presbyterian Church, also preached at intervals in the homes of Presbyterian families in Ravenswood.

In 1847, a Presbyterian church was organized under the Greenbrier Presbytery. In 1857, a church building was erected. It was a plain square building and was provided with simple gothic windows. When first built, there was a slave gallery in one end of the building, that was later removed after the Civil War.

The church lot was given for a small sum by William Harmon, a teacher and preacher from New York. He owned the entire half square later occupied by Nowells Drug, M.E. Church, South, Presbyterian Church and also Union Academy was built on lot adjoining Presbyterian Church, and conducted by Harmon, who was a brother-in-law of C.M. Rice, member of the Presbyterian Church and original trustee of the town of Ravenswood.

This church building is located at the corner of Mulberry and Virginia and is now occupied by the Church of God.

The first minister who served the church as an installed pastor, was Rev. W.C. Neely.

Church growth was so wide spread after Kaiser Aluminum Plant was built here in the '50s, that the Presbyterian Church started making plans for a new building. Three acres were purchased on Kaiser and South Ritchie and a new church was dedicated June 1962. Submitted by Madalene McMaster Crum and Hazel Williamson

PROVIDENCE M.E. CHURCH

In 1889, Thomas and Cornelia Hughes deeded land for the Providence M.E. Church, which is located at the junction of Route 21 and the Brushy Fork Road, in Grant District. Before this time, the Methodists met at the old Providence School. The trustees in 1889 were: John M. Archer, M.C. Thornton, Jesse McPherson and George Steel. A church building was constructed by Stacy Harbin and was to be dedicated on July 20, 1889. Tragedy struck the area on July 17th in the form of a devastating flash flood. The church was washed from its foundation and heavily damaged. Mrs. Cornelia Hughes and four of her children were drowned in the rushing waters. Mr. Hughes managed to cling to a tree and was saved. (For more information about this flood, see The Disastrous Flood by Lenora Low.)

In 1891, Jesse McPherson deeded land for a new church near the same site, but further away from the creek. At this time, the trustees were: J.Q. Archer, Norman Dowler, John Sheets, M.C. Thornton and W.L. Archer. Services continued in this church until it was closed in the late 1960s. A cemetery is located beside the church.

Records show the following people were members of the Providence Church in the 1890s: John, Lydia, C.E. RIPLEY CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE

The Ripley Church of the Nazarene got its start in the early part of 1974. The first meetings were held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Simpson on Third Avenue in Ripley. These were Thursday evening meetings and different pastors from other Nazarene churches came to speak and encourage. It wasn't long before they found a more adequate meeting room behind Mendy Dawn's Beauty Salon on Church Street.

On the first day of March, 1974, the Ripley Church received its first pastor, Rev. Raymond Pyle was called to launch the work in Ripley.

The Thursday evening meetings continued until March 17, 1974. It was on that day, St. Patrick's Day, that the first Sunday Morning Worship and Sunday School session was held.

By this time, land had been located off Cedar Lakes Drive and negotiations for the property began. Shortly thereafter the land was purchased and plans were under way for a new church.

On Mother's Day, May 12, 1974, the Ripley congregation officially became the Ripley Church of the Nazarene. On May 22nd, 1974, the contract on the property at 209 Cedar Lakes Drive was closed.

Ground-breaking followed nine months later for the new church. With a five-handle ceremonial shovel, Dr. M.E. Clay, Rev. Raymond Pyle, Jarrell Snodgrass, Vernon Jones, and George Pittman turned the first shovel.

On March 31st, 1975, Rev. Pyle resigned as pastor. Rev. Kenneth Morton and family arrived as new pastor on June 18th, 1975.

Progress continued on the new church building and the big dream came true on June 29th, 1975, when the congregation moved their furnishings into the new church building on Cedar Lakes Drive. Three months later, on October 5th, the congregation was able to move from the downstairs level into the new sanctuary upstairs.

Ripley Church of the Nazarene

When Rev. Morton accepted a call to the Man Church of the Nazarene in the Fall of 1978, Rev. David Miller of Columbus, Georgia, accepted the Ripley church's call and arrived with his wife in January, 1979.

The church continued to grow. In the Fall of 1985, property for a church parsonage was purchased at 402 Cedar Crest Drive. Construction began, with Jerry Southall acting as contractor. Rev. Miller and his family moved into the beautiful new parsonage in 1986.

In June, 1987, Rev. Miller accepted a call to pastor the Warner Robbins, Georgia, Church of the Nazarene. In July, 1987, Rev. Eddie Estep and family arrived to pastor. The church is alive and growing, and still proclaiming a message of "Holiness Unto the Lord." A mortgage burning service on the present building is being planned and a building program involving a new sanctuary and expanded parking facilities will be launched in the near future. RIPLEY TABERNACLE CHURCH

The bell rang for the first time at the Ripley Tabernacle church on February 6, 1949. A special series of meetings began with the pastor, Delmar C. (Dutch) Guthrie in charge. He was assisted by Rev. Orland Reynolds of Looneyville, WV.

Rev. Guthrie and the building committee, Herbert Rawlings, Charles Tolley and Lew Hanna along with trustees, O.A. Brooks, Mrs. Herbert Rawlings and C. Walter Tolley met in June 1948. At this meeting Orville Thomas was given a contract to build at the cost of $20,000.00. The harmony and spirit of cooperation shown by the people was magnificent as they worked shoulder to shoulder to see their dream of this church come true.

The land was donated by Walter Tolley and the seats were donated by Dr. C. Royal Kessel and his son Charles Enoch Kessel.

For the first sermon delivered in the new church on Sunday, February 6, Rev. Guthrie, pastor, chose the words uttered by Jeremiah after the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem, using that portion which says, "For the people had a mind to work."

June 6, 1949 the Ripley Tabernacle was dedicated with Rev. Hobson Fisher, President of the West Virginia Tabernacle delivering the message. Featured singers were the Crown Quartet, Dunbar Mountain Mission Quartet, Orma Chapel Quartet and the Barber Four.

The Ripley Tabernacle was founded and dedicated as a non-denominational church where people of any denomination could feel free to attend and worship God.

Money and jobs were scarce and income was low but the people worked diligently to pay the church debt. Their faith never faltered or failed and there was always a way to provide our needs.

Rev. Guthrie was a friend to all. He was always on call when someone needed a friend to talk to about a problem or to be introduced to our Savior, Jesus Christ.

The Tabernacle has seen many changes. The latest being the demolition of the original building and a new and larger church was built in 1987. New Years Eve 1989 the lights of the beautiful new steeple were turned on. The pastor at this time is Rev. Bob Hodges. Submitted by Roy B. Guthrie and David C. Guthrie

ROCKCASTLE E.U.B. CHURCH

The Rockcastle E.U.B. Church is located in Mason County near the Jackson County line. Land for the building site was donated by John West Sayre, the timber and lumber for the building was donated by John Stone and sons, S.P. Stover and sons, William Cain and sons, and the lumber was whipsawed. J.B. Dunham and sons were the carpenters and William Cain furnished shingles for the first roof which was later replaced by a tin roof. The church was dedicated, November 2, 1879, and the first trustees were Johnny Stone and Jess Dunham. The church building is now 111 years old and there is no church organization in existence. Submitted by Lorraine Barnette

SANDYVILLE CHURCH OF CHRIST

On July 2, 1896, George C. Owens, L. Owens and Oby Owens deeded a parcel of land to Warren V. Woody, Samuel Hostelle and W.S. Johnson, Trustees of the Church of Christ at Odaville, Jackson County, West Virginia. The land was located about a quarter of a mile east of the village of Odaville, between Turkey Fork Road and Turkey Fork Creek. The land was to continue to be the property of the church until it ceases to be used strictly for legitimate purposes, at which time it would revert to the grantors or their heirs.

The meeting house was erected that year by local members, including George Owens, Charles E. Morgan who was a carpenter by trade, and possibly Bill Johnson. Other members included Mrs. Bill Johnson, Edward E. and Judith Ann Smith, J.A. and Allie Duke, Riley and Nora Smith, Tom and Nettie Gibbons, Bill and Maggie Gibbons, Louie and Mable O'dell, and Mr. and Mrs. J.N. Miller. Words placed over the door read: 1885, Christian's House of Worship, Odaville.

Christians House of Worship

Membership grew for a time and then fell off as some of the older members moved to town and others passed away. In May of 1948 only seven active members remained. At that time the Camden Avenue Church of Christ in Parkersburg sent their minister, Ross Swindler, to hold a series of Gospel Meetings at Odaville. The results were four men and women baptized into Christ. Baptisms took place in Turkey Fork Creek in a deep hole of water below the bridge, even though the temperature at times was quite cold.

Camden Avenue continued to support their preacher in gospel meetings at Odaville for the next year or two and the membership grew. By 1971 the building was no longer adequate for the growing membership. The need for classrooms, baptistry and other facilities prompted the men to seek a new location along a better road and with more adequate parking facilities.

In the fall of 1971, property was purchased from Fannie Murray, one-half mile north of New Era on Route 21. Construction of the new building began in the spring of 1972. A contractor was hired to do all the outside and rough work but the members did all the inside finishing of the building.

Construction was completed and a series of gospel meetings were held in the fall of 1972. Since that time, two extra rooms have been added to the building and a house for the preacher was constructed in 1983.

The first full time preacher of the Sandyville Church of Christ was Nick Deiger, January 1972-September 1979. Eugene Conger was the preacher from November 1979 to September 1980 and Denver Haught from January 1983 until the present. The membership now stands at 93. They help support two other gospel preachers and other mission work and benevolence as they are able, have a weekly radio program and regular newspaper columns. Submitted by Denver E. Haught

SECOND BAPTIST CHURCH

Second Baptist Church was organized as a New Testament Church February 21, 1957, in Ravenswood, West Virginia. The organizational meeting was held at B&E Trailer Court attended by Rev. and Mrs. Earl Miller, Jr., Don Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dotson. Rev. Miller, founder and first pastor, set forth the following principles upon which the Church would be built: Baptistic in doctrine, separated in practice, and evangelistic in approach.

In May 1957, the Church was officially chartered by Earl and Gloria Miller, Elva Dawkins, Charles and Nellie Dotson. That fall, aided by Ruth D. Morse, this group purchased residence on corner of Ann and Elwood Streets, which is present location. A new A-frame auditorium was built in 1962.

As an outgrowth of a tent meeting in 1962, Second Baptist established Cottageville-Evans Baptist Church under the leadership of John Lynn and family. Rev. Fred Mann was their first pastor.

Rev. Ken Derrington was called to Second Baptist in 1963. With a rapidly growing congregation, the additions of two-story west wing and east wing became necessary and the present auditorium was started. The WMOV radio ministry was expanded to five days a week and Sunday morning worship service. The bus routes transported many to services and grew to include Jackson, Mason, Roane, Wirt and Wood Counties under the direction of Jack Carroll. A.C. Cooper is now Director.

Second Baptist Church

In 1972, Rev. Max Clifton came as first Minister of Youth. He and wife Jean were able to reach many youth for Christ. They left for another position in 1975 leaving behind a greatly expanded Youth Department. Rev. and Mrs. Cleve Smith served in this capacity 1984-89. Our present Youth Minister is Rev. John Jones and wife.

Heritage Christian Academy was established 1975 and moved into new building 1976 with John Henry as Principal.

Rev. Larry Applegate served as pastor 1977-78.

Our present pastor, Rev. Fred N. Lowry, was called 1978. He is a vital leader faithfully spreading the gospel of Christ through our many ministries. Our church supports 110 missionaries.

Mr. Billy Wayne Priest was added to the church and school staff and served from 1977-1981.

On September 29, 1979, Dedication Service was held for the completed 1200 seat auditorium and since that time progressive renovation has enlarged the older auditorium and wings to increase space needed for Sunday School classrooms, Fellowship Hall, kitchen, choir room, etc. A bus garage and additional classrooms for HCA have also been built.

Rev. Fred Lowry, Jr. came to assist his father, serving as Assistant Pastor and Principal of HCA for about five years. He and wife Vickie contributed much to the music program of our Church and HCA during their stay in Ravenswood.

There have been many others who have assisted and served Second Baptist and HCA through the years. At present Bill Bartlett is S.S. Superintendent, Jim Shreve is Principal of HCA and eight deacons serve. Souls are being saved and baptized into the Body of Christ and the Lord is blessing. To God be the glory! Submitted by Judy Casto and Dorothy S. Rardin

SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTIST

One summer, in the late '30s, Elder Moffitt and a Brother Herlinger, from Parkersburg came down to Ravenswood and held a series of meetings explaining Seventh-day Adventist's beliefs. While the meetings created a stir among those who attended, nothing permanent resulted. Later, in the mid-'50s, another group from Parkersburg tried to arouse an interest in the area. They rented a church building on Trace Fork and conducted Sabbath School each Saturday for a number of weeks, but, again, nothing of a permanent nature resulted.

Finally, in 1985, Elder John Oddic, pastor of the Charleston Church, along with members of his church living in Jackson County, decided to conduct in Ripley, a series of studies based on the book of Revelation. Attendance was good and as a result, a weekly Sabbath School was started in the old Senior Citizen's building on Rt. 21. Not long afterward, February 22, 1986, a Company was organized with 16 members. Two years, April 16, 1988, the Ripley Seventh-day Adventist Church came into existence. Among the charter members were Marion and Ruby Parsons, long time members of the Charleston Church and who had attended the earlier meetings in the '50s, and Garnett Howell, who first became interested in the Seventh-day Adventist's beliefs as the result of having attended the meetings in Ravenswood back in the '30s.

A lot on Rt. 33, west of Interstate 77, has been purchased as a future building site. Until then, however, the congregation has converted a former shoe store, one mile north of the stop light on old Rt. 21, into a suitable chapel. The present pastor is Elder William F. Hawkes, a native West Virginian, who took charge in November, 1989.

Soft drinks have been sold at the Arts and Crafts Fair in Ripley for the last 15 years with all funds going for repairs on the church. Submitted by Barbara Sullivan

A new tile block church was built and dedicated in 1927 by Rev. G.W. Burdette. The trustees were C.L. Digman, Theodore Suck, E.F. Suck, Cyrel Hutchinson and A.L. Ashcraft. The local pastor was W.H. Combs.

Silvertown U.M. Church

In 1965, the State Road Commission took the entire church lot in the construction of Interstate 77. A lot was obtained from W.H. Moore and the church building was jacked up, put on low-boy trucks and moved to the new lot. The interior of the church was completely remodeled. A full basement was added and the exterior bricked.

The old parsonage was sold. The house formerly owned by Shirley McMurray was bought and also moved to the new church lot. It was completely remodeled and bricked to match the church. In March 1967, the newly remodeled church and parsonage was dedicated by Rev. Harry Eccles, Conference Supt. The local pastor was J.C. Foster. The trustees were Bernard Finley, Fred Divers, Charles Sebert, W.H. Moore and Otis Furbee.

SINAIVILLE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Our church, the Sinaiville United Methodist Church, is one of the oldest church congregations in Jackson County. It was established in the late 1830s, over 150 years ago, shortly after the new county of Jackson was delineated on the map of then Virginia in 1831.

The church was long known as the Sinaiville Methodist Protestant Church. It was only a few years after the Rev. Asa Shinn, of Harrison County, and other members of the Methodist Church had broken with the mother church and organized the Methodist Protestant Church in 1829, that the Rev. George Nestor, a minister of the new church, met at the home of the Rev. George Casto, of this community, and established a new congregation.

The church was officially organized as the Sinaiville Methodist Protestant Church, in 1840. Among the probable first members of this church, in addition to the Rev. George Casto and wife, Sarah (Ours) Casto, were their children: John G., George Jr., David G., Joel, Nicholas, James C., Mary Magdalene, Phoebe, Sarah, Elizabeth, Louisa and Matilda Casto; Rev. Elijah J. Rollins and wife Lucretia (Casto) Rollins, and sons, James, Harrison and Jabal B. Rollins; John J. Casto and wife, Gracey (McDade) Casto, and sons, John M.D., James M., and David L. Casto; Eliakim and Mary (Slaughter) Warner; Joseph and Mary (Hill) Tolley; William Jr. and Martha (Parsons) Casto; James and Sarah (Parsons) Cunningham; Isaac and Ann Eliza (Tolley) Staats; James and Polly (Staats) Chancey, and Henry H. & Catherine (Westfall) Price. All of these early settlers were residing in the Statts Mills area at that time.

The Rev. George Casto served the church until his death in 1845. Other early ministers were Elijah J. Rollins, Archibald D. Thomas, Nicholas Casto, J.N. Smith, and others whose names are lost.

At first, services were held in the settlers homes. Later, a little log church, which also served as a schoolhouse, was built. This was a crude structure, with a huge fireplace occupying one end of the building. Poplar logs, about six feet long, split down the middle, and smoothed with an axe or adz, with four holes bored in the bottoms and wooden legs inserted, served as seats. Oiled paper or hides scraped thin and oiled were placed in small openings cut in the sides of the building to let in a little light.

Still later, a somewhat larger log structure was erected on a small bottom about the center of the Sinaiville community, which served until 1892, during the ministry of Rev. J.N. Smith, when the large, wooden, white-painted church, which most of us "old codgers" fondly remember, was built on a lot behind the Old Sinaiville Cemetery, on Tug

Old Sinaiville Church

Fork Road. Some ministers at this church, in addition to J.N. Smith, were: James F. Cunningham, Arthur Harpold, known as "the little preacher," "Dutch" Guthrie, Arnett Wyatt, Basil Pursley, John S. Sarver, the Revs. Zinn, Ray, Nestor, Cartwright, and Ernest F. Marty, the last minister there.

New Sinaiville Church

In 1962, the present church was completed on a lot donated by the late Foster F. Morris and his wife, Delpha G. Morris, on the Statts Mills Road. The first homecoming was held in June 1962. The bell in the belfry of the old church was placed in that of the new one, and is still as clear and melodious in tone as we "old residents" remember it being in the golden days of our childhood. The old pulpit and several old pews were also placed in the basement of the new church for nostalgia's sweet sake.

The Rev. Ernest F. Marty, the last minister at the old church, was also the first one here. Some others have been: J.B. Gum, James Perdue, Paul E. Parsons, "Little Joe" Hatcher, George McCline, and Wayne Hinzman, our longtime, present "bringer of the good word."

The church is now a member of the East Jackson County Circuit. Submitted by Delmer R. Hite

SAINT JOHN'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Episcopal services may have been held as early as 1855 in the Jackson County Court House by the clergy of Grace Episcopal Church, Ravenswood. It is evident, from a Court House record of 1869, that they were held at this time. But the oldest Church record in existence is the Vestry minutes of December 1, 1872, showing that St. John's Church had been established. The meeting of the Vestry was called in the law office of Major Henry C. Flesher to determine the salary of the minister, C. Randolph Page. Vestrymen present were: James A. Park, Edward Maguire, Col. Ferdinand R. Hassler, Charles H. Progler, George B. Crow and Major Flesher. St. John's dates its official establishment as 1872.

Pioneer families of Ripley had become Methodist through the influence of Circuit Riding Missionaries of the Methodist church and had built a House of Worship dedicated to the Methodist Church, South, on a street which came to be known as Church Street. A short distance South on the same street, the Episcopalians bought, for $250.00, a lot to build a church, but it was slow in materializing. Its small congregation was made up mostly from first and second generation immigrants from England, Scotland and Switzerland, who had come from churches with a liturgical background and did not feel their needs were met in the Methodist Church. Mainly, they were professional people but they had little money. Episcopal churches in West Virginia were still under the Diocese of Bishop Mead of Virginia, too far away to be interested in giving financial help. A cornerstone was laid ceremoniously but the contributions continued to be too small to build the small weatherboard church which was needed. The communicants of Trinity Episcopal church, in Parkersburg, had outgrown its building and erected a new one. In 1878, they gave to St. John's its old windows, communion table, lectern, and pulpit. The building was not completely furnished when its first service was held there by the Rev. Jacob Brittingham on May 7, 1883. The church bell, manufactured in Baltimore, Md., especially for the church, rang from a cupola above the roof in 1884. West Virginia now had a Bishop of its own, the Rt. Rev. George W. Peterkin who consecrated the church April 21, 1887.

In 1909 the church was made more attractive with Memorial stained glass windows, and the addition of a new bell tower and Vestry room. Still later a Parish Hall was added but the basic structure, now almost 100 years old, needed so much repair that the congregation decided this was impractical.

In 1971, the church Trustees (James Robinson, C.E. Goodwin, Robert Lester and Donald Flesher) sold the church property and purchased ground to build a new church on West Main Street. Ground was broken ceremoniously, August 29, 1972.

Saint John's Episcopal Church

Leaving the old building was such a sad experience that a decision was made to incorporate into the new building as much of the old as possible, the stained glass windows, altar, pulpit, lectern, even the boxwood shrubbery. Architect Clinton Bryan was employed to build the new church. Henry King was the contractor. Before the church was completed a service was held by the Rev. Arthur J. Morley. The church was dedicated October 17, 1973 by Bishops Wilburn C. Campbell and Robert P. Atkinson. Submitted by Genevieve Starcher

WALNUT GROVE CHURCH

It was in the 1880s, in the community on the headwaters of the 18-mile creek in Jackson County near the border of Putnam County, that the people began to see their need of an organized church. The area was becoming thickly settled by this time. There was plenty of timber and the settlers could erect a worship building. The families called a meeting to decide where it should be located.

One of the families, A.J. Cottrill and L.A. Cottrill, his wife, for the sum of five dollars donated one-half acre of land at the forks of 18-mile creek. Actually it was the forks of the road for the creek was all the road they had at that time. The land was deeded to the appointed trustees: B. Painter, Adam Wandling, H. Parsons, A.J. Cottrill, and Jacob Casto, and their successors for the use of United Brethren Church, and to all orthodox denominations when not occupied by the U.B. Church.

The first minister sent by the conference was Rev. J. Slaughter in 1888.

The Walnut Grove Church is listed with the churches on the following circuits, and the ministers names that served from 1888 until it was sold 1967. Sandy circuit, J. Slaughter. WARDEN CHAPEL UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

A Methodist Episcopal Church was built at Medina (in Grant District) in the year 1886 on land donated by William and Melissa Grandon. A building committee was composed of: William Grandon, George G. Naylor and Joseph Archer. Others that were active in this endeavor were: Henry Archer, Joseph Morrison, Samuel McBride, George Alexander Jr., Vincent Archer and E.J. Robinson. At a later date, remodeling was done by Brady Whitlatch, N.F. McBride, Henry Somerville and others in the community. At this time, the ceiling was lowered and the pulpit moved to the opposite end of the building.

About 65 years after the construction of the church, the bell was installed by Bill Lincicombe and some helpers. One estimate is that the bell weighed at least 800 pounds. Another remodeling took place prior to 1973. This consisted of sanding the floor and installing new carpet. The picnic tables and shelter were built in the spring of 1975 by Okey Morrison, J.C. Broome and Carroll Moore. After the death of J.C. Broome in July 1975, the family donated stain glass windows in his memory. The Warden Chapel Church discontinued services in 1987 due to a lack of attendance. At the time it was closed, Warden Chapel was on a charge of churches with Beech Grove, Lockhart and Drift Run. (For a listing of ministers, see the history on the Lockhart Church.)

Records show that the following persons have acted as Sunday School teachers: Cradle Roll Class-Effie McBride, 47 years; Youth Class-Mary McBride, Locie Mullins, Melanie Smith Casto, Ilona Mullins, Helen Meadows and Mary Moore; Adult Class-Nancy Robinson, Addie Slaven, Nellie Nesselroade, Pat Slaven, Herman Shutts, Alfred Archer, G.G. WILDING UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

On October 1, 1881, E.T. and Sarah Ann Doolittle deeded ¼ acre of land to the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Straight Fork. The first trustees were: A.L. Varner, Adam Hawk, E. Beaty, A. Bennett and Charles Williamson. The church is located at Wilding (in Ravenswood District) three miles from Silverton. The community had been known as Churchville but the name was changed to Wilding (along with the church) after a minister named George Wilding. The original church was the left section shown in the photograph. Before 1911, an addition was made along with a belltower. That belltower became damaged and was replaced in the 1930s. The coal stove was replaced with a floor furnace and other improvements have been made over the years including the addition of classrooms in 1963.

Wilding Church

In 1911, Wilding had a contest with the Ravenswood M.E. South Sunday School to see which church could gain more in attendance in one quarter. At the beginning of the quarter, Wilding had 137 in attendance and ended with 180 which was a larger increase than Ravenswood. At one time Wilding was on a charge with Lockhart, Warden Chapel, Providence, Simpson, White and Sycamore Churches. Later this was changed to include Wilding, Cedar Run, Coleman Chapel, Fannin Chapel, White and Orchard Grove Churches. After the Methodists and United Brethren churches joined, Wilding was put on the Silverton charge which consisted of Wilding and Silverton. Presently, Beech Grove, Lockhart and Drift Run are included with Wilding and Silverton Churches to make the North Jackson County charge.

Ministers who have served at Wilding: Rev. George Wilding, Rev. Grose, Rev. J.J. White, Rev. W.H. Hammond, Rev. W.P. Guinn, Rev. G.W. Alley, Rev. Kelly, Rev. Jenkins, Rev. I.N. Smith, Rev. J.W. WILLOW DALE BAPTIST CHURCH

Willow Dale Baptist church built in 1891, and was finished and dedicated in August 1892. The people of Toppins Grove now known as Little Pond Creek, wanted a church. All the neighbors got together. Harriet Rawson Lambert gave them the land. The trees were donated by the families to saw into lumber. The seats were hewn and planed by hand. The ones on the side of the church are built into the wall on one end. The organ pulpit and stands are the original.

Patti Slavens donated the piano in 1969 to the church. Drop ceiling, new floors, electric lights and a heating system have been added. The three Deacons at that time in 1950 were Harmon Reed, Woodrow Rawson and S.D. Rhodes, picked out the chandelier. Lawrence Eaton wired the church for electric. The old slate roof has been replaced with shingles and vinyl siding. This was made possible from the donation by a former member, James Phillip Swain of Pittsburgh, PA, at his death.

First pastor of the church was Rev. Johnny Redman. Some of the first members were the Starkey family, Rawson Nohe, King, Dumham, Miller, Shaver, Lambert, Cornell, Gibbnoy. Some of the Deacons were Will Rawson, Bill Robinson, Floyd Rawson, Richard Moore and Woodrow Rawson, Harmon Reed, S.D. Rhodes. Gay Moore are the Deacons at this time 1989. JACKSON COUNTY MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION & JACKSON COUNTY SERVICEMEN

JACKSON COUNTY MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

In 1973 the Ravenswood Ministerial Association and the Ripley Ministerial Association united for form the Jackson County Ministerial Association. By uniting their efforts, better and more interesting programs could be held and a larger fellowship group could enrich the lives of those who participated. At the same time the spirit of cooperation among ministers grew. As new ministers moved into the county, they brought with them good experiences from other ministerial fellowships in places they had served and were able to enrich the Jackson County group with new opportunities of service. The county group also gave opportunity for ministers outside of the two towns to have a definite place in the fellowship. Thus, instead of five or six ministers gathering in each of the two towns once a month, we now had up to twenty gathering for fellowship and discussion.

Meetings are held on a rotation basis between the two towns and also among the churches in the towns. The group usually meets in churches, but sometimes meets in other institutional facilities.

In order that people in need in various areas may be more efficiently ministered to, the Jackson County Ministerial Association assigns a treasurer for the Ripley area and another for the Ravenswood area. Donations are given to the treasury by the various churches who are members. Also, the JCMA has special Ecumenical Thanksgiving and Holy Week services. The donations from the churches and the special services are used mainly for transients. A meal and an overnight at a motel, and more recently, lodging at the Rhea House, is provided for these transients. There have been times when monies have had to be used for transporting people, buying parts for cars, and donating to the Rhea House. The JCMA through the years responded to these and other emergency situations.

A Sunday service has been provided each week at Eldercare (formerly Care Inn) nursing home in Ripley for many years. Since Ravenswood Village opened two years ago, the JCMA has also provided a weekly Sunday service at the care center for the elderly. The ministers are scheduled by a member of JCMA.

Jackson County has three food pantries; West Ripley Baptist Church, Community Resources and North United Methodist Church in Ravenswood. The Jackson County Ministerial Association is the sponsoring agency for the West Ripley Baptist and North United Methodist Churches. Many of the churches in the Association give to the food pantry and supply help for them. We receive FEMA grants from the government to buy the food and receive government surplus food when available. The food pantry supplies food as directed by the low income guidelines.

In the summer of 1983, three members of the Jackson County Ministerial Association met with a committee of FM Radio Station WCEF on Cedar Lakes Road and arranged to start a weekly radio program by members of the Jackson County Ministerial Association. Since that time the program has been coordinated by a member minister who has voluntarily accepted that responsibility.

Each minister involved in the Ministerial Association has the opportunity to participate. As high as 18 ministers have participated by taking turns in a given four month period. The fifteen minute tape is made at the radio station sometime during the week and is aired at 9 a. m. on Sunday morning. Each minister is free to conduct the radio program as he sees fit. Some include music while others just have a spoken service. The program does three things: It provides an opportunity for the shut-ins to listen to one of the local ministers; it introduces the ministers to the community; and it conveys the spirit of cooperative ministry that exists among the ministers in Jackson County.

Since the beginning of the Adopt-a-Family Program in the early 1950s, the Jackson County Ministerial Association has been an enthusiastic supporter of this worthy effort on behalf of the people in Jackson County who are in need. The program endeavors to provide Christmas dinners, requested clothing items, household utensils, furniture, etc. to those in need. Children are given presents of toys as well as clothing. Individual ministers have encouraged the people of their congregations to offer to adopt families; they also seek contributions to fulfill the needs.

An appointed member of the Ministerial Association serves on the policy making board of Adopt-a-Family, and in an advisory capacity as a member of the committee which screens the applicants in an effort to determine the most needful of families.

Among the most popular and far reaching of the activities sponsored by the Ministerial Association, the Unified Services held at Thanksgiving and during Holy Week.

Each year, on the Wednesday night before Thanksgiving, members of all participating churches meet together for a service of prayer and thanksgiving. Area ministers share in the service and special music is presented by soloists, vocal and instrumental, and/or choirs from various churches. In recent years, community choirs have participated in this beautiful service.

Holy Week, each year, presents an opportunity to lift up Christ in a special way. Noonday luncheons, prepared by the women of area churches, are held each day in a centrally located church, allowing opportunity for the working public to attend. Brief messages and often special music are provided by various ministers. This week of prayer and Christian Fellowship culminates with a Good Friday Service led by members of the Association.

Community Easter Sunrise Services have been historically well attended, and have provided a spiritual "high" for worshippers. In Ripley, this service is traditional.

Offerings received at all Community Worship Services are used to aid persons in need, either community residents or needy transients passing through.

These services continue to promote unity throughout the Christian Community; lift up Christ to the community, provide opportunities for sharing as brothers and sisters in Christ and develop friendship and support between fellow Christians.

Crop Walk

The major community effort of the Jackson County Ministerial Association was the sponsoring of a "CROP WALK" for hunger on Sunday, October 29, 1989. The event took place at Cedar Lakes, with each walker having a goal of ten circuits of the one kilometer road which circles the camp.

Event Chairperson was Sister Rosanne Fogarty, with Committee members of Pastors, Roy Myers, Harless Cook, and William McMorran.

Two hundred walkers took part, representing 15 churches and two civic groups. The total Net Income was $6,133.33, of which 25% was retained for the Jackson County Food Bank. The balance was given to Church World Service.

PLACES IN JACKSON COUNTY

JACKSON COUNTY VILLAGES

During the last quarter of the 19th century and the first half of the 20th there were many more country villages in the county than at present, these usually centering around a general store, church and one-room school. In addition, there was usually a grist mill, blacksmith shop, and doctor's office in many communities. The period before World War II was a time of general self-sufficiency in the country villages. Most food was grown locally, and most homes were heated by wood-burning fireplaces or stoves. Every country home usually had a large vegetable garden and one or more hogs, depending on the size of the family, would be butchered in the late fall for the winter's meat supply. Corn and wheat would be taken to the local grist mill as needed for the family bread. Milk cows furnished the family's fresh milk, butter, and cheese. Fruit and berries of many kinds were grown on most farms. Every farm also had a flock of chickens to supply eggs for family consumption, and to sell to the local merchant for the few items, such as shoes, salt, sugar, and cloth, not produced on the farm.

COUNTRY SCHOOLS

The old abandoned one-room country schools in Jackson county were usually colorfully named.

A few of these were: Antioch, War Ridge, Forest Home, Kentuck Star, Riverview, Center Point, Straight Run, Mount Hope, Sinaiville, Rocky Knob, Aplin, White Pine, Drift Run, Klondike, Orchard Grove, Morning Star, Hopedale, Bar Run, Lockhart Fork, McGraw, Providence, Redbrush, Turkey Fork, Oak Grove, Comet, Mud Run, Middle Trace, Pleasant Valley, Goshen Valley, Pleasant Run, Willowdale, White Rose, Jefferson, Harmony, Union, Victory, Walnut Grove, Science, Briscoe, Salt Hill, Lone Cedar, Sunshine, Cherry Grove, Buffalo, Cedar Grove, Goff, Longview, Lone Star, Red Hill, Roosevelt, Sand Hill, Flag Rock, Fairview, Echo, Short Bend, Lone Pine, Silver Valley and Beech Grove.

There were dozens of these little schools scattered over the hills and valleys of the county, usually so located that there was one within easy walking distance of every child in the county.

Ages of the scholars ranged from six to twenty in these schools. Grades were from primer to eighth. There was a long bench in front of the teacher's desk where the several classes would sit when called to recite. All classes in all different subjects would recite each day. There would usually be two 15-minute breaks, called "recesses," one in the morning and one in the afternoon, and an hour's break at noon.

One or two of the scholars would usually serve as janitors. They would clean the school in the afternoon after school "let out", and keep the fire going in the wood or coal stove in cold weather.

Three trustees, appointed from among the parents, had the job of hiring the teacher, and generally overseeing the operation of the school.

"Still sits the schoolhouse by the road
A ragged beggar sleeping,
Around it still the sumacs grow
And the blackberry vines are creeping" — Whittier. Submitted by Delmer R. Hite

COTTAGEVILLE

Probably the first white man to visit what is now Cottageville was James McDade, an Indian hunter and scout, who came to Union District in 1796 with two white settlers, Benjamin Cox and William Hannamon.

The following summer, 1797, several settlers came and settled along the Ohio River. This same year two hunters, Coleman and Savney, came from a blockhouse at Belleville to the Mill Creek Valley to hunt deer. Savney was wounded, but managed to escape, while Coleman was scalped and buried within the limits of the town of Cottageville.

The next year, 1798, several more settlers came, and one or two of them settled on Mill Creek near Cottageville. They pounded corn to make commel for bread.

In 1799 a Mr. Hushan from Steubenville, Ohio, bought a hand mill and erected it at Cottageville. It took the name of Hushan's Mill and was operated until 1802. At that time Benjamin Wright, from near Wheeling, bought a horse powered mill, and the town got a new name of Wright's Mill.

Not long after this a saw mill was built, and much timber was cut. Houses were built from lumber rather than logs.

May 27, 1834, the first post office was established under the name of Wright's Mill. The post master was David Woodruff. This post office was discontinued three times, but in 1860 it officially became Cottageville. George Leonard was the postmaster.

Wright's Mill grew rapidly, and by 1840 there was a public school and a Sabbath School. A store was opened, and a crude bridge was built to cross Mill creek. The piers of this bridge were made of logs built up in the form of a square on either side of the creek, with two giant logs spanning the stream. Boards were fastened to these to make a narrow bridge. By 1858 a wooden covered bridge was erected which was used until 1922, when the present one, made of steel and concrete, was built. (Major repair is being done on this bridge in 1989.)

In 1845 or 1846, Mr. Wright sold his mill to a Mr. Moore; so the town was renamed Moore's Mill. He built a dam for waterpower.

In 1858 Daniel Rhodes purchased the mill, store and much of the land and became postmaster in 1864. At this time the mail came in on boats from the Ohio River. Mr. Rhodes saw the possibility of a bright future for the little town and staked the land off into lots and streets. He built a new mill and dam and named the town Cottage Mill. He sold a share of the mill to Owen Roseberry, and that part changed hands many times. The last mill work was done in the 1930's.

In 1870 Andrew Roseberry erected a woolen mill and operated it for a number of years.

In the late 1800's and early 1900's, there were three dry goods stores, several grocery stores, one blacksmith shop, post office, one undertaker's establishment, milliner's shop, barber shop, depot, Dunlop's Hotel, and halls of secret orders for I. O. O. F., Modern Woodman, Eastern Stars, Masons, and Knights of Pythias. It also had one tannery, two shoe shops, and a harness shop.

In the late 1800's, there were two well organized churches; the Southern Methodist built in 1872 or 1873 and the United Brethren, dedicated in 1890.

When the census was taken in 1910, there were 310 people. There were two cemeteries: the Blaine Cemetery on the hill overlooking the town and one joining the Methodist Church.

Main Street, Cottageville

In the early 1900's a four room school house was built, and in 1924 a four room high school was built. Both have been gone for several years. After the high school was discontinued in 1945, it was used for part of the grade school. A new grade school previously had been built nearby. The first graduating class for Union High School was in 1929, and the last one was in 1945. Each year a reunion is held so former friends and graduates can get together.

Things have changed greatly since the early days in the town.

In 1970 the United Brethren and Methodist Church merged. The new church, housed in the Methodist church, became the United Methodist. The United Methodist church was torn down, and a new one called the United In Christ was built down the road from it.

At the present time (1989), there is a new brick post office overlooking Mill Creek, one barber shop, two lodge halls, one general store (soon to be discontinued), and one saloon. For many years Route 33 went through the town, but it has been rerouted to a bypass. The fire station which for many years has had a prominent place has been moved about a mile on Route 33 west. Submitted by Georgia Grady

CROW SUMMIT

Crow Summit was a small community located on Sand Creek, between Silverton and Sandyville. The Ravenswood, Spencer, and Glenville branch of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, passed between the Crow Summit general store and the stone quarry.

Charles Lewis Kalt owned and operated the store. Lettia Kalt (daughter of Charles Kalt) was the post mistress of the Crow Summit post office from the 1920's to the late 1950's. The post office was located in the Kalt General Store.

Crow Summit Store

The stone quarry was operated by Mr. Cleary on land owned by Lawrence Ford. They quarried and cut large milling stones, and shipped them to their destination by railroad. Many of the men in the community were employed at the stone quarry.

A mortuary was operated in the community by Charles Crow, and later by Lawrence Ford.

The old one room Crow summit school was located near the store. It was discontinued in the middle 1930's and was converted to a house.

A large railroad trestle spanned the road and also Beatty's Run until the railroad was closed. The road that ran by the store was relocated to its present location (Route 56) in the middle 1930's.

Some of the men and their families that lived in the Crow Summit area: Clair Stansbury, Wilbur Hughes, Maywood Smith, Emmitt Stanley, Squire Stanley, Otho Clem, Dave Curry, Abe Starcher, Lawrence Ford, Charles Crow, Art Wilcox, Floyd Haynes, Jim Blake, Bert House, Arthur Hupp, Willis Sullivan, Pete Hall, Earnest Haynes, and Charles Kalt.

One of the earlier settlers in the Crow Summit area was John Israel Haynes (1820-1895) born in Monroe County married Nancy Jayne Showen (1828-1875) born in Greenbrier County. John and Nancy Haynes lived on property later owned by the Charles Kalt family. The John Haynes family consisted of Ruth Eliza (1851), James Caperton (1853), Lizza Ellen (1857), George Washington (1858), Celina ? (1859), Joseph Preston (1860), John Lee (1862), Lucy Jane (1864), Henry Wise (1866), and Samuel Floyd (1869).

Charles Lewis Kalt (1865-1960) was born in Columbiana County, Ohio, the son of Charles Ernst and Mary Keziah (Forman) Kalt. His family moved to Jackson County in 1878 and bought property at Meadowdale. Charles Lewis Kalt married February 16, 1896 Lucy Jane Haynes the daughter of John Israel and Nancy Jayne (Showen) Haynes, who lived at Crow Summit.

Charles Lewis Kalt was a farmer, blacksmith, and operated a general merchandise store at Crow Summit. He also worked on the construction of the railroad from Ravenswood to Spencer.

The children of Charles and Lucy (Haynes) Kalt were: Doris Beulah Kalt (1898-1980), married December 9, 1917 William Lionel Currey (1892-1958); Hazel Bell Kalt (1900-1983), married June 24, 1922, Homer Everson Stanley (1900-1973); Lettia Lee Kalt (1901-1961), married June 18, 1949, Howard Robinson; Henry Lewis Kalt (1904-1984), married June 14, 1927, Georgia Benson, (1907-).

Most of the people living in the Crow Summit community attended the Independence Church, and many of them are buried at the Independence Cemetery. Submitted by Marsha Ashman

VILLAGE OF GAY

On January 19, 1888, the Gay post office was established with James E. Evans as the first postmaster. The present postmistress, Ruth Skinner, has served for 32 years.

Earlier a group of men had met to select a name for the village, but could not reach a decision. As they were leaving, someone remarked, "Well, we didn't decide on a name, but we have had a gay old time." Another spoke up and said, "Let's call it Gay!" That has been the name ever since.

No written record has been kept in the community of the early settlers. Names heard most often from older residents are Starcher, Thomas, Greenleaf, Westfall, Litton, Evans, Cox, Parsons, Randolph, Hinzman, Morgan, Bradley, Aplin, Tolley, Rhodes, Rollins, and Meadows. The Morris family lived near Gay and later moved there.

Jacob L. Starcher, Mabel Chapman's grandfather, owned land and a general store in Gay in the late 1800's and early 1900's. He operated the business until 1911 when he returned to his farm at Ripley. The store building is no longer standing, but the granddaughter still owns the land. On March 3, 1911, Mr. Starcher donated the land known as "Starcher Chapel lot" for the United Brethren Church. The church was built by the people in the community and dedicated in 1912. The trustees were John Westfall, Daniel Evans, and A. C. Harpold.

Benjamin F. Thomas, Bryce Rhodes' grandfather, owned and operated a store from the early 1900's up until around the 1940's. The IOOF Lodge was upstairs. I remember another store in Gay, which has now been torn down. Some of the proprietors were Buck Westfall, Hood Parsons, Olaf Lytton, Hershel Tolley, Virgil Morris and Ova Morris, and Raymond and Ruth Skinner.

A blacksmith shop was operated in the late 1800's or early 1900's by Sam Harpold and Buck Westfall.

In the early 1900's there were two schools in Gay, one known as the Beech Flat School, and the other was the Forked Run School. Around 1920 a two room school was built with between 75 to 100 pupils attending until the 1970's when it was abandoned. It is now the Independent Bible Church of Gay.

The Community Building was built in 1936 by WPA. The building was constructed using hewn stones from the Carney farm. The land was donated by A. D. Johns. It is presently used for reunions, senior citizens meetings, and other special meetings and dinners.

Community Building, Gay

In the early 1900's, Cleve Rhodes and Alvin Parsons, then young boys, walked three or four miles down the road just to get to ride back in the first car ever to be in Gay. It came to pick up Jacob L. Starcher and take him to the doctor in Ripley.

An annual Gay Homecoming is held on the third Sunday in August and is a festive occasion when former residents come back home to visit with family and friends. Submitted by Dorothy Johns

KENNA, WEST VIRGINIA

The Post Office at Kenna, West Virginia, was established July 1, 1880, with Grandville P. Morrison as the first Postmaster.

In 1879, Mr. Morrison, a merchant, established his home and business in a tiny hamlet on the Ripley-Charleston Pike. Prior to the opening of a post office at Kenna, the area was known as Jeffers Crossroads.

In searching for a name for the new post office, Mr. Morrison selected Kenna in honor of a Member of the U. S. House of Representatives at that time from West Virginia, John Edward Kenna. In 1883, Mr. Kenna was elected to the U. S. Senate.

Kenna has always been a center of activity for the area. The first O. J. Morrison store was opened for business at Kenna in 1890. Kenna has always had one or two general stores. Over the years there have been funeral parlors, at least two mills, a barber shop, jewelry store, service stations, garage, restaurants, and a Victrola store in Kenna. Several churches served the area. Schools in the vicinity were Kenna and Barnes. Also several doctors practiced in the community.

The first Kenna Community Fair was held September 25th and 26th, 1919. This was the first community fair in West Virginia. It was reported in the Jackson Herald that 2,000 persons attended the fair on September 26th. Exhibits played an important part at the fairs. There was judging in many categories; the competition was keen, and premiums, usually ribbons, were awarded for canned, and baked goods, quilting, handwork, produce, livestock, and other categories. People came from other states just to see Perry C. Greene's magnificent cattle. Mr. Greene brought the first purebred cattle to Western West Virginia, in 1890. 100 years later (1990), the Greene Farm still raises purebred Herefords. The Kenna Fair continued for several years before merging with the Ripley Fair.

Kenna Community Fair

A new post office was built in 1986. Today the Kenna Post Office serves several hundred residents of the southern area of Jackson County. Submitted by Dallas W. Skeen

LOCKHART AND VICINITY

The village of Lockhart occupied a site that was once a part of the 7,000 acre tract of land once owned by John Allison, one of the early governors of Virginia.

This tract was one of the first large land grants made in Jackson County. In 1838 a colony of Cheuvront's among whom were four sons and a daughter of Joseph Cheuvront, the Revolutionary soldier and French immigrant, purchased a large tract of land from the Allison's successors. Aaron Cheuvront and his son, Isaac, built a cabin near the site of Balderson's store, and William Maddox, son-in-law of Aaron, erected a cabin near where the John W. Morgan home is now. Other early settlers were the Full brothers Joseph, Absalom, and Andrew. Ezekiel McFarland owned considerable land on Turkey Fork. A few years later Samuel Somerville, Sr. and his several sons came to Brushy Fork. Isaac Staats erected a cabin near the mouth of Red Brush Run. Isaac Lockhart acquired land on Slab Camp Run and moved there from Wirt County in 1826. Slab Camp Run was renamed Lockhart's Fork for its first settlers.

At first no school or church existed. A log structure erected near the mouth of Nesselroad Creek served not only for a meeting house but also the first "temple of learning". Bob Fox was both preacher and teacher in this first building.

The first post office was established in 1866 and was named for Albert Lockhart, the first postmaster. Mr. Lockhart built the first store the same year (1866).

A. B. Burke came to Lockhart and formed a business partnership with John and Amos Barnett, known as A. B. Burke and Co. This business dealt in merchandise and packed leaf tobacco. Large warehouses were erected for storing and packing tobacco for shipment to Baltimore. Others who bought and shipped tobacco were Billy Grandon, Achinson, and Peter Archer, Lockhart and Cain. During the early 1880's, it has been said that these four warehouses handled nearly a million pounds of tobacco annually. Much of this tobacco eventually reached foreign markets, and in France and Germany was used for dyes.

Dr. Benjamin N. Hensley practiced medicine at Lockhart shortly after the Civil War and located at Walton in 1872. Horace Price, Joseph VanFossen, and W. L. Y. Curry, were early doctors at Lockhart. Dr. Curry about 1898 went to Sandyville where he lived until his death in 1925. Before Dr. Curry came, Dr. A. H. Casto had a lucrative practice at Sandyville for many years.

In the 1870's, Dr. Knotts of Ohio practiced medicine in the Wilding and Lockhart areas for a short time. Dr. Ball of Wiscburg was a herb doctor a short time.

Dr. James M. Carney was an early teacher in the county. His first school was at Lockhart when he was 18. Albert Lockhart was the contractor to build a school house there; it was the first one to be erected in the county after the free school system was enacted. Dr. Carney was the first teacher in the new building. He practiced medicine at Ripley later at Mineral Wells and Parkersburg.

Henry Hardesty began grinding corn and sawing lumber by water power at Odaville in 1865. He and his sons continued to operate this mill until the 80s.

Sometime during the early 40s, John Lockhart erected a horse mill on Lockhart Fork. It was mounted on a stump or post and stood near the present site of the Lockhart's Fork schoolhouse. The mill was patronized by people from a long distance; some came from Shade River section in Ohio. The horse for the motive power was always kept in readiness. The owner of this mill often provided overnight hospitalities to those who came a distance. Mr. Lockhart built a water power mill in 1860, but due to lack of sufficient waterpower the mill was not a complete success. In 1860 Amos Cheuvront erected a power mill in Nesselroad Creek near its mouth at the rear of the present home of Lionel Currey. Earl Balderson was the last to have the Lockhart Store from 1920's to 1970's where he did a great business in groceries, dry goods, gasoline and farm feed. Closing due to illness, he is now in Park View Health Center.

MURRAYSVILLE

At one time, the town of Murraysville, in Grant District, was a thriving community due in large part to the boatyard which had its beginnings in 1838. The land which was occupied as a boatyard was purchased, in the fall of 1837, by Elijah Murray and Capt. William Hicks, who commenced operations in 1838. Murray, from whom the town derived its name, remained in the business as foreman for about two years. He finally sold his interest and moved to Paducah, KY. The business was then carried on by Captain Hicks, John Roberts and R. W. Skillinger. The venture prospered and in the years that followed, there were times when 60 to 75 men were employed in building various kinds of river boats from white oak, yellow poplar and pine. A hundred or more of the leading steamboats on the upper Ohio and the Mississippi were launched at Murraysville. It took several months to build a steamboat. When it was completed and ready to be christened, the day was a gala one in Murraysville and people would come from miles around to see it launched. From the standpoint of size, the most notable craft ever built at Murraysville was a wharfboat for the White Collar Line at Cincinnati. It was 325 feet long and 85 feet wide. It was probably the largest wooden boat ever built for use on the Ohio. This wharfboat was first placed at the Cincinnati landing about 1875 and was used until it sank in 1902. The boatyard was active until the 1880's.

The community that grew around this riverside industry soon included a hotel, blacksmith shop, church, store, subscription school, tobacco packing house and a ferry boat which provided service across the Ohio River. Some of the operators were: John Osbourne, Bill Smeaks, Edwin Haymond and Del Larkins. After the boatyard business declined, a Mr. Short from Pennsylvania established a coffin building business here, but the business failed after a few years.

In 1884, Murraysville had a population of about 150. Many of the citizens lived on the low bottom near the Ohio River. On February 7, 1884 the raging flood waters of the river inundated the town. It washed away many stores, houses and other business establishments. In fact, about all that was left after the flood was the school house, the church and the home of Taylor Douglass. In a few years, the people gradually built the town up again.

In 1886, the Ohio River Railroad (later a branch of the B & O Railroad) was completed from Parkersburg to Pt. Pleasant and later on to Huntington. This was a great asset to Murraysville. A freight depot was erected together with a ticket office and telegraph station. The first agent was Job Ruth. Others were Reuben Douglass and Mr. White, a son-in-law of Dr. Aaron Davis. The Murraysville Manufacturing Company, which dealt in timber, was incorporated in 1888. They also operated a large general store.

Murray Brothers, of Wheeling, leased about 80 acres of land at Murraysville and opened a stone quarry in 1899. Stone from this quarry was used in the B & O pier and foundation work at Wheeling. At one time, a car load of stone was shipped daily to Wheeling, employing nine laborers.

The next large flood the town suffered was in 1898. By 1913, the town had gradually built up again. In March 1913, there was a great flood which was the largest ever in this area. Many homes were destroyed with some of them being washed down the river. The railroad depot was also destroyed and the damage ran into thousands of dollars. S. S. Bigley, the local merchant and postmaster at that time, suffered a great loss. The Douglass home, owned by Jacob Boggs, the church, schoolhouse and a few homes on the high ground were the only ones not damaged or destroyed. After this devastating flood, Murraysville never regained the businesses it once had.

The Murraysville post office was established in 1843, with John Roberts, a local merchant, as the first postmaster. Others were: James F. Scott (1857), A. C. Tidd (1858), H. R. Sherman (1860), Isaac B. Sherman (1863), Robert W. Skillinger (1865), Davis K. Barrett (1867), Solomon Bigley (1869), Benjamin Flesher (1880), Davis Barrett (1886), Mrs. Dollie Flesher (1887), Albert Hart (1888), Andrew Flesher (1889), Charles Wright (1891), Taylor Douglass (1893), A. C. Tidd (1899), Philena Tidd (1900), Solomon Bigley (1902), Eva Wallace (1913), Leona Bonar (1916), Delmar Delancy (1918), William Polk (1920), Mrs. Norma Orr (1925-1956), later becoming Mrs. Norma Snyder, and Earsley Russell (1956-57). Paul Wright assumed the duties as postmaster in 1958 and still continues in that position.

When a mail route was first established from Ripley via Ravenswood, Muses Bottom, and Murraysville, to Belleville, John and Samuel Greer were among the first mail carriers.

When the rural route was established, N. Edward Bonar was the first carrier, carrying the mail on a bicycle in good weather and on horseback otherwise.

In the 1970's, Tebay Dairy established a farm at Murraysville, but it was discontinued after several years. Polk Addition, a housing development, with modern, spacious homes, was constructed in the 1970's and 1980's at Murraysville. In 1990, area farmers growing crops on the large riverbottoms and the Murraysville Post Office are the only business activities in the immediate area.

RAVENSWOOD

The first residents of Ravenswood were the American Indians. When George Washington visited the site, November 6, 1770, he was entertained by Kiashuta, a famous Iroquois chief, who was camped there on a hunting trip. Two years later, December 15, 1772, Washington was granted 2,448 acres of land there by King George III, of England, for services in the French & Indian War.

It is believed that the first settlers here were Lawrence Lane and John Nesselroad, who came in 1808. Other early settlers were: William Bailey, Noah Robinson, Daniel Beaty, George Swope, Franklin Wise and Robert Curry. In 1812, the agent for the Washington heirs had the land resurveyed and divided among them, and this land was rented to several persons. Two heirs, Henrietta Fitzhugh and Lucy Payne, were given the land on which the town was later built.

Bartholomew Fleming, one of the earliest settlers, ran a ferry here by 1832, when the great flood on the Ohio washed away his cabin. Henry Fitzhugh, the husband of Henrietta, secured possession of the town site, came here in 1837 and laid out the town, the first lots being sold in 1841. On March 10, 1852, the Virginia Assembly passed an act chartering the town with the name, Ravenswood, a name selected by Henry Fitzhugh for Lord Ravenswood, the hero of Sir Walter Scott's novel, The Bride of Lammermoor. First trustees of the town were: Bartholomew Fleming, C.M. Rice, Silas B. Taylor, Lunsford Thorn and Daniel L. Kemp, with Jennings Beckwith as Sergeant (Mayor).

Lot owners in 1841 were — Henry Fitzhugh, Bartholomew Fleming, Hezekiah Jackson, Nathan Laney, John M. Reed, and Daniel Stanley, heirs. Taxes for the year were $24.17.

The first newspaper in the county, The Virginia Chronicle, was published, September 1, 1853, by William P. Frost.

The first church here, Grace Episcopal, was consecrated by Bishop Meade in 1843, and Rev. William Hyland, was the first minister.

About 1840, W.L. Holmes, a local grocer, bought a wharfbat and placed it on the Ohio river, and Fitzhugh built a saw and grist mill on Sandy creek.

Dr. James Henry was the first physician. Other early ones were: Drs. John Armstrong, John T. Cotton, A.D. Voorhes and A.D. Nevins. In 1860, Drs. Barzilla H. Hoyt and John W. Bachtel, were here.

Ravenswood Post office, the 4th in the county, was established, July 19, 1839, with Joseph Holden as the first postmaster.

About 1855, William Harmon established the first public school building here, known as the "Union Academy." The first school had been taught by Daniel Beaty, in 1820, in a log cabin on Big Sandy.

During the Civil War, there was much unrest in the town due to the divided loyalties of the citizens. Union forces occupied the town until September 4, 1862, when General Albert Jenkins Confederate cavalry briefly took it and, while here, burned the building occupied by the Virginia Chronicle, a virulent Union-leaning publication, then edited by Colonel Daniel Frost, of the 11th WV Infantry, who was much hated by the Rebels. Frost was the first Speaker of the reorganized government of Virginia, at Wheeling, 1861-62.

In 1887, a high school building was erected and served the students of the town until Ravenswood High School was erected in the early 1900's.

Since early days, the Ohio river has been a major source of communication and trade for the town. In 1884, the Ohio River Railroad was begun down the river from Parkersburg to Huntington (later a branch of the Baltimore & Ohio), and in the late 1880's, the Ravenswood, Spencer & Glenville railroad was built to Spencer. It was abandoned in the 1960's.

Building of Locks and Dams, Ravenswood

In 1953, land was purchased on Warth's Bottom, below Ravenswood, for the construction of the Kaiser Aluminum works, which, in its heyday, employed over 3,000 workers, and was a major reason for the rapid growth of the town during the period. Hartley Oil Company has been another source of employment for the town.

Population in 1980 was 4,126. The current mayor is William S. Ritchie, who, while state highway commissioner, was largely instrumental in getting the bridge erected across the river below town. Submitted by Delmer R. Hite

HISTORY OF RIPLEY

Interesting myths concerning the ownership and settlement of the land on which Ripley now stands were printed in the 1800's and have been reprinted innumerable times, each printing using an older one as reference to support its validity. Myths always seem to be more interesting than facts, so they live longer, and often go unchallenged because truth, the real history, is buried in dusty public records filed in many, often far away, places.

Ripley was originally built on part of the 400 acres of land which Lewis Rogers and William John acquired by grant from the State of Virginia in 1768. The survey bears the date of December 10, 1785, and is recorded in Harrison County.

Later William John became sole owner and sold the 400 acres by title bond and a certain sum of money to Jacob Starcher, who came to the Ripley area from Hacker's Creek, Harrison county, Virginia, now Lewis county, West Virginia. Records show Jacob Starcher was paying personal property taxes in Harrison County in 1800. He moved to the Ripley area in the early 1800's. Records in Kanawha County show he was paying taxes in 1803, and Mason County in 1804 and following years. A deed was not written until the land was cleared of debt. Before Jacob Starcher had cleared the debt on his land, William John died, leaving his estate to be settled by his executors, Joseph Jenkins and Hugh Sidwell. The deed to Jacob Starcher was a conveyance of the 400 acres from Mary John, widow of William John and their seven children, consequently Jacob Starcher did not get a deed until 1816. For further details on the land, refer to Jacob Starcher in the family history section.

Jackson County had been newly created by Act of the General Assembly of Virginia on March 1, 1831. A seat of government demands a town to serve its purposes. On December 5, 1832, Jacob Starcher petitioned the General Assembly of Virginia for thirty acres of his land at the county seat for Jackson County, including a number of lots and streets already laid off, "that the whole be laid off and established a town." His request was granted on December 19, 1832. The Act "established a town, by the name of Ripley."

It is said the town was named in honor of Harry Ripley, a circuit riding Methodist minister, who, with marriage license in his pocket, lost his life crossing Mill Creek about three miles south of Ripley about the year 1830. A search of the records reveals a license issued to John Ripley on March 23, 1830, but no other Ripley until 1844. Many stories have grown up around Harry Ripley, but he left no visible trace of his existence.

Joseph Mayres (Mairs), Ira Lindsey, Robert Louthier (Lowther), Jacob Starcher and Peter Click were appointed trustees of the town by the Act. They were empowered to make by-laws and ordinances for regulating the police, regulating the building of houses, improving public streets and alleys, and other things necessary for the general good of the town, within the limits of the powers conferred by the Act.

Court Street, Ripley, (1920)

The County Seat immediately became attractive to persons having skills essential to building a permanent settlement. By 1835 the town had 120 inhabitants within a mile of the court house. Thirty-two families had built homes. Within the town were 12 family dwellings; two hotels; a "common school"; a housejoiner (carpenter); one miller (to produce corn meal and flour); two blacksmiths; one general store; one tanyard; one boot and shoe shop; two tailors; one brickyard; one sawmill; two attorneys; and two "regular physicians."

The corporate limits of Ripley have been enlarged several times. By amendment passed January 10, 1853, to amend an Act passed May 1, 1852, the trustees were to have surveyed and laid off 70 acres adjacent to the town, and to permit persons within the town to vote for or against enlargement. An Act passed February 26, 1867, provided that "the municipal authorities of said town shall be a mayor, recorder and five councilmen, who together shall form a common council." The first election under this Act was to be held on the fourth Thursday in March 1867, at the place in the town "where the board of trustees meet." It is said that Clermont Thaw, a young attorney, was the first mayor of Ripley. A list of the mayors from 1871 to 1990 is hereto attached. When Ripley Independent District was annexed into the corporate limits, some farms were included. In 1990 there is still one operating farm within the city limits.

The town's first post office was established January 31, 1832. It had been named Jackson Court House. The name was changed March 31, 1893 to Jackson. Finally, on September 15, 1897, the name was changed to Ripley, and became the same as the name of the town.

The first Jackson County Fair was held at Ripley on October 9 and 10, 1877. A program appears in the September 28, 1877 issue of the Jackson Herald. John H. Riley offered several premiums, including "prettiest baby under 6 months old. $2.50 gold." A. D. Hopkins offered a water color painting "for the prettiest thing of any name or nature." This fair was held in what is now West Ripley near the old railroad depot.

The Fourth of July was celebrated at Ripley in 1877 by a picnic and tournament with the accompanying speech making and dancing. The streets were thronged with people attracted to town by a desire to participate in the enjoyments of the occasion, and to witness the "tilt between the gallant knights of Jackson."

Main Street, Ripley, (1920)

With I-77 intersecting Ripley, running north and south, and Route 33 running east and west through Ripley, our annual Fourth of July celebration attracts thousands of visitors. Many visitors come to Ripley during the annual Mountain State Art and Craft Fair.

The population of Ripley today, 1990, is approximately 3,500, with several restaurants, stores, motels, banks, churches, has twin theaters, two newspaper offices, and several residential suburbs. It is a progressive community with other businesses to open soon. Submitted by Genevieve Starcher and Mabel Chapman

ROCK CASTLE IN 1915

The photo shows the village of Rockcastle in 1915. From left to right, first is a part of the parsonage, then a tent where religious services were being held. The spacious house across Thirteen Mile Creek was the home of William Richard (Bill) and Hannah Margaret Casto. She was a milliner and had a shop by their home. The swinging foot bridge across the creek in front of the parsonage was where the children loved to play.

Rockcastle, ca. 1915

J.C. (Ceph) and Minnie Casto's home was left of the large store. His brother, Orph, owned a general store, where he and his wife, Bonnie, lived upstairs. He had a harness shop on the west side of his store.

Adjacent to the harness shop was a blacksmith shop operated first by Asbury Casto then Rude

McCoy and McCoy Store, Ripley, (ca. 1910)

Fisher. Oak Barnett worked there. The large building south of the road was Ceph Casto's flour mill where corn meal and two grades of flour were ground.

Next was Gatewood Knapp's general store with his home beside it. A casket shop was located between Robert Barnette's log home and the creek, which was operated by Early Moore. Bethel School was located above Bill Casto's house.

The village received its name from Laban Hill, a local citizen, born in New York in 1809, attempting to carve himself a castle in a rock cliff that juts out over the creek near Donnelly Hill and Little Spruce. He labored at it until he broke his pick and then abandoned the task. To this day, the lines in the cliff where he labored are visible.

From this, Hugh Donnelly, the first postmaster here, April 24, 1869, named the post office, Rock Castle, later changed to Rockcastle, February 10, 1894. The post office is still in operation. Up to 1867, the Rockcastle area was in Mason County.

SANDYVILLE — NEW ERA

Sandyville is located in Ravenswood District seven miles from the Ohio River on Sand Creek. The first settler was the great Indian scout and hunter, Jesse Hughes. He built a cabin home, in 1820, on Sand Creek, near the present location of the late Tom Murray's home.

Daniel W. Sayre and family came from Letart Falls in 1828. His brothers, Benjamin and Jacob, also settled near Sandyville. Daniel W. Sayre owned a large tract of land and built a store and flour mill in 1845. His daughter, Lucy Ann, married Frank Fabry. They lived in the old Sayre home said to have been built in 1841. It was either a frame or hewed-log house with weatherboarding, and was never painted. The large two-story house stood near the present location of the Sandyville United Methodist Church. It was the oldest house in this part of the county and was called the Fabry house.

Warren Reed came to Sandy Valley soon after Daniel Sayre. He was the first merchant and was appointed the first postmaster of Sandy Post office, January 31, 1833, the third post office in Jackson County. At that time the village was located where New Era now is. The store and post office stood where the New Era garage was later built. Warren Reed also built a water grist mill on Copper Fork creek where the late B.W. Somerville's property was. In May 1892, the name was changed to Sandyville Post office. For many years the post office was located in a small building that stood near Baker's store. It was later moved a short distance up on Route 21 because of flooding when Sand Creek overflowed. Fannie Murray and Durward Currey were postmasters for many years. Now, 1990, the new Sandyville Post office is again located in New Era, very near the site of the first one. Bill Waskey is the present Postmaster.

The Ravenswood, Spencer and Glenville Railroad, running from Ravenswood on the main line up the Sandy Valley via Sandyville to Reedy and Spencer, was built by local capital. It was later purchased by the Baltimore and Ohio Company. At that time the timber business was flourishing and additional rail sidings were needed. One such siding was built a short distance from Sandyville and called the "new area". This is thought to be the origin of the name for New Era.

Jesse Morgan, a native of Marion County, came to Sandyville from Wirt County in 1865. He purchased several hundred acres of land including the Warren Reed Property. The old Morgan family cemetery is located on a high hill back of where the Gilmore High School stood. The old Sandyville "graveyard" is located on a high point overlooking Sand Creek, back of the Gilmore Elementary School. Many of the old settlers are buried there.

Ziba Weas, an early landowner, and some members of his family, were buried in above-ground stone vaults. The remains were later removed to the Independence Cemetery.

The first church service was held in an old log school house on the J.T. Crum property. This is believed to have been near where the bridge over Copper Fork Creek is now on the Independence Road. The first church building erected was McGee Chapel in 1872, a Methodist congregation. The church lot and cemetery was given by the McGee heirs. Jephtha and Elizabeth (Knotts) McGee came here from Preston County in 1847. The Independence Cemetery is the last resting place for many old pioneers, including Daniel W. Sayre, who died in 1900, and Armistead Morehead, who died in 1878, aged 85.

Some of the Sandyville and New Era merchants of past years were: J.T. Crum, William Van Meter, Brown and Casto, D.M. Baker, C.E. Baker, Charles Howes, Jess Sayre, Ervin Snodgrass, Bradley and Lawson, Chambers, Joe Faulkner, Carl Warner and Carl Snyder.

Squire Sayre had a tannery; Arthur Regnaud was the shoemaker; Henry Fisher was the first blacksmith. Others were: Ed Hupp, James Coms, James Snyder, Ab Curry, and R. Stalnaker.

Dr. Nicholas Regnaud was the first doctor. Others were: Dr. Mairs, Dr. Casto, Dr. Currey and Dr. Hartenstine.

Early teachers and preachers were; George Winkler, Mr. Ireland, Bob Fox, Rev. Sam Black, Rev. Coleman, and Rev. Samuel Sheppard.

Other early families were; Dawkins, Boggess, Custer, Hutchinson, Gallahue, Duer, Sheppard, Beaty, Vannoy, Howes, Dilworth, Gorrell, Hawk, Campbell, Morris, Snyder, Johnson, Starr, Patterson, Dragoo and Blake.

In 1875 or '76, the covered bridge was built across Sand Creek at Sandyville. Moses Huff was the contractor. He married Rhoda (Dawkins) Barnett, widow of John Barnett. The old bridge was torn down in 1945 and the new one built the same year.

The Sandyville Methodist Church was first located on Route 21, near the home of Dr. Currey. When Route 21 was improved, the building was moved down in Sandyville beside the old two-story grade school.

Both of these structures along with the "Band Hall" have been razed. The new Sandyville United Methodist Church and parsonage are located on Route 21 nearby.

Sandyville, 1908

Gilmore High School was built in 1924 with F.L. Hutchinson as contractor. It was so named because Ravenswood District was once known as Gilmore Township. The first classes were held on September 15, 1924. There were only enough students with the proper qualifications to organize Sophomore and Freshman classes. There were four students in the Sophomore class. G.C. Wilson from the Clarksburg school system was the first principal. The high school was closed in 1965, and the building razed in 1988. The Gilmore Elementary School is located a short distance north of New Era on Route 21.

Local industries were the "Gasoline Plant" and the Crow Summit stone quarry, both long since discontinued.

New Era once boasted of the modern, two-story Beaty Hotel, built by John Beaty in 1928 or '29. It was destroyed by fire shortly after completion. This could have caused a community disaster as two large gasoline storage tanks were located nearby. The men and boys all gathered to fight the fire while the women and children were urged to leave the village. The Ben Somerville house was saved only by constantly pouring water on the roof.

During the 1940's, the oil and gas boom contributed to the economy for a time. Jones and Laughlin Co. of Pittsburgh, PA, opened a store for selling oil well supplies in Sandyville. After a few years it was closed when the demand decreased.

Today most of the old buildings that stood in Sandyville and New Era are gone; the old mill, Baker's store, the railroad depot, the Band Hall and lodge room above where the Sandyville Cornet band practiced, the large attractive home of Dr. Currey, the Dr. Casto house, the old Jesse Morgan house and the R.L. Thompson house along with many other structures that made up the two villages. The large Baker house and the Ellie Sweezy house remain much as they were built and the Jess Sayre store is still there.

STAATS/STATTS MILLS

The site where the Statts Mills Post Office is located was originally part of a 1,329 acre tract granted to Savary de Vaucolon, of Kentucky. It was sold to Andrew and Jesse Slaughter, who acquired the upper half, and Zacheriah Rollins, the lower half, April 13, 1835. Nathan Smith surveyed the tract, the lower half of which was resurveyed for Rollins and George Casto, Sr., by Robert Lowther, of Ripley. In 1845, Rollins sold his half to Nicholas Lee, of Kentucky.

George Casto Sr., died in 1845 (see Early Settlers), leaving a 614 acre tract to his wife and children. Nicholas Lee sold 260 acres to Jacob Pfof, in 1851. Pfof built the first grist mill here at the mouth of Millseat Run, and operated it for several years before moving to Bates County, MO. May 8, 1858, he sold the one acre tract around the mill to Isaac Staats for $350. Staats then owned land adjoining the mill.

Isaac sold the mill to his son, Enoch, in 1877, who moved the mill across Tug Fork to its location below the covered bridge. He expanded the mill and built a flouring mill, a store, and a large, two-story frame house, which he sometimes used as a hotel, across the road from the store.

October 21, 1879, Staats Mill Post Office was established; later changed to Statts Mills to avoid confusion with the Stouts Mills Post Office, Gilmer county. In 1881, a voting precinct was established here. In 1887, the covered bridge was erected.

During this period, most of the virgin timber in the precinct was cut, and either made into lumber and ties locally and hauled to Ripley by horse and wagon, or the logs floated down Tug Fork and Mill Creek to the boom at Ripley during the spring floods. Since before World War I, there has been much drilling for oil and gas in the precinct.

Sinaiville church and school were organized around 1840, and other schools were War Ridge, Mount Hope, Rocky Knob and Straight Run. Presently all students in the precinct attend school at Ripley.

In 1909, Enoch Staats, who had moved to Ripley, sold 1,584 acres to C.W. & Samuel G. Starcher, of Ripley, including the store and mill. 900 acres of this land was sold to Foster F. & Delpha G. Morris, by Tracy Starcher, and the remaining tract was sold to Robert R. Rhodes, by his wife, Hazel.

The old store burned in 1971; the big house in 1935; the mill was torn down, and the covered bridge moved to Cedar Lakes. The Site 13 dam on Tug Fork now covers the old mill site with a lake. The store and post office have been rebuilt on the hill above the lake across from the church.

A fine bridge, named for Foster F. Morris, two-term Sheriff and County Commissioner, spans the lake at Statts Mills. Submitted by Delmer R. Hite

CEDAR LAKES CONFERENCE CENTER

Way back in 1948 an idea began to develop in West Virginia for the creation of a camp and conference center for Future Farmers and Future Homemakers of America.

The conference center eventually became a reality and was located in Jackson County. What began on a small scale with the first construction in 1952 became the Cedar Lakes Conference Center, which in 1989 provided services for 33,500 people from West Virginia and surrounding states.

Six counties had sites which were under consideration in the late 40s. One of these counties was Jackson County. A group of active citizens can take credit for Jackson County being chosen for the conference center which today provides jobs for 60 county people with an annual payroll of $636,500.

A group of people headed by D.J. Rogers, Sattis Simmons, Burton Crow, T. Clayton Parsons, P.E. O'Brien, Marion Pfost, A. Clyde Wright, James Robinson, W.L. Pinnell, Joe Vail, Robert B. Goodwin, O.P. Davis, Carroll Greene, and others took an interest in locating the camp and conference center near Ripley.

A veteran's group headed by Robert Goodwin and Judge Oliver Kessel along with one representative from each district in Jackson county, proposed to donate $22,000 toward obtaining 228 acres known as the Easter Farms two miles south of Ripley on U.S. Route 21. The center if it became a reality would be a memorial to all those who died in the world wars.

The action of this group spurred a group of other interested citizens into borrowing another $18,000 to make a total of $40,000 which would be necessary to buy the property.

Civic organizations from all over southern and central West Virginia endorsed the plan and decided to offer the site free of charge to the State Board of Education if they would select the Jackson County site.

Finally on Monday, December 5, 1949, the State Board decided that the Jackson County site would offer the best potential for the development of a camp and conference center for the FFA and FHA.

The chosen site consisted of land from three farms located on Mill Creek. These were Blanche Easter, 118 acres; D.E. Easter, 80 acres; and J.H. and Rebecca Easter, 30 acres. All of the land of Blanche and D.E. Easter was included except for a small cemetery on the D. E. Easter property.

After the first survey was made, it was discovered that an additional three acres of land was needed in order for the conference center to have control of the land to the top of the hill. The additional three acres were purchased making the total parcel of land 231 acres.

Walter Martens and Son firm of Charleston was employed by the State Board to draw up an over-all plan for the development of the State Youth Camp. Representatives from the Conservation Commission, WVU Extension Service, State Road Commission, SCS, Vo-Ag Service, B & O Railroad, gas and power companies, were all asked for input into the final plans.

The scale model of the final plan showed four groups of cottages clustered on the four corners of the building area. In the center was a lake of about four acres which was to act as a reflection basin for the dining hall, assembly building, chapel, and arts and crafts center.

Adequate recreational facilities were planned to provide fishing, boating, active games, swimming and indoor recreation.

Actual work began in the fall of 1950, when the FFA began removing fences, old buildings and cleaning stream banks.

The Legislature appropriated $237,000 for utilities, roadways and equipment that year. In April of 1951, 15,000 trees were planted by FFA members. In June Lawrence S. Cavendish was appointed to supervise development of the camp.

In August of 1951, Sattis Simmons was appointed chairman of the Camp Fund Campaign which pledged to raise $1,000,000.

Work on the two lakes began in the fall of 1951 by Kanawha Construction Company at a cost of $44,880 with money coming from state appropriations. That same fall, FFA chapters planted native trees to form an arboretum.

Cedar Lakes Conference Center

Utilities and roads were completed in 1952. The main lodge and FFA cottage were constructed during 1953. In 1954, the bridges across the reflection lakes, and the main bridge onto the grounds were constructed as well as Marshall Cottage.

In 1955 the first groups of FFA and FHA campers used the conference center, but the camp was not officially named Cedar Lakes until 1957.

Work continued as cottages were added by state groups such as the Lion's club, the various counties and the FFA and FHA. Much of the labor was donated in each case, but it was not until 1962 when the original plan neared completion with the construction of a swimming pool. By 1962, Cedar Lakes could boast 14 buildings which would provide lodging, dining, classroom space, workshops, administration, maintenance and meeting space for a total of 200 over-nighters at any given time.

Through the years more cottages have been added so that the number of campers which can be provided for at any given time has doubled. A large dining hall was completed in the late 1970's which provides for banquet facilities for local groups, as well as meals for the campers. In 1987, a chapel was completed beside one of the lakes, which was constructed almost entirely of native woods, and built with volunteer labor.

Cedar Lakes Conference Center Chapel

Plans call for a 50 room motel type lodge, but money has not been available for its construction.

John Holt, who has served as director of Cedar Lakes for more than 10 years, believes the success of Cedar Lakes comes from the hundreds of people who have helped with its development, and continue to show interest in its growth and success. Submitted by Lois McCann

PARCHMENT VALLEY CONFERENCE CENTER

In October 1965, the West Virginia Baptist Convention, representing more than 600 American Baptist churches in the state, purchased the R.R. Hyre farm at the mouth of Parchment for a new conference center. By the early 1970's conference participants were referring to it as "a dream place where fellowship and spiritual growth flourishes; where lives are being enriched."

Church groups and individuals come to Parchment Valley for week-long and week-end conferences, retreats, business and dinner meetings and annual picnics. Special activities are planned for children with modern facilities and equipment, including a swimming pool. Baptist college students have two week-end meetings yearly, American Baptist Women sponsor spiritual life retreats, American Baptist Men have an annual Bible conference, and there is an annual conference for ministers and another on Bible and missions.

WV American Baptist Conference Center

The original 1,180 acres has been enlarged, roads have been improved, an administration building and conference building constructed, and four modern lodges as well as dormitory style housing for youth groups are in almost constant use. A library and the archives of the West Virginia Baptist Historical Society are also located here.

Official dedication of the Conference Center took place June 12, 1976. Total acreage then was 1,334 acres. The Rev. Vairl C. Winter, well-known Jackson County rural minister, was given credit for first suggesting the site. Some facilities were named for Baptist leaders who had worked prominently in securing and developing the Center: Administration Building, Dr. William G. Farnar; Vesper Area, Mr. Roy C. Keys; and the lodges for West Virginians who had served on foreign and home mission fields: Erville Sowards, Ollie Deem, Goldie Bailey, and Mary Bonar.

Resident managers of the Parchment Valley Conference Center have included Rev. James and Mrs. (Jean Ann) Cunningham, Charles and Rhuie Plemons, Bill and Phyllis Ferrell, and currently Charles and Judy Swisher. Rev. and Mrs. (Edna)

Winter were the first to live on the premises. The name Parchment Valley comes from Jacob Parchment, of Lee Creek, Wood County, who was killed by Indians on a hunting trip to the area in 1790.

Mrs. Mike (Helen Joyce) Hall of Kenna, is secretary at the conference center. Submitted by Roscoe Keeney, Jr.

THE ARMSTRONG HOUSE

The Armstrong House, 315 North Street, Ripley, was listed on the National Register of Historic Places, in 1980. This is the earliest known brick house to have been erected in Ripley.

James Armstrong arrived in Ripley, Virginia (West Virginia), from Beverly, Randolph County, in the early 1830's. From Jacob Starcher who owned much of the land of the town of Ripley, and in 1833 donated to the county property for a courthouse, James Armstrong purchased the Ripley lots upon which a substantial two-story brick house was built around 1848.

Armstrong House

Brick Greek Revival architecture in West Virginia frequently display similar characteristics. Among these are center hall entrances with simple front-pieces embellished with ribbed or fluted piers or pilasters; rectangular transoms; gables with nearly flush eaves rising to meet an interior end chimney; and brick cornices patterned in dogtooth or open brick fret work simulating dentil rows. These characteristics, in addition to simple but outstanding interior woodwork, are found in the James Armstrong House.

The home is owned by Miss Anne King, great-granddaughter of James Armstrong.

BONAR HOUSE

This house was built in 1896 by Ed Bonar (gentleman on the left in picture) and is still in very good condition. The front porch is now one story with a deck-type roof. The house (and farm) is presently owned by Daniel Donald Bonar (son of Ed Bonar) and his wife, Martha, and is located on the Murraysville Road in Grant District. Submitted by Daniel D. Bonar

THE CAM BARNETT HOUSE

The house which is sometimes referred to as "the Cam Barnett House" by some of the older generation, was built around 1900 by Loomis Hill. The farm was purchased by Camden and Birty Barnett from Loomis Hill in 1917. It is located near the head of Thirteen Mile Creek at Rock Castle.

The house is now owned and occupied by Bill (grandson of Camden and Birty Barnett) and his wife, Wilma Barnett. They, along with their children, run a beef cattle farm.

Cam Barnett House

Bill is the son of Ottie Preston (February 17, 1905-January 21, 1969) and Audrey Lucille Pickens Barnett (August 1, 1921). Ottie (known as Ott) and Audrey had four sons, two of which are deceased.

Danny Willis (January 6, 1942) married Wanda Fisher Blevins. His children are Dale Willis (February 6, 1968) and Lisa Michelle (June 13, 1969). Lisa is married to James Birthisel.

Billy Eugene Barnett (October 10, 1943) and Wilma Mae Carney (May 20, 1942) were married on January 10, 1964. Their children are Kristi Anne (September 28, 1965), Ken Preston (July 19, 1968) and Kamden Wesley (June 24, 1980).

Ken Preston married Kimberly Darlene Pringle

(June 25, 1967). They are the parents of two children, Kurtis Alan (December 13, 1986) and Kortney Dawn (October 26, 1989). Submitted by Wilma Barnett

CLERC-CARSON HOME

The Clerc-Carson Home is the brick home on the south side of North Street where it abuts Seventh Street. It was constructed in 1880 by F. Leon Clerc and is Ripley's second oldest brick home.

Mr. Clerc, a French-speaking Swiss, was born in Motier, Switzerland, October 26, 1855. He came to New York as a young man and worked as a bookkeeper. He married Amelia Rosset daughter of J.D.D. Rosset, who was also French-Swiss. Mr. Rosset came to Jackson County in the 1830's and was a land agent for Savary DeValcoulon and Albert Gallatin. Mr. Rosset became owner of much of the Devalcoulon/Gallatin land at a low cost. Clerc inherited his wife's land after his wife's family and she all died.

Mr. Clerc settled in the 1870's in Ripley and married Mary E. Smith, daughter of George Smith. They had two children: Lonnie, who died in infancy and Adele, who moved to California.

Mr. Clerc was a partner of Col. John H. Riley in the real estate firm of Clerc and Riley. They constructed the first brick business building in Ripley. It is now occupied by Comer's Hardware. Mr. Clerc died February 6, 1886 and is buried in the Seventh Street cemetery.

In 1890, the home was sold by Clerc's widow, Mary Clerc to H.F. Pfost. Mr. Pfost sold it in 1892 to T.E. Graham, and in 1898, he sold it to A.M. Carson for $2500.

Clerc-Carson House

The bricks were made on the property. They were later painted because they were sandy and soft. The roof is of patterned colored slate. Originally the home had gingerbread trim on both the front parlor bay window and the front porch. It was removed after it deteriorated.

Inside the main rooms are all 17 x 17 with 10 1/2 foot ceilings. The curved stairway is walnut and white pine and was brought from Baltimore by wagon. The mantle in the parlor is made of walnut and ash and the one in the den of oak. The pink opalescent light hanging in the upstairs hall is probably Wheeling Glass.

The home had a well and a cistern. The well was on the Seventh Street side of the home just off the side porch. It was stone lined and was covered over in 1954. The cistern is on the lower side of the house. Mr. Clerc had a wine cellar which was removed in 1954 when central heating was installed.

Behind the home are several out-buildings. One of these was used as a laundry. A closet there was used to smoke meat. From these outbuildings a stone walk led down to an out-house which was shielded from view by a lattice grape arbor. The out-house was fancy with built-in toilets and wallpaper.

The out-building which fronts on Seventh Street was known as the Sample Room. It was used by salesmen or drummers to show samples to Mr. Carson for his general store. Behind it to the rear of the property was a stable which has since been torn down.

In 1924 A.M. Carson converted the gas lighting to electricity and installed indoor plumbing. The front porch was changed and the present metal fence installed.

Mrs. Liza Johns Staats lived in the house for 12-15 years after Mr. Carson died and Mrs. Carson was hospitalized. In 1953 Enoch Dwight Staats, M.D., grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Carson, renovated and moved his family into the home. A dozen layers of wallpaper were removed from all the walls, a new kitchen installed, a heating system installed and other improvements made. In 1979, after the deaths of Dr. and Mrs. Staats, their daughter Dorothy Staats Kerns and her family, moved into the home. THE CEDARS

The Cedars was the Wells, Brown, Fowler family home for over 100 years; five generations lived here.

Ephraim Wells Home (The Cedars)

Ephraim Wells, in 1835, bought from Dr. Peter (husband of Martha Custis), a devisee of George Washington, a large tract of land adjoining the present town of Ravenswood, and moved there in March 1836. This land had been patented to George Washington by King George III in 1772. Mr. Wells' first home was near the river. The house pictured was built in the late 1840's.

Judge Robert S. Brown bought the property from his father-in-law in 1876. When Judge Brown died in 1891, he left his son, Charles L. Brown, a life interest in the property. When Charles Brown died in 1937, his daughter, Helen Brown Fowler, by the will of her grandfather, inherited the property. Mrs. Fowler, her husband, Frederick, and daughter, Elizabeth, lived at the Cedars until 1948 when they sold the property.

THE HYRE HOUSE

The last purchase of land by Jonathan Hyre was adjacent to his farm and extended to the present Route 33. This land contained an ideal home site on a ridge of land and from this site the surrounding meadows and bottom lands would be within sight of the house.

In 1858, Jonathan entered into a contract with a local French stone mason, Andre Gilibeau, to build the home out of native sandstone. In a small ceremony the corner stone was laid in place. This stone was hollowed out and a newspaper, a bottle of peach brandy distilled from the fruits of his orchards, and a few coins were placed within the stone.

Jonathan's sympathies were with the South during the Civil War and he was ostracized for his allegiance. Times were hard and Jonathan lost a portion of the monies that was set aside for the construction. The construction was abandoned and the home stood as a mere shadow of a dream.

David Hyre, Jonathan's eldest son, purchased the farm and home site from his father. David resumed the construction on the home with another stone mason, Eugene Fleau.

Hyre House

Because of the slow progress, David contracted for the completion of the exterior and interior with a local carpenter, Benjamin Cunningham.

A unique feature on the front facade of the house is the mouldings above the windows and on the lintel above the front entrance. These mouldings were an integral part of the stones and each have the same contour.

The exterior stone structure is not an integral part of the interior, therefore, the interior of the house was built as a separate entity in itself.

The cornices were finished with 26 inch wide poplar boards with bead moulding and decorative brackets under the eaves.

The ceilings and floors of the interior were finished with tongue and grooved lumber. All of the rooms on the first floor have ten foot high ceilings. With the high ceilings, transoms above all exterior doors, and fourteen inch thick stone walls, the rooms remained relative cool during the summer. All of the window sills on the first floor were reset and the extra tall windows provided abundant natural light in the rooms.

Begun by Jonathan and completed after 30 years of construction by his son David, it was the home for three generations of the family and will be long remembered as the Hyre home. This information was supplied by Gene Hyre

THE LaCAVA RESIDENCE

The majestic old house at 802 Walnut Street in Ravenswood, has been standing since early in 1900's when George Park, the first cashier for the Jackson County Bank, built this Victorian brick home between 1900 and 1904. It is now the home of the LaCava family, Chip and Barbara and their four children: Daniell, Megan, Adam, and Chad.

George Park purchased three lots, March 17, 1899. They were conveyed to him by Bertie Armstrong, who had purchased them from the estate of Henrietta Fitzhugh Barre on July 1894. George resigned his position with the Bank in 1905 and founded his own institution, "Farmers Building and Loan Association". George was the grandson of the Robert Park who built the family home by the Ohio River in 1840.

George Park was ahead of his time in designing and building his home. He wanted all of the modern conveniences that were available at the time. For the indoor plumbing, water was gathered from the roof to fill a cistern in the basement, then pumped to the third floor to a large holding tank. This provided water with pressure to serve the bathrooms, lavatories in each bedroom (the basins were set in marble) and for laundering. Water for drinking and cooking came from a well. The 21 room house has three floors and a basement. The basement has five rooms; coal room with brick floor and walls, furnace room which once had a large coal furnace, cellar, laundry and play room. The seven rooms on the first floor are: living room, formal dining, family, reception, kitchen, breakfast and an oval bar that was added by enclosing part of the front porch. The first floor also has a bath and entry at the front door. The second floor has four bedrooms, bath and an upstairs family room, located in the turret, also two walk-in closets. At each end of the hallway are stairways. The front stairs descend to the reception room and the rear stairs descend to the kitchen. The third floor has three rooms and an alcove, which is being finished by the LaCava's.

LaCava House

On October 7, 1907, George Park sold the home to K.C. Hutchison, son of O.S. Hutchinson, President of the Jackson County Bank. Later the son became president of the same Bank. K.C. Hutchinson maintained two homes, the one on Walnut Street and the other on his farm at Meadowdale.

The house was sold again in October 22, 1934, to Orville and Nellie Hughes. He was an auto mechanic and operated a business through a small garage on the lower corner of the property. He died in May of 1953 and the property was left to his wife Nellie. During the construction and early operation of Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Company in Jackson, Mrs. Hughes rented sleeping rooms.

After the death of Nellie Hughes, the house was sold through the heirs to Pauline and E.T. Nesselrode on July 28, 1978. They made major improvements to the heating and cooling systems, and on February 21, 1980 they sold the house to Judith A. and Michael Henthorn. The Henthorns sold to Maryle E. and Delwin Weightman, II, on March 6, 1984. The present owners, Barbara Taylor and Philip Paul LaCava, bought the house on September 29, 1987. They have repaired the exterior and replaced 11 of the 49 windows. Their children are the first to be reared in this house. Other families had teenagers but no small children.

LOCKHART-VANNOY-KENT

This house located on old Route 21 near Lockhart was built by Albert Lockhart. The date of construction is unknown but believed to be near 1866. Albert Lockhart built the first store and became the first postmaster in that year. The double portico seen in the picture has been replaced by a flat-roofed porch. Otherwise, the house remains as it was built with a central hall and stairway. The large attached kitchen is a one-story room and the six-over-six windows are still in use. Also noted in the photo are three types of wooden fencing-horizontal board, paling and split rail. The store building, destroyed in the 1889 flood, was never rebuilt.

The land is part of the original Cheuvront purchase from the John Allison heirs. Albert Lockhart was a grandson of Amos Cheuvront. After the death of Albert Lockhart, his daughter, Annetta and husband, John (Dock) Vannoy, became owners of the property and it became known as the Vannoy place. Later owners were Delbert and Fay Vannoy Bever. Present owners are John and Patricia Thomas Kent and sons, John and Stephen. John is son of Delmer and Margaret Vannoy Kent and great-grandson of Albert Lockhart. Submitted by Gaynelle S. Davis by Charles Mason, whose parents came from Noble County, OH in the 1870's. Mason sold the property to James Kittle in 1915, who sold to E.H. Davis in 1925, father of the present owner.

Mason-Somerville-Davis House

The property had several owners from 1932 to 1958 when H.D. Somerville purchased it. The sagging two story front porch was replaced by the present brick pillared portico and extensive repair made throughout the house. The lithograph of Abraham Lincoln from the old Brushy Fork school house was placed on the portico gable at this time.

THE ROBERT PARK HOME

On the 15th day of December 1772, King George III conveyed a tract of 2,448 acres of land in Botetourt County, Virginia (now Jackson County, West Virginia) to George Washington for his services rendered during the French and Indian War.

Ephriam Wells purchased 1,475 acres of the above land on the 11th day of July 1836 from John P.C. Peters (a member of the Washington family). Ephriam Wells and Margaret Wells, his wife, conveyed 350 acres for $3,000.00 to Robert Park, Sr.

On the sixth day of June 1838, Robert Park, Sr. conveyed for $2,000 and love and affection 175 acres to his son William Park, and 175 acres (the upper part) to his son, Robert Park.

In 1840, Robert Park constructed a home on his portion of the land. This home was constructed on the higher land facing the Ohio River. The bricks used to build the home were made on the property. The outside walls, as well as every interior wall, are three layers of brick thick. The outside walls are laid four rows lengthwise then one row endwise. A cornice of several bricks laid in an angular pattern surround the entire exterior.

Robert Park Home

The basement is divided into three rooms and has walls made of large hand cut blocks of sandstone. The outside basement entrance steps are also made of large slabs of hand cut stone.

All of the interior walls were covered with plaster reinforced with horsehair.

The first floor consisted of two large rooms on the southern side, a wide center hallway, and one large room on the northern side.

The main stairway built in the center hallway turned into a narrow hallway on the second story. This story consisted of a large room on each side of the hallway facing the river, and a large room on the southeast which could only be entered by a steep narrow stairway from the room below it on the first floor. This room was spoken of as the "slave room" because the solid door at the foot of the stairs could only be opened from the downstairs room side. This form of construction is a puzzle as the Parks were southern sympathizers. The attic was accessible only through a small opening in the upstairs hallway and was not high enough to stand in. The wooden construction boards were made of the hearts of yellow poplar trees which are still solid today.

Three double chimneys provided open fireplaces in each of the six rooms. All of the windows, except two small ones in the "slave room," were wide 12-pane glass with sills as deep as the brick walls. The panes were made of hand rolled glass. At each window on the exterior there were center opening slat shutters. (Several of these original shutters are still in use today.)

The doors, exterior and interior, were wide four-panel design; the baseboards were tall; and the floors were random-width boards. All of the woodwork was hand finished on the property. The tools for making the woodwork were found in the attic in 1942, when renovation work was done to the house. (More renovations and additions followed in years to come, and all were done to reflect the original style and architecture of the home.)

Facing south was a small porch and facing the river was a pillar portico with a stone floor and steps. These pillars were made of poplar wood. The home was renovated, modernized and added to in 1940 and again in 1975.

The roof of the home was made of dark grey cut slate. The original slate roof is still in good condition on the outside "privy". This building was placed about forty feet from the home. The walls are of brick laid in the same design as the home; even the solid wooden door is of the same tooled trim as the home. Inside the walls were plastered; there is a fume exhaust chimney, and it contained two adult and one child's toilet seats. The only renovation that has been done to this building is a new floor.

Originally, the kitchen was not attached to the main house, but a later wooden one accessible from both the hallway and the back southern room was attached.

Six generations of Parks, (five generations named Robert), lived in the home through the years. Submitted by Sallie P Park

FRANK AND SARAH STAATS HOME

This house was near Staats Mill (one mile below) — where; lake formed by Perry Emmit O'Brien Dam is. It was built (I believe) in the 1890's where another house had been. The other house was converted into a shop where Frank had a watch mending shop and in my time was a wood house and play area for granddaughters. The house was two stories in front and one in the rear where kitchen, dining room and back porch were. The front door opened into a large front room where the fireplace was. A stove was in the other large room and it was used as living and sleeping room in winter. Two small bedrooms opened into the room with the fireplace. An enclosed winding stair led to the two large upper rooms and a large attic and storage room over kitchen and dining room. Back of the house was a cellar and smokehouse with large room above them. Two grape vines trailed around them — white and blue. Sarah made some wine for home consumption from them.

J. Frank Staats House

A sweet apple tree was in the front yard with hydrangea bush and pink weigelia (started from sprig from daughter-in-law's bridal bouquet) on the opposite side of cut stone front walk. The back yard contained a covered water well with bucket under an early yellow transparent summer apple tree. People traveling the road would come in the side gate, get a drink of water, and go out the front gate. Back of the yard was an apple orchard and above the house was garden, corn cribs with wagon shed between and barn for horses and cows with shed attached for buggy and hack. All were enclosed in barn lot. The creek wound around in front and had once been in the house. A swinging bridge crossed the creek in front of the house to a path through the woods. All is gone now. Submitted by Vera Crum

STARCHER PLACE

Starcher Place, reached by a private drive off of West Main Street in Ripley, stands on land owned by the Starcher family for six generations. It is unique in that it was designed completely by Willia Keenan Starcher (Mrs. Samuel G. Starcher), who for years studied architecture as a hobby. Her creativity is seen throughout the house. She designed the home in its entirety to scale keeping in mind the values of dignity, comfort, and convenience. Blueprints were made from her scale model for the use of contractors who constructed the home.

Starcher Place

Mrs. Starcher's knowledge of architectural history and her artistic ability are evident in the handmade doors and window. The dining room mantle, one of five in the home, came from the home built on the same spot by Robert E. Starcher in 1855. One of the main features of the home is the central hall with an interesting stairway, "built for old age", with wide treads and low risers.

The present occupant of Starcher Place is Genevieve Starcher, who enjoys sharing the home with friends and the community. Submitted by Genevieve Starcher

NEWSPAPERS

The "Virginia Chronicle" was the first regularly published newspaper in Jackson County. W.P. Frost put out the first issue on September 1, 1853, and operated the paper until 1858 when he sold it to his brother, Dan. Daniel Frost operated the paper for three years, leaving in 1861 to join the 11th Virginia Volunteer Infantry. The next year the paper's publishing facilities were destroyed by fire.

According to F.W. Dickerson in an article in the Ravenswood News, February 27, 1937, "The Ravenswood News first appeared in 1866 under the name of the WEST VIRGINIA NEWS, the name being changed to RAVENSWOOD NEWS on the 13th day of June, 1878, when it was purchased by C.E. McGlothlin and J.E. McGlothlin". See the article on the Ravenswood News for a complete list of name changes over the years.

In 1868 and 1869, J.H. Higgins published "The Cottageville Weekly Journal". Its banner stated "A Weekly Newspaper, Devoted to Politics, Literature, Agriculture, and General News."

The Jackson Herald began publication March 1876. See feature article.

From 1883 to the early 1890s, Everett C. Smith published the Jackson Bugle in Ravenswood. The Washington's Lands Museum has a number of issues of the Bugle on display.

In 1892, David Morris was publishing the Jackson Democrat in Ripley. The November 11, 1892 issue is noted as being from "Vol. X"; this copy is on display at the Jackson County Historical Society's Headquarters.

The Mountaineer was published from 1892 till 1957. In the 1890's Prickett and Woodell were publishing the paper in Ripley where it continued under the editorial leadership of Fred Wolfe till 1957.

In March 1894, the Jackson Herald put out a special issue on area business; the banner was "The Industrial Review."

Another special issue of historical interest was the Ravenswood News for February 27, 1936, called the "Lion's Edition." It is filled with historical articles about the first 100 years of the Ravenswood area. Submitted by Ed Rauh

FAIRS OF JACKSON COUNTY

Our county has had the good fortune through the years to have many of its citizens willing to donate their time and financial resources to ensure the people of our county would have opportunity to exhibit the talents that has made Jackson County known for top-quality agricultural products. Fairs have also served the equally important purpose of giving neighbors a chance to exchange ideas and fellowship with one another.

The early fairs were especially important in the respect that they served as a recreational event in a time when there was little to look forward to on the farm except the next day's work. Many of our older citizens can recall when living on a farm meant working 6 or 7 days a week from sun up to sun down. The event they all looked forward to each year was "Fair Time". The whole family would go and, in some cases, stay for several days.

According to the September 6, 1889, edition of the Jackson Herald, "The first fair of the Jackson County Association was held in 1877. No admission fee was charged. Next year tickets were sold at 10 or 15 cents and a year or two later, after the exhibition had grown into a first-class county fair, the usual admission fee was fixed. It was a success from the start, and the grounds, at first leased of J.M. Greer, Esq., were soon bought and paid for."

Because of the success of this early fair, in time other fairs started in the county. In 1890 the Jackson County Farmers Stock and Mechanical Exposition Association was formed. Prominent family names of our county who helped organize this fair included William Crow, G.W. Staats, J.M. Parsons, Isaiah Cunningham, L.F. Sayre, W.T. Greer, J.T. Vail, J.L. Starcher, Jonathan Chase, S.F. Shinn, George D. Vail, Dr. J.C. Carney and many others. This fair was located at the village of Evans. It had several buildings for exhibitions, an amphitheater and a horse racing track.

There were several other fairs through the years. In the Washington Museum at Ravenswood, West Virginia, there is a catalogue of premiums and regulations for the Ravenswood District Exposition and Fair Association, August 31, September 1, 2 and 3rd of 1886. The District was composed of Jackson and Roane Counties, West Virginia, and Meigs County, Ohio. The catalogue listed James T. Crum, President and E.W. Brown, Vice-President. On the back of the catalogue was an advertisement for the Bank of Ravenswood, Benj. D. Williams, president.

Around 1910 a fair started at Ripley at what is now 1st, 2nd and 3rd Avenue (the Pfost Addition). Genevieve Starcher recalled that the first car she ever saw was at the Jackson County Fair and people could take a ride in it around the race track for a nickel.

In the early 1920s, there was also a community fair at Kenna. This fair was primarily for exhibiting farm animals and produce. Although this fair was small by comparison to other fairs in the county, it had the distinction of being mentioned in a nationally circulated magazine. An article from the December 1, 1921, issue of "The American Hereford Journal" refers to the Kenna Fair as "one of the strongest Hereford shows in the state and through its influence practically every beef animal in Jackson County, West Virginia has a white face."

The Fair was organized by and held on the farm of P.C. Greene of Kenna. At the time of this writing (1990) the Greene farm is owned and operated by Carrol "Pete" Greene and his wife, Margaret. The Greene's were named "1980 West Virginia Conservation Farmer of the Year." This year marks the 100th anniversary of the Greene Farm at Kenna.

Kenna Fair, ca. 1920

Our current County Fair is operated by the Jackson County Junior Fair Association which is a non-profit organization whose purpose is to provide learning experiences for youth through project exhibits, educational exhibits, livestock shows and demonstrations.

The Fair was first organized in 1957 and was a two-day affair held at Cedar Lakes. Approximately 200 exhibits were displayed by 4-H, FFA, FHA and scouts. There was no admission charge and the only talent was provided by any youth who wished to participate.

The Fair was held at Cedar Lakes from 1957 to 1967. In 1968 it was held at Ripley High School, then back to Cedar Lakes in 1969. It was then moved to its present location at the County Farm at Cottageville. The six-day Fair has grown steadily over the years from its two-day beginning to approximately 2,000 exhibits in 1989 with an operating budget of more than $80,000. It is estimated that more than 30,000 people attended the week long event.

A market livestock sale has been held each year since 1970 when approximately 25 head of livestock was purchased from the youth of the county. From its humble beginning, it has now grown into one of the best fair livestock sales in the state. A total of 220 animals were sold in 1989 with total sales grossing more than $100,000.00.

The operation of the Fair as well as the market livestock sale is done by approximately 50 volunteers who are interested in the youth of Jackson County. Submitted by Mike McGrew and Conza Raines

HOSPITALS IN JACKSON COUNTY

The first hospitals in Jackson County were small and privately owned.

Starkey's Hospital in Ravenswood was a three-story building on Sand Street. It was owned and operated by Dr. Paul Starkey in the early 1920s.

Dr. C. Royal Kessel operated a hospital in downtown Ripley, behind the present U.S. Post Office, in the mid-1930s. Later he moved his hospital to east Main Street (the present Parsons Funeral Home). In the early 1950s, Dr. Kessel built the current Kessel Clinic on north Church Street and was joined in his practice by his son, Dr. James S. Kessel.

In the mid-1940s, Dr. Walter Priddy opened Priddy's Hospital on Washington Street in Ravenswood.

Dr. Richard Camden Starcher had the Starcher Clinic on Court Street in Ripley. It was located on the site of the present United National Bank. The Starcher Clinic was in operation from 1939 to 1956.

Jackson General Hospital was the first county owned hospital. It opened in 1964 as a non-profit hospital located on Pinnell Street in west Ripley. When the hospital originally opened, the bed capacity was 41 beds plus 9 bassinets. In 1989 the bed capacity was 95 plus 11 bassinets. In 1964 there were 47 employees and 5 medical staff doctors compared to 214 employees and 25 medical staff doctors in 1989. There have been several expansions built onto the hospital during those 25 years. A three-million dollar expansion and modernization program will be completed in 1990. *submitted by Jeanne S. PHYSICIANS

Before the formation of Jackson County, the first physician recorded practicing in this area was Jesse Bennett, who was located near Point Pleasant and rode horseback to visit patients. His history has been published in History of the Great Kanawha Valley by Hale (1891), and by Dorothy Poling in West Virginia History (1951).

The first resident physician of what is now

Ripley and Sandyville was Joseph Mairs who practiced in this county from 1825-1864. Cotton (1838) and James Henry at Ravenswood.

John D. Vandel, who lived on Spring Creek, was an herb doctor, and Dr. Ball of Wiseberg, later Ravenswood, was another herb doctor.

Early doctors in the northern and eastern sections of the County were B.N. Hensley, Lockhart; D.S. Stewart, Frozen Camp; Jefferson Harley, Liverpool-Leroy; A.H. Casto, H.D. Price, Joseph VanFossen, W.L. Y. Curry at Lockhart and Sandyville; Francis W. Cooper, Thomas Barr from Roane County.

MIDWIVES

Midwives were dedicated public servants and they were often called upon to attend a birthing of a baby. They braved the worst of weather, sometimes traveling by foot at night with lantern in hand, going up hollows, through the valleys and over ridges far from any road. Sometimes they traveled by horse and buggy or side saddle on horseback or sitting astride in the mount. Later in the early years of the 20th century there were times they traveled by automobile and when having gone as far as the vehicle would take them, they finished the trip on foot.

At the time of the delivery itself, usually several women would come to assist as well as the midwife. One of the visiting women would often hold the hand of the mother, encourage her or wipe her brow. Tools from the midwife's little medicine bag were sterilized with boiling water which included a needle for making stitches, a blunt pair of scissors for cutting the umbilical cord and a sharp pair of scissors for cutting the gut thread. After the baby was born, the midwife would cut the cord and tie it and dress the baby. Some midwives would rub the baby all over with castor oil and treat the baby's navel with castor oil while others would cut a hole in a piece of cloth, scorch it and pull the cord through it and leave the cloth on until the cord came off. This was supposed to keep the baby from rupturing at the navel.

Midwives had different methods for treating the mother. Some made tea from catnip and other herbs while others gave a dose of castor oil and paregoric afterwards. They firmly believed in a nine day bed stay and certain foods such as raw fruit, pickled vegetables and kraut were often forbidden during this period. Midwives often stayed in the homes with the mother for several days. They were not in it for the money, it was a labor of love.

Only registered midwives could charge for their services. The fees varied from two to five dollars. In many cases they were not paid at all or they were given food or other items in exchange for their services. Local doctors could issue a permit or license to a practicing midwife and doctors did not like to deal with illegitimate births or assist a woman who drank liquor at the beginning of the century.

Some of the midwives that practiced in Jackson County from 1853 to 1939 were: Sadie Balderson, Ora A. Roush, Sarah E. Bolser, Elizabeth Bonnett, Lindy Barnett, Cora Cockran, Matildy Fields, Nancy Hanshaw, Kate Peters, Florence Given, Ruth Thompson, Susan Hughes, Sarah Staats, One Bates, Dulia Safreed, Jane Good, Bettie Coleman, Phetho P. GREATER RAVENSWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The earliest date that anyone can remember for the Greater Ravenswood Chamber of Commerce is 1941. In these years the Chamber of Commerce has varied between being very active at some times and rather inactive at other times. The chamber has been more active at times when the economic stability of the community was in danger. Paul Cox, first owner of the Edgewood Motel served as the treasurer for many years. Others who served in Chamber leadership in past years include Joe Short, Walter Purdy, Carmel Robinson, Paul Moore, Burhl Chambers, Phil Fournery, Russell Straight, Pearl Slaven, Bill Caldwell, Ray Ritchie, Charles Baker, Foster Seaman, Frank Davis, Harry Gorrell, David Karr, Charles Kelly, Frank Clendenin, Larry Epling, Gail Henrichs, P.B. Harris, Larry Hancock, Bob Staats, Mac Wimbauer, Jeff Cope, Paul Qualls, Al Tetric, Rex Cummings, Norma Jean Cope, and Judy Callahan.

The present 1989 Chamber Officers are George Weirick, president; Tom Lookabaugh, vice-president; Genevieve Lewis, secretary; and Bill Cole, treasurer. Division Chairpersons are Membership: Teresa Waldeck, Finance and constitution: Tom Schmitt, Outside Projects: Norma Jean Cope, Local Projects: Judy Callahan, Public Relations and Beautification: Chris Garrison, Chamber Activities: Tom Lookabaugh; and Image: Bill Fleming. Other board members are Donna Hunnell, Bob Johnson, and Rick Robinson.

Board meetings to which all chamber members are welcome to attend are held on the second Monday of the month in various locations. The annual dinner is held on the second Monday in March, usually at the Green Hills Country Club. In recent years a joint dinner meeting has been held with the Ripley Chamber of Commerce. The chamber has supported or sponsored a number of community projects such as the All West Virginia

City, the Halloween Parade and Party, the Christmas Parade, the Ohio River Festival, and the preliminary Contest to the Miss America Pageant. From 1980 through 1987, the Chamber sponsored a Kit Fly Contest. One year there were 600 participants.

The goals of the Greater Ravenswood Chamber of Commerce include improving community relationships of businesses to residents and businesses to businesses, to encourage local shopping and make Ravenswood more attractive to everyone.

P.R.I.D.E. OF JACKSON COUNTY

In April 1986, members of the Conservation Department, GFWC Woman's Club of Ripley felt a need to create an awareness for environmental issues among the citizens of Jackson County. They planned a public meeting with discussion issues of: hazardous waste, litter-control, and the new statewide solid waste legislation. Fifty citizens attended the meeting and felt an awareness of solid waste issues so strong that it was suggested an organization be formed to pursue the problems and probable solutions facing the county. As a result of the above meeting a core group formed P.R.I.D.E. (People Requesting Illegal Dumping Eliminated) and they have accomplished the following projects:

1. 15,000 copies of the state litter law were inserted in monthly bank statements.

2. They were responsible for the passing of a county litter ordinance by the Jackson County Commission as well as a city ordinance by the City of Ripley.

3. In the spring of 1987, Jackson County Schools were involved in school and community litter awareness programs that involved a poster contest, school ground cleanup, and building of "litter-monsters" such as a 12 foot life-like green monster who was tagged as the "Trashasaurus". Students were given conservation anti-litter pledge cards to sign stating they would never litter.

4. In August 1987, in cooperation with Jackson County Schools, 43 teachers participated in a recycling program in-service workshop sponsored by P.R.I.D.E.

5. In September, Jackson County's second recycling center opened with the support of P.R.I.D.E.

6. Jackson County Extension Homemakers Clubs (17) joined forces with P.R.I.D.E. to pinpoint illegal dumps in the county and to map and report them to the Department of Highways for cleanup.

7. In two years received three grants totalling $14,700.00 from the West Virginia Department of Natural Resources for litter control and recycling projects which enabled them to: place 30 State Litter Law signs in the county; organize and coordinate the state's first pilot recycling project with 600 families participating in Ravenswood and Ripley collecting 110,000 pounds of aluminum, glass, paper, and plastic recyclable materials over a six month period; printed a RECYCLING AT HOME brochure of which 25,000 copies were distributed county-wide; with assistance of students at the Arch A. Moore Vo-Tech Center built and placed ten recycling bins in rural communities of the county with non-profit groups maintaining them; kept a community recycling trailer open during the summer months with volunteer assistance of the GFWC Woman's club of Ripley and other civic and church organizations; produced a video on litter control for the Jackson County Schools.

8. In 1989, P.R.I.D.E. received a third place award in the statewide CLEAN COUNTY CONTEST with an award of $300.00 from Alcoa Aluminum for their continued efforts in litter control and recycling. As a direct result of the pilot recycling project and creation of awareness for the need to become part of the solution to the solid waste problems of the county, the communities of Ravenswood and Ripley applied for and received a one year grant to continue a community wide recycling effort. The combined grants totalling $60,000.00 provide for curbside collection and guarantee an extended life for the Jackson County Sanitary Landfill.

The membership and anti-litter pledge cards distributed by P.R.I.D.E. state: "I will never, never, never litter roads, road rights of way, streams, parks, or public property. I will help make Jackson county the cleanest in the state."

Members of P.R.I.D.E. realize that the future isn't something that just happens, YOU AND I create it and they are determined to "change the habits" of citizens in litter-control and we are seeing it happen on a daily basis as citizens become involved in helping to become a part of the solution to the massive solid waste crisis facing us as we enter the decade of the 90's. Submitted by Ollie M. Harvey, Chairman

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY TO RIPLEY POST #107

The American Legion Auxiliary to Jackson Post #107 was organized July 12, 1930 (one had been organized earlier but had discontinued) with Maude Starcher as President, Ruth Hockenberry as First Vice President, Ruth Boice as Second Vice President, Delsie Rader as Treasurer, Lucille Castrup as Secretary, and Nettie Hively as Chaplain. There were 19 members, all wives of Veterans except Nettie Hively, who was the mother of a Veteran.

Through the years, they helped support VA Hospitals and helped local Veterans and families with money earned with Poppy sales near Memorial Day. They assisted the Legion with the County Fairs, sent gifts to Salem Girls Home, bought flags for graves of Veterans. A Legion Home was purchased in the 1930's with their first meeting there on June 18, 1936.

During WWII years, time was spent there rolling bandages. Eugenia Kerwood, Maude Starcher and Carra Skidmore took training and supervised along with Edna Casto and others.

They had a refreshment stand on July Fourth for a number of years. They sent girls to Girl's State (an American Legion Auxiliary State and National Week Camp for High School Juniors at Jackson Mills).

The name was changed to Ripley from Jackson in 1956-57 year. It now has 19 members, but has had as many as 90.

The Legion Home deteriorated after flood water damage in December 1979, and was torn down in 1986. A new Legion Home has been built in 1989-90 by the Legion to be ready for meetings in spring of 1990. Submitted by Vera Crum

RAVENSWOOD LIONS CLUB

Lionism came to West Virginia on September 30 1921, when the Charleston Lions Club was chartered. West Virginia has the distinction of two International Presidents; Edwin R. Kingsley of Parkersburg, 1936-37, Dudley L. Simms, 1958-59; eight International Directors, Dr. Carl L. Kennedy, 1940-42; Roy P. Herold, 1947-49; Walter J. Purdy of Ravenswood, 1961-63; Richard R. KENNA GRANGE NO. 516

The Grange, a community organization, is composed of families and individuals who share an interest in their communities and who seek to help keep America strong through local Grange leadership. With Granges across the country in position to address the varied needs of the rural, small town and suburban area they serve, thousands of Grangers are working together to improve their own and their neighbor's quality of living through programs of community service and personal betterment.

Seeing that the Kenna community was in need of such an organization and after visiting other Granges, several community leaders took upon themselves the task of organizing a Grange. After several months of planning, a group applied for, and on March 13, 1951, was issued a charter. First meeting of the new Grange was held March 29, 1951. Robert "Bob" Merrifield was the first Master of Kenna Grange.

During the early years of Kenna Grange, all of the meetings and most of the Grange activities were held at the Kenna Grade School. After the Grange was soundly established, the officers and members decided they needed a Grange Hall.

As early as the Spring of 1953, plans were being made for the construction of a community building. Land next to the Kenna School was obtained and in 1955 construction began. On July 21, 1956, Kenna Grangers held their first meeting in the newly completed first floor of the building. In 1959 the second floor was completed. Most of the construction was supervised by Russel Landfried. Kenna Grangers attained their goal of paying off the mortgage and on the evening of May 14, 1966 a Burning of the Mortgage and Dedication of the Hall Ceremony was held.

Kenna Grange Hall

Kenna Grange has won both state and national recognition for its community service projects. In 1959 Kenna Grange was among the top 10 Granges in the nation for community service. For this honor Kenna Grange was presented with a plaque and a check for $1,000 dollars.

Community service projects have always played an important part in Grange work. Our Grange solicited money for construction of the original unit of the Jackson General Hospital, Ripley and Kenna Volunteer Fire Departments and other community and county projects. We have endorsed such projects as the Jackson County Levies and Bonds, road improvement, water shed projects and, sewer and water projects.

Throughout the years, Kenna Grange and individual members have received several honors on the Subordinate, Pomona, State and, National levels of Grange work.

Kenna Grange Hall serves as a hub for community activities. Several organizations (4-H Clubs, Scouts, Homemaker's Clubs, Lions Club, etc.) use the building on a regular basis. Family reunions, receptions, bridal and baby showers are held throughout the year.

As our community continues to grow, the Grange will keep on contributing experience, initiative, and leadership for the general good. Submitted by Dallas W. Skeen

THE LOCKHART LADIES AID

The Lockhart Ladies Aid was organized in 1933 by Rev. Reynolds. The ladies met once a month for all day, each member taking turns. The one that had the meeting prepared dinner for all, which was around 30-35 visitors and members. Fried chicken was the main meat for the meals; every one had chickens; not many farmers killed beef. I remember my Grandma would start preparing dinner two days before. Later, one made a dinner list and each would take a covered dish which made it easier on the hostess. The ladies goal was to make money to help the church with expenses besides getting together for socializing. They pieced quilts, quilted them, made aprons, and pillow cases to sell. In the summer on a Saturday night, they would have an ice cream social serving homemade ice cream, cake, coffee and would have a tub of bottled soft drinks with ice to keep cold. People would come from afar and the younger ones would play swinging games like "Old Dan Tucker".

In the fall, they would have a pie and box social; the girls would bring boxes with candy and goodies in it all decorated beautifully and they would be auctioned off to highest bidder. Usually a boyfriend would have to pay a larger sum for his girl's box; they also had cake walks at 10 cents a couple.

In later years it was changed to Mary Elizabeth Circle with the next generation. Submitted by Christine Moore Rasel

EARLY 4-H HISTORY

4-H, first known as Boys and Girls Club Work, began officially in West Virginia in 1914, though there had been corn clubs in some counties in the early 1900s. The first reference in Jackson County to a similar organization was a February 20, 1915 meeting for "all boys and girls who are interested in forming a poultry club at Ripley."

On March 20, 1915, the Farm Bureau approved plan for "Boys' and Girls' Club Work — that acre corn, 200 hill corn and poultry club work be carried on over the county and there be an exhibit of corn and poultry in fall."

By September, the Ripley Fair Association had "arranged to allow the boys and girls doing club work free admission to the Fair providing they bring an exhibit of their work" to the October 5-7 fair.

By February 4, 1916, "over 100 enrollment cards for club work during the coming year have been signed." In March 1916, the County Agent, Stuart A. Cody, listed rules for Boys and Girls in the four areas of corn, poultry, pigs, and potatoes; those four projects were the only listed projects for close to five years.

Most of the early clubs seemed to be organized in the schools, although there were a few members who did not belong to a school club. One of the earliest clubs was the Lower Trace Agricultural Club that was working in potatoes, chickens, and pigs prior to April 1916. The boys in that club had developed a baseball team. At nearly the same time, there was a poultry club with 17 boys in Ripley. In May the Ripley boys beat the Lower Trace boys in a baseball game, 13 to 12. Another club was formed at Medina on April 20, 1916, with Myrtle McBride as president. "A large portion of these members belong to the poultry club work." By May there was a Ravenswood Girls Club; they, too, were enrolled in poultry.

By 1920 there were 13 clubs in Evans, Centennial, Clay Lick, Echo, Given, Grass Lick, Kenna, Kentuck, Locust Grove, Medina, Mt. Moriah, Parchment Chapel, and Sandyville. More than 100 members were enrolled. In 1921 there were 208 members.

The first Jackson County 4-H camp was in early August, 1920 with 78 boys and girls attending the five day camp at the old Evans fairgrounds. The next year 125 attended the camp, also at Evans. The camp cost 50 cents and was marked by a ferocious thunderstorm that drove the girls into the Otterbein Church and the boys into the barns for safety. At the 1921 camp, county club officers were elected, with J. Rodgers King of Ripley as president. By fall 1921, "The 4-H Boys and Girls club netted sufficient funds in conducting a lunch and soft drink stand during Soldiers Reunion at Ripley to purchase an army field (mess) range as part of the permanent camp equipment. . . . The various clubs will hold pie suppers, box socials and the like during the winter to raise funds for camp tents and other equipments." The 1922 camp was held at the "Big Woods" on the Ohio River, and the 1923 camp was at Chestnut Orchard near Stats Mill.

The first reference to 4-H instead of Boys and Girls Clubs was shortly after the 1921 camp.

Early county agents were Stuart A. Cody, Verd Peterson, C.C. Caldwell, and G.H. Castrop. Assistant, temporary county agents were hired, usually during the summer, to assist the county agent with the Boys and Girls work; early assistants were Tracy Fling, Virgil Kyger, Forrest Barnhart, and W.C. Casto. Submitted by Jerry Grady

FIRST 4-H IN JACKSON COUNTY

The first 4-H camp in Jackson County was August 1920 at the old Evans fairgrounds. The following is part of a column written by county agent C.C. Caldwell in the August 6, 1920 issue of the Jackson Herald.

"The weather was ideal. Monday by 6:00 p.m. practically all of the 78 boys and girls at camp had reported with the happy smile and the equipment called for on the list sent to them the week before. The large tent was used as headquarters for the camp cooks and a section of it for the commissary department. The regular program was carried out each day; the night doings around the camp fire being the most interesting and enjoyable of the day. The first night was taken up in getting acquainted, learning some songs and yells, etc.

First 4-H Camp

"A court of dog soldiers was appointed to see that the rules of the camp were observed and especially to see that no brave was permitted to coo around any squaw. The order of the camp was so ideal that there was not a single case to be tried before the Dog Court. Boys and Girls were grouped separately in classes, in games, in mess line, and in all camp activities. There was no time for reveille to taps when the boys and girls were permitted to run at large about the camp grounds.

"On Wednesday the camp was divided into four Indian Tribes: two tribes of boys and two tribes of girls, with a chief over each tribe. These chiefs were chosen because they had showed ability in leadership and willingness to cooperate and to obey instructions. The girls were divided into the Mingo Tribe with Freda Horn as chief and the Delaware Tribe with Mertie Hunt as chief. The boys were divided into the Cherokee Tribe with Darrell Corbin as chief and the Shawnee Tribe with Otmer Staats as chief.

"Tuesday nights program consisted of the camp fire circle with songs and yells and stories by "D. Boone", "Grandpa" and "Aunt Sue", closing with a game known as the Bacon Scouts. A picket line was thrown about the camp and four scouts were left outside each with a pound of bacon. No one of the pickets knew who the persons were that were appointed as scouts and it was the aim of the scout to steal through the picket line and get to the camp fire.

"Wednesday night the program was much the same as Tuesday night except that it closed with a Treasure Hunt. Four trails were laid, one for each tribe, with twelve stations on each trail. At each station a card was found giving directions to next station, the last card telling where the treasure lay. The tribes were started simultaneously with one flashlight in the hands of the chief on these trails and the first one finding the treasure was permitted to possess it and was awarded 1,000 points.

"Thursday night was "stunt night". The program consisted of original stunts gotten up and rendered by tribes, groups in tribes and individuals in tribes.

"Friday night the final awards were made. A system of charting was used by which 24 of the boys and girls over 15 years of age were measured to find their rating in the four H's Head, Heart, Hand and Health. 1,000 possible points could be scored under each of the H's, 700 being required as minimum to win each H. The instructors and leaders did the charting during the week and the following 4-H gold pins awarded: Those winning all four H's, Darrell Corbin, Freda Horn, and Mertie Hunt; those winning three H's, Otmer Staats and Irene Smith; Those winning two H's, Troy Kessel, Willard Casto and Audra Landfried; those winning one H, Murhl McBride, Robert Woodard and Homer Horn." Submitted by Jerry Grady

Delbert French, WWII, settled in Charleston, His name went on the DuPont payroll and he retired from there.

Arthur French also went to the Charleston area where he was employed by Union Carbide; he is now deceased.

Albert Kessel moved to Arizona in 1948. He was a 40 year member of International Typographical Union, CWA, typesetter and trouble shooter at Arizona Republican, Phoenix, for 27 years, retiring in 1977.

FAIRPLAIN EXTENSION HOMEMAKERS CLUB

On November 17, 1965, a group of women met at the home of Mrs. Earl Holley in Fairplain with the idea in mind to form a Farm Women's Club. This meeting was set up by Phyllis Sullivan. Shirley Campbell, Home Demonstration Leader of Jackson County, presided at that meeting. They elected their officers and the first president was Phyllis Sullivan.

The members decided to call their club "The Fairplain Homemakers" instead of a Farm Women's Club since not many of them did much farming. The meetings were held on third Tuesday of each month and dues were $2.00.

As the years rolled by, the Club became known as "The Fairplain Extension Homemakers" with many members joining and then moving on. Irene Casto has given much of her time and talents to the club. Through the years the Club has given to several charities, worked in the bean stand at the Cedar Lakes Arts & Crafts Fair, made quilts, helped the community, etc. The Homemakers have become better educated on different subjects, learned lots of crafts with the professional advice and help of Home Economist, Sue Black.

MURRAYSVILLE EXTENSION HOMEMAKERS

May we have pride in our role as Homemakers and may our hearts be filled with joy as we serve. PARCHMENT VALLEY EXTENSION HOMEMAKERS CLUB

On June 21, 1925, the Parchment Valley Farm Women's Club (presently known as Parchment Valley Extension Homemakers Club — PVEHC) was organized at the Pleasant Hill Church on Parchment Road, Given, WV, by Mrs. Iva Gould of Upshur County as a climax of a Country Life Conference held there. There were 21 members on organizational day.

In 1928 and possibly one other year the monthly meetings were held at the church. All other meetings have been held in members' homes.

Many families in and around Parchment Creek in Jackson County have been influenced by the activities of the PVEHC. From its conception the primary purpose of the club has been education. In its formative years education focused upon creating and maintaining a better home life and environment. Study topics, demonstrations and exhibits covered such subject areas as making American cheese, cheddar cheese and mint candy; folding clothes; ironing shirts; upholstering furniture; making clothing from feed sacks; using canning equipment; remodeling garments; to name a few.

Today's subject areas deal with topics such as family relationships; personal, family and community health programs; environmental issues; time management; leadership development, etc.

PVEHC has continuously supported the Student Fund which enables a foreign female student to attend West Virginia University; and local and county 4-H programs.

Community support includes assistance to local churches, shut-ins, families in time of need, and maintaining the area around "The Man in the Rock", a local point of interest.

PVEHC is a unit of the Jackson County Extension Homemakers Council (JCEHC) with representation at JCEHC functions.

SANDYVILLE EXTENSION HOMEMAKERS HISTORY

Sandyville Good Neighbors Farm Woman's Club was organized in 1956 under the direction of Jane Hart Rhodes, Home Demonstration Agent. Organizing members were Rosa Balser, Thelma Cook, Katie Coast, Gladys Barnhart, Erna Lockhart, Mary Clem, Amanda Coe and Fanny Murray.

The club has continued to be active since that time, seeing three name changes, from Farm Woman's Club, to Home Demonstration Club to present Extension Homemakers Club.

The club has been an active supporter of the 4-H program and the Jackson County Jr. Fair.

The club has supported many community projects such as litter, health and nutrition projects, and helped families who have been burned out.

We lost our last charter member in 1988 with the passing of Fanny Murray. Fanny stayed active past the age of 95 and was an inspiration to all our younger members until the time of her death.

Sandyville Homemakers meet monthly at Sandyville Methodist Hall, which they help as a community project.

Current members are Jo Raines, Bess Kurish, Imogene Gwinn, Lucy Taylor, Edith Shephard, Lillian Utt, Chris Fulk, Joyce Waskey, Pat Smith and Wylene Smith.

THE SOUTH HILLS EXTENSION HOMEMAKER'S CLUB

A new club was organized on November 28, 1952 and was named "The South Hills Farm Women's Club" with 13 charter members: Marie Casto, Bernice French, Buddie Hall, Mildred Hall, Ruth Hall, Junita Hickel, Beatrice Fisher, Lois Nuckles, Pauline Parsons, Valeria Powers, Diane Powers, Ruby Southall, Bertrice Lee Southall. Two of the Charter members, Pauline Parsons and Valeria Powers, are still in the club, along with one 50 year member, Alma Speicher.

Through the years the club's project was the beautification of the roadside park on Route 21, then known as Salt Hill. Winning a victory over the State Road Commission the name was changed to South Hill. Old Route 21 is known as Salt Hill. Trees were planted, rock flower beds formed and a new flagpole was installed. Due to vandalism in recent years, the project was abandoned.

For the State's 100th Anniversary Dinner on June 20, 1963, members wore Centennial dresses they made themselves.

We were on "Dialing for Dollars" TV Show, in Huntington, West Virginia winning several prizes.

Each year, in November, we have our Anniversary Dinner and invite husbands and guests. On November 12, 1977, our 25th Dinner was held.

We visit nursing homes in Ripley and Ravenswood each year, bringing gifts to patients, singing songs with them and serving them refreshments.

We've held workshops, open meetings, donated money to many worthy causes, entertained foreign students, attended Women's Day at State Legislature, attended Area and Achievement Day meetings, hosting some.

One outstanding member, Phyllis Smith, has worked tirelessly with the Jackson Co. Literacy Program and was honored by WSAZ TV, as a "Hometown Hero".

We've been recognized in our "Adopt-a-Highway" project, under leadership of Bobbie Fisher, with signs erected with club's name, along Cedar Lake Drive. Many members and a few husbands collect trash along that route.

Several members have made quilts each year for display and sale, at the Annual Quilt Show. Many ribbons have proudly been won at the quilt show and for displays at Jr. Fair.

Each year, since 1953, we've worked at a concession stand for the July 4th Celebration.

Each August, instead of Annual picnic, many members accompanied by a few husbands, take trips to Historical places.

South Hills Homemakers

We've recognized "Extension Homemaker's Week" by window displays and one year planted a Rhododendron at the Ripley Library.

Many members faithfully attend the Health Fair each year and volunteer help when needed. Most members have done volunteer work in many capacities over the years.

We've achieved a 100% record and recognition many times for book reading for the "Purposeful Reading".

Nearly every year we've been named a "Blue Ribbon Club" and our scrap books have received many a blue ribbon.

A membership of at least 18 members has been maintained through the years, losing three valuable members in death.

Five of our members were named as "The Jackson County Belle", attending the West Virginia Folk Festival at Glenville, West Virginia. Those five were: Jessie Gilbert, Bertha Fisher, Pauline Parsons, Stella Parsons and Valeria Powers.

Six members have been President of the Council: Mildred Hoff, Jerry Morris, Jessie Gilbert, Valeria Powers, Bertha Fisher and Phyllis Nuckles. Other members have been County Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer and reporter. Many also serving as County Committee Chairpersons.

As the club year of 88-89 came to an end, 14 members attended the 12th Annual Achievement Banquet, Theme for the evening being "The Academy Awards — Night of a Thousand Stars". Two members, Phyllis Smith and Loretta Woofert, performed as part of the entertainment. One member, Lena Rawlings, was recognized, receiving a certificate for her outstanding report on her committee works.

Phyllis Nuckles, as outgoing County President, was presented with a gift for her two years service.

After 37 years of work and fun, this club is "PROUD" to be a part of Jackson Co. Home Extension Service in West Virginia. Submitted by Mildred Hoff and Bertha Fisher

CEMETERIES AND POST OFFICES

Jackson County cemetery listings may be found in the following sources: Jackson County Cemeteries, Volume 1, by the Jackson County Historical Society; Jackson County Historical Society Newsletters (1970-1990), edited by Delmer Hite; Grant District Cemeteries, by Carolyn Miihlbach; Ravenswood Cemetery Tombstone Inscriptions, May 1984, by Carolyn Miihlbach.

POST OFFICES

Currently there are only 18 post offices in Jackson County. As late as 1901, there were 50; one for every town and hamlet, but like the schools, as transportation improved, one by one they have been discontinued. The last being the one at Kentuck which was deactivated, December 31, 1989.

While this was part of Mason County, the first post office, Wright's Mills, was established January 26, 1828; name changed to Moore's Mill, April 26, 1850, and to Cottageville, February 24, 1860.

Jackson Courthouse was established, January 10, 1832; changed to Jackson, March 31, 1893, and to Ripley, September 16, 1897.

Sandy was established, January 31, 1833; changed to Sandyville, May 23, 1892.

Ravenswood was established July 19, 1839; Leroy, September 21, 1857; Murraysville, March 9, 1843; Statts Mills, October 21, 1879; Kenna, July 1, 1880; Sherman, March 22, 1883; Given, December 30, 1885; Gay, January 19, 1888; Evans, January 26, 1889; Millwood, February 10, 1890; Liverpool, August 13, 1891; Duncan, February 10, 1892; Rockcastle, July 9, 1892; Advent, June 9, 1893, and Mount Alto, January 2, 1932.

Early pioneers in Jackson County got their mail, if any, from mail boats or by traveling to Charleston, Parkersburg, or Point Pleasant, until the post office was established at Wright's Mills. At that time, mail carriers usually carried the mail on their backs over the mere trails in the county, later using horses as the trails were made into dirt roads. There were bridges over few streams until the late 1800's. Automobiles were not employed in most of the county for delivering mail until after World War II.

The attached map shows the location of most of the operational and discontinued post offices in the county. Submitted by Delmer R. Hite

EDGAR POST OFFICE, 1900

During the turn of the century, the Edgar Post Office was located on Jim Ridge near the head waters of Pleasant Valley in the home of Samuel E. "Ned" Stalnaker. He secured the establishment of a post office in his neighborhood during the congressional career of the Hon. C.E. Hogg; had it named Edgar in honor of Mr. Hogg, and was its only postmaster. The post office was in service from 1887 through approximately 1909. Samuel Stalnaker was appointed Post Master on August 24, 1887. The Stalnaker family moved from Jane Lew, Lewis Co., WV to Jackson Co. in March 1874. Samuel married Mary E. Maddox and reared four children; Eddie Josephine Stalnaker Hill, Wooster Beech Stalnaker, Kinza Chalfin Stalnaker and Oda Dell Stalnaker Casto. All but one of his children were born in Lewis Co., that being the youngest. Oda Dell Stalnaker was married to James "Mance" Casto in 1911. They raised their family and lived their lifetime at that residence. The Stalnaker's and Casto's are buried at Grasslick Baptist Church cemetery on Pleasant Valley Road. The century old house remained in the family and on April 24, 1989 burned. There have been many happy memories associated with this part of our history.

Train would have to stop when the people would send cream cans to Ravenswood and cans returned back to Portland Station for the Post Office. There were stacks of catalogs delivered and the people ordered; Parcel Post and Baby chicks came to Post Office for delivery.

PUBLIC HISTORY PROJECTS

HERITAGE HOUSE

Heritage House, a memorial to the early settlers of Jackson County, stands on the grounds of the Cedar Lakes educational center. It is a two story log house which typifies genteel living of the families who came here to settle permanently and develop the region.

The main house is constructed of hand hewn logs with a board and batten kitchen. The roof is made of cut cedar shakes. The size of the house and the kind of logs used depended on the kind of trees which stood on the site selected for the home. The notching of the logs shows that the house was constructed in three stages by different craftsmen. A one story cabin became a two story house as the family grew in numbers and required more space. A kitchen, separated by a dog trot, was added when a wood burning iron stove became available and replaced cooking on the hearth. The stove at Heritage House was patented in 1878. Such stoves are rare as most of them were contributed to the scrap drive during the first World War.

The exact age of the original construction of the house or name of its builder is not known.

Heritage House

Such houses were common from the early 1800s to the end of the century. It is known that the house as completed was owned in the late 1800s by Jacob L. Starcher, the grandson of Jacob Starcher, Ripley's first permanent settler. After changing hands through the years, it was abandoned. In 1968 it was bought by Genevieve Starcher who restored it and gave it to the State Board of Education to be erected at Cedar Lakes as a living museum in the hope that it will help visitors, especially young people, acquire a better knowledge of how early settlers lived and the debt of appreciation owed to them.

Heritage House is completely furnished with original handmade furniture of walnut, cherry, poplar, and maple dating from the early 1800s which belonged to the Starcher, Doolittle, Keenan, and Skidmore families, all early settlers in Jackson County.

On the front of Heritage House is a bronze commemorative plaque which reads: "Heritage House honors the early settlers who turned forests into grain fields, built comfortable homes and established schools and churches. In answer to their petitions to the General Assembly of Virginia, Jackson County was created in 1831, and its seat of government, Ripley in 1832. These early settlers acquired the skills and knowledge essential to the westward development of the United States. To them posterity owes gratitude. Gift of Genevieve Starcher 1968" Submitted by Genevieve Starcher

OLD FIELD SCHOOL AT CEDAR LAKES

The idea of preserving some of Jackson County's pioneer schools, teaching aids and furniture in an authentic replica of an "Old Field School" was suggested by Mrs. Bernice Painter, and enthusiastically supported by the Jackson County Retired School Employees and Jackson County Court. The Court agreed to match the money that the JCARSE could solicit from members and other local groups.

Under the able leadership of Luther Hutton, committees were named to research early schools, to draw up plans, to publicize the project, to solicit funds, and to obtain legal permits for construction of such a building in the vicinity of the Starcher Heritage Cottage at Cedar Lakes.

A permit was issued by the West Virginia Director of Vocational-Technical and Adult Education Division allowing the construction of the building.

Some of the early contributors lending both moral and monetary support were: Mr. Eldon McCoy, who donated logs from a dismantled log structure; Mr. John Rhodes, Jr., who provided cut stones taken from Wright's Mill at Cottageville; the Delta Kappa Gamma Honorary Teachers Society, who made the first monetary contribution designing it to be used on the foundation of the building; the U.S. Army Reserve, Royal L. Casto,

C.W. D., who provided heavy equipment to transport the logs and cut stones to the building site; Cedar Lakes maintenance employees, who dug the footer and later assisted in roofing the school with wooden shingles furnished in part by the Department of Natural Resources and the Arts and Crafts Fair Association; and Mr. Butner's construction class from the Arch A. Moore, Jr. Vocational School, who donated many hours of labor.

Many retired teachers, clubs, businesses, fraternities, and organizations donated to the construction of the "Old Field School." The dedication was October 9, 1979, at Cedar Lakes.

WASHINGTON'S LANDS MUSEUM AND SAYRE LOG HOUSE

The Museum buildings are operated under the auspices of the Jackson County Historical Society, which attempts to collect the display items relating to the history of Jackson County and its early settlers.

Washington's Lands Museum & Sayre Log House

Washington Lands Museum

The Washington's Lands Museum takes its name from the fact that the land upon which it stands was once part of two large tracts owned by George Washington within the present boundaries of Jackson County. The first major display of county historical objects was sponsored by the DAR during the West Virginia Centennial. With the formation of the Jackson County Historical Society in 1969, the Museum was provided a

A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY

Edward H. Greene and his father, John, were connected with one of the saddest events that ever occurred in the area. His father was born in Botetourt County, Virginia, and came to this section early in the nineteenth century, settling on Allens' Fork of Poca, now in Jackson County, where he reared seven children, Edward being the only son. A neighbor was Reuben Harrison, who settled on Thirteen Mile Creek, now in Mason County. He had several sons, among whom were Alexander, Josiah and Zebulon, who was then 12 years of age. These men often hunted together, and in the spring of 1817, John Greene, with his son, then 11, visited the Harrison's.

One day during their stay, Alexander Harrison and Greene were hunting on Eighteen Mile Creek, and after killing a deer, found a tree where, from the scratches, presumed it held a bear; they left the deer carcass and hastened home to secure an axe to fell the tree. Greene, begged to accompany them, which was granted. The four arrived at the tree late in the evening and upon felling the tree found no permanent sponsor.

In Ohio River Lock building No. 22, which was remodeled to house the Museum, you will find numerous display cases filled with small articles of interest, including: old clothing, Indian artifacts, books, china, photographs, children's toys, and much more. There is a fine collection of paintings by local folk artist David Homer McFarland. Photos and memorabilia of Ohio riverboats donated by Goff Carder line a hallway.

As an appropriate setting for objects, the Museum has room settings which include: a Victorian parlor, a country store, an adjacent tool shed, a dress shop and a school room.

Objects of special note include: a glass sided horse drawn hearse, a pump organ made in Cincinnati and brought up river for use at Muses Bottom, c. 1875, and an old B & O railroad ticket stand.

LOG
1875*

Sayre Log House, 1875

The log house built by Abijah and Ellen (Hartley) Sayre near Cow Run in southern Jackson County has been restored to the period 1840-1880. Country furnishings of the period decorate the house, many items belonged to the Sayre family.

SAYRE LOG HOUSE

Abijah Sayre and Ellen Hartley were married December 24, 1874. They went to housekeeping in a sawmill building on his father's farm. Abijah's parents, Ephraim and Mazilla (Hunt) Sayre, gave them 25 acres of land. Logs were cut and hewed and this house erected in 1875. Ellen's brother, Thomas Hartley, built the stairway and also the cupboard and dough box which are still in the house today.

Abijah and Ellen Sayre had seven children and when the two oldest sons became young men a large kitchen and parlor were added to the log structure and the whole house was weather boarded. Here the Sayres lived the rest of their lives. When the youngest son, Thomas E., got married he bought part of the farm and built his home. Thomas eventually bought all the farm.

Abijah died in 1925 and Ellen in 1934. After that the log house was unoccupied and used for storage.

In August 1982, representatives of the Jackson County Historical Society toured the log house and immediately saw the possibility of preserving this log house for future generations. Mr. Sayre agreed to donate the house to the Historical Society if a permanent site could be found. The City of Ravenswood agreed to sub-lease a piece of ground in Ravenswood's River Front Park directly across from the Museum. Funds for the dismantling, move and restoration were made available from the Ravenswood Bi-Centennial Commission, the West Virginia Dept. of Culture and History — Historic Preservation Unit, the Jackson County Historical Society and many private contributions. Bob Parsons was engaged to oversee the project and by August 1983 the house was dedicated during the Ohio River Festival.

Sayre Log House, Thomas Sayre on the Porch

It is the hope of the Sayre family, the Jackson County Historical Society, and other sponsoring agencies, that this log house will stand as a monument to all of the individuals who cleared the land, raised their families, and enjoyed the good life through the generations here in Jackson County. Submitted by Ed Rauh bear. It being near dark, the party concluded to stay put until morning, and found a small cave under a shelving rock to spend the night.

After building a small fire, they lay down to rest, the men on one side of the fire and the boys on the other. Sometime during the night, the rock overhead, from the combined effect of the frost and the fire, burst, and a huge mass fell upon them.

Spot where men are buried

Both men were crushed from the hips down; the boys, though badly bruised, were able to crawl out, owing to the fact that the wood they had gathered for the fire partially supported the fallen rock on their side. Morning came, the men called for water, and the boys emptied the powder horns, and brought it. The young boys did not know the way home, so stayed with the sufferers. By the second day, their friends were searching for them, and on the fourth day, Alexander Harrison found them — his brother was already dead, and John Greene was near death. The two boys were near famishing from hunger.

Alexander put the two boys on his horse and hastened home. As he left, Mr. Greene cast one look of utter despair after them, and when a relief party hastened back, his soul, too, had departed for a better world. The rock was moved, and the two men buried where they had died.

This spot is on the old Nathan B. Casto farm, just below the Casto family cemetery where Nathan and Margaret Casto are buried. Edward H. Greene, after his first wife, Sarah Parsons, died, wedded Chloe (Crites) Pfost, widow of Francis Marion Pfost, on Grasslick, and it was the scene of the Pfost-Greene murders. Mr. Greene died, December 18, 1895. Submitted by Gaynelle Folden

A.M. CARSON STORE COMPANY

A.M. Carson Store, Ripley

After arriving in Ripley in 1889 from Racine, Ohio, A.M. Carson purchased an interest in the mercantile firm of J.M. Hensley and Company which was located in West Ripley near the railroad tracks. In 1894 Mr. Carson and W.A. Ellis of Racine, Ohio purchased the James Poling property and moved the business to the North West corner of Main and Court Streets, the present location of the Family Dollar Store. In 1914, C.C. Staats, A.M. Carson's son-in-law, purchased Mr. Ellis's interest. The firm was always known as the A.M. Carson Company. Submitted by Dorothy Staats Kerns

DIXON R. KING COMPASS

Dixon R. King Compass

The Dixon R. King Compass, used by him before the Civil War. Also used by his son, Jackson County Land Surveyor, William John King. The entire surveying set, including stakes, flags, chain, boxwood stake, tripod, plumb bob, and assorted weights has passed through five generations of the family and now belongs to Lola Kessell-Johnson, daughter of Carroll King Kessell. The set is brass; the face of the compass is solid silver, 1/2 thick; the water in the levels has been there over 130 years. Submitted by Lola Johnson

JACKSON GENERAL HOSPITAL VOLUNTEER PROGRAM

The Jackson General Hospital Volunteer Program began shortly after the hospital opened in 1965. Pastors of the various denominations participating in the Jackson County Ministerial Association are approved by the Chaplain Board in conjunction with the Hospital Board. They are then scheduled on a rotating basis to serve for one week at a time. They visit the hospital daily and are on call 24 hours a day for that week. Many pastors have served down the years, and at present there are 13 on the list and involved in the project. Submitted by Herman P. Robinson

LAND USE DAY IN JACKSON COUNTY

On Thursday, September 15, 1949 at the county farm near Cottageville, WV and on U.S. Route 33, there was held a Land Use Day. This was sponsored by the Jackson County Agriculture Council in co-operation with the Western Soil Conservation District, The Little Kanawha Regional Council, and the West Virginia State Soil Conservation Committee. This committee was composed of Delmar K. Somerville, N.K. Speicher, Wayne Hughes, F.W.D. Parsons, Lawrence S. Cavendish, Sattis Simmons, William Strunk, Carroll Greene, Walter C. Gumbel, A. Clyde Wright and B.I. Speicher.

The conservation farm plan that was installed on this farm was a complete farm plan. It was based upon a study of the actual conditions on each field. The plan will result in more efficient production with the conservation of soil and water resources. Proper land use was determined from the capabilities map and follow by the development of supporting erosion control and water conservation practices.

Technical services were provided by the Soil Conservation Service, U.S.D.A. and the Agriculture Experiment Station WVU. Education services by the county agents and vocational agriculture teachers. Labor by ex-servicemen of Jackson, Mason, Putman, Wood, Wirt, Roane and Kanawha counties who were enrolled in the Veterans Administration "On-the-Farm-Training" program.

Engineers Branch of Parkersburg National Guard built a bridge across Mill Creek for the total renovation of the County Farm, which is now the site of the Jackson County Fair. They were helped out by veterans from different counties (On-the-Job-Training). Jackson County's On-the-Job-Training was the largest program in the United States.

(This information was obtained from Lawrence S. Cavendish and Dr. Delmar K. Somerville. There is more information in the Ripley Library on file. It was a notable event and the only one of its kind in the eastern United States.)

PINNELL GATHERING

Pinnell Family Gathering

Pictured above are three well-roasted pigs that helped make the following account of county interest.

In the spring of 1952, William Lloyd Pinnell felt the need to bring neighbors, relatives and family friends together in a fellowship celebration of thanksgiving for prosperity and blessings that had followed his life in Jackson County. He and his wife, Olevia, decided to furnish a pig from his large herd of swine for a pig-roast, and plans were immediately under way for the first annual pig-roast and picnic at their spacious country home in Cottageville, always on the last Sunday in September. The event evolved into the largest private gathering in the county, and was eagerly looked forward to each year by the participants. Each guest had been personally invited by a member of the family, and the numbers grew so rapidly, that, by the second year, three pigs were roasted in order to guarantee each guest a slice of the succulent pork.

It was a family affair, that included the family of Margaret Cunningham, mother-in-law of Pinnell's daughter, Olevia (Dude). The roasting took place at the Cunningham farm in Evans, in huge Army surplus cast iron stove/ovens. On the eve of the pig-picnic, the younger family members and special friends kept an all-night vigil at the roasting site to prepare a bushel of tiny, new potatoes for browning, and to make certain that the pig was cooked to perfection, not burned to a crisp. Those moments of closeness and merriment are often brought to memory by those who were part of the scene.

The numerous cloth-covered tables were abundantly laden with a variety of pot-luck dishes that the guests brought along. The golden-brown pig, with the traditional red apple in its mouth and black-grape eyes, was delivered on a huge tray, and placed in its honored place on a table decorated with fall leaves, berries, gourds, pumpkins, squash, and large bunches of Tokay grapes. Lloyd welcomed everyone to his home, and after a prayer of thanksgiving, the carving duties each year were shared by Marion Pfost and L.C. Basham, dear and long-time friends of the family. Submitted by Joann Hoffman

RECALLS OF JACKSON COUNTY

Ravenswood, West Virginia, September 16

This is the story of an 83-year old Jackson County resident whose remarkable memory makes it possible for him to describe rural life here 70 years ago and list the names of many of the "old-timers" who resided in Grant District 70 or more years ago.

Clark A. White, who lives with his son at Muses Bottom, in an interview yesterday said that when he was a boy 10 years old the valleys in the Ebenezer, Milhoan Ridge, Toppins Grove, Road Fork, Muses Bottom, and Little Sandy sections of the county "were dotted with log cabins and a few plank houses".

"I can remember well how the people lived in those days," he said. "Not much land was farmed then, but the people made a living cutting timber for hoop-poles, oil barrel staves, tan bark, railroad ties, and wagon hubs.

"And let me tell you — the people showed plenty of hospitality in those days," he went on. "You could stop at a cabin any time and get a meal of corn bread, sorghum molasses, potatoes, beans, and fat meat. If you received any 'extras' they would be stewed turnips and dried pumpkin."

PEOPLE WERE HOSPITABLE

He hesitated, then continued:

"Speaking of hospitality, sociability was in full bloom in those days, but today the tree is dead. The war and politics take up the time of too many people, and the money-grabbers have their eyes open day and night."

Mr. White was born on Road Fork of Little Sandy Creek on March 19, 1861, a son of Jackson and Nancy Snodgrass White. He has three sisters and nine brothers. He was married March 28, 1882 to Miss Ida McKinley, who died March 31 of this year. For 15 years after his marriage, he lived on the James Morgan farm. He is the father of seven children, three of whom are living.

When he was 15 years old, Mr. White said he attended the Ebenezer Baptist Church, which then was a log structure. The minister was the Rev. Jabis Swager. Among the men of that time he remembers were Isaac Starkey, Oliver Cather, Henry Lamp, the Flannagan family, Gus King, James Gibbs, George Lodston, and Zery Kirkhart, all of whom resided in the Ebenezer section.

Asked if the boys in the country did much "gang fighting" in those days, Mr. White, his eyes snapping, said he did not remember much about such things, "But I did have one good fight myself," he said, smiling, adding:

FIGHT OVER GIRL

"That fight was over a girl, a pretty girl named Virginia Flannagan. I was attending the Road Fork School and became interested in her, and another boy, older than I was 'Bac' King, also wanted her as his girl. One day he told me if I didn't stop talking to her he'd whip me, and I told him I reckoned that was the best way to settle the argument.

"So we each selected a boy to go with us up on the hill, and for some reason, Virginia followed us. 'Bac' hit me a hard lick with his fist, and I fell backwards over an embankment. He jumped on top of me, but I managed to toss him off and get a straddle of him. I guess the girl sort of encouraged me, because when 'Bac' had me down I heard her say, 'Go on, Clark — you're not licked yet!' Anyhow, I made my rival yell 'enough' and from then on I had no trouble with him."

LOG SCHOOLHOUSES

Mr. White recalled that he was six years old when the men began to come back from the Civil War. "We had only three months of school then," he declared. "The schools were built of logs; the desks were hewn logs, and the buildings were heated by a large open fireplace.

"After the war, a man who said he was from Baltimore, came through this section of the county and asked my father, who was a school trustee, to give him a job for a month. All the pay he asked was his board and room and tobacco. He was William Keeffee, and he stayed at Road Fork for three terms, then taught in other places in Jackson County. He was one of the best teachers ever to have a job here."

When he was a young man, Mr. White played the violin and helped to furnish music for square dances. "Many a time I've played all night for dances that were held at the homes of different families. Tickets were sold for 10 cents a dance, and the girls came from all directions. They wore home-made dresses that reached below their ankles. Yes, those 'ho downs,' or 'shin-digs,' as we called them, were gay events."

RAVENSWOOD HIS HOME TOWN

Ravenswood has always been his "home town," Mr. White said.

"I remember a lot of old people here. Among them were Uncle Charley Harold, the tanner; 'Ran' Miller, the engineer at the Ravenswood Mill; George Leonard, Ben Williams, and Robert Wetzell, merchants; Judge R. S. Brown, Robert Park, grandfather of Robert K. Park, William Proctor, Gus' grandfather, and Jack Roliff."

Mr. White recalled the following persons who were old men when he was a young boy:

Milhoan Ridge — Peter, Lemuel, William, George, and John Milhoan, the Bloomfield family, George Sinnett, and Nathaniel Hoselton.

Toppins Grove — Capt. and Col. King, who were officers in the Union army during the Civil War. Scott and John King, "Old Man" Jacoby, who made coffins from black walnut and cherry wood; Dave Hale, the Watkins family, Henry Shafer, and Charles Boso, who was 106 years old when he died, and who operated a mill on Little Pond Creek.

WORKED FOR 25 CENTS A DAY

Road Fork — James Birch, William Staats, who lived up on Hog Trail, a branch of Road Fork; Oliver Gaston, Cyrus Jarrett, Daniel Landon, and Joshua Cox, for whom Mr. White worked for 25 cents a day on his farm.

Little Sandy — Stepto Rector, "Eleven" Rector, Ellis Nesselroade, Herbert Palmer, Peter Aten, Reuben Cooper, Isaac and John Safreed, DeWitt and Davis Rardin, William Safreed, Noah Staats, Tom and Sam Rardin, Israel Nesselroade, Lefe Cozart, William and John Slaven, James Conner, Sam McBride, and William Flinn, who owned a water mill.

Muses Bottom — Bennett and James Wheaton, Isiah Morgan, Thomas Coleman, after whom Coleman chapel was named; William Roberts, Phillip Polk, Thomas DeWitt, John Harrow, Nelson Bonar, Jack Flesher, Cole Tid, Solomon Bigley, and Jasper Congrove.

RANKIN BARN

Rankin Barn

The octagonal barn, located along the Wilding Road, in Ravenswood District, is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The Rankin family owned the property at the time the barn was erected. It is now owned by Okey and Florence Butcher. The Rankin Cemetery is located behind the barn and contains one unusual tombstone inscription: John Rankin was struck twice with a club by James Shepperson, May 24, 1860, and died from the effect of the blows, May 26, 1860.

SANTA CLAUS CAME TO CENTER POINT

It was 83 years ago, my first term in school. Center Point was a rural school with all eight grades in one small room, a rostrum across one end, and blackboard made by adding a coat of black paint to the wall boards.

I had never seen Santa Claus. My only knowledge of him was that he came down the chimney late at night, left presents around the tree for the family, which, at our house, was always cedar, and left by the same route. Nor was my curiosity aroused when, along with an older brother, I watched, through a knot-hole, our parents arrange the presents in much the same fashion that we found them in the morning.

The pupils had talked excitedly about "treat day" which was always the afternoon before Christmas, and that Santa might come in person with the candy, apples and oranges if we had been especially good. Shortly after the noon hour, when it was "books" again, another first-grader and I were sent to the spring to fetch a bucket of water. My first commission for such an important task, but wasn't I big enough? I was a first grader!

As we approached the schoolhouse all bedlam broke loose. Firecrackers, which sounded like atomic bombs to our young and tender ears, exploded all around us, and great balls of fire came roaring over the building, scarcely missing us! We had never seen a Roman candle before. With the bucket of water swinging between us, we dashed for the schoolhouse door, hoping to get there without serious injury. The door was locked! No one would let us in for all our frantic pounding. Finally, the teacher unlocked the door and we gave him our pail of water which, by this time, held scarcely enough to fill a dipper.

Once securely inside the schoolhouse, we did not have long to reflect upon our deliverance. There was a loud noise at the door and in bounced Santa with two of his helpers, all loaded with treats and goodies for boys and girls. Camaraderie continued. There were still some firecrackers to be exploded, and a general panic prevailed.

After leaving a bountiful supply of candy, oranges and apples for all the good boys and girls, Santa announced that he and his helpers had many other schools to visit and bolted out the door.

Some years later I made peace with Santa, but it was not until much later that I realized what had happened to the three "big boys" of the school, to whom I had turned for protection in my extremity, and could not find them anywhere in the building.

THE CASTO HOLE

During the Civil War, Nicholas Casto, of Statts Mills, a Union man, wrote a poem lambasting the Confederate cause and, in particular, deriding the Rebel leanings of his friend, Elihugh Powers. Powers, in return, wrote the poem known as the "Casto Hole", giving his friend as good as he had gotten. The Casto poem is long forgotten, but Powers' masterpiece is still fairly well remembered. Following are the 19 verses as remembered by Hoyt O. Powers, Elihugh's grandson.

Far in the woods on Upper Tug
They wrap old Union in a rug
Where Nicholas reads the Union Roll
And rallies 'round the Casto Hole.

The Casto Hole is a cavern deep
Where Union men can quiet sleep
Where all their warlike plans unfold
While fortified in the Casto Hole.

There you can hail the Union flag
For such they call their striped rag
Some two feet square, stuck on a pole
In the region of the Casto Hole.

Union, Union is their song
It's two feet broad and four feet long
Hold up your heads and sing it bold
A 100 feet in the Casto Hole.

Game-leg Miller took a-fright;
He took for Upper Tug one night,
His fears were far beyond control
So he bolted for the Casto Hole.

Since Wisc has gone, with him went fear
Except at night lest they should hear
Some demon howl, or ghost of old
Prowling 'round the Casto Hole.

A Southern Scout, horrors profound
A name that shakes the very ground
That name's a thunderbolt to Joel,
The General of the Casto Hole.

But, Oh! the horrors of a Scout,
To those poor creatures crowded out,
In their retreat, headlong they roll
Chock full they fill the Casto Hole.

No danger near, see how they prance
Like Indians at an Indian dance
Ignorant as Indians, 'pon my soul
Those warriors of the Casto Hole.

Go to their homes, give them a call
There reigns a solemn stillness all
But take their tracks, however cold
They'll lead you to the Casto Hole.

Lord, calm their fears, Thy Grace is good
Call those scared creatures from the wood
Call them like sheep into Thy fold
Those creatures of the Casto Hole.

Poor old Joel, he died of late
And took his flight to the Pearly Gate
Saint Peter knew the poor old soul
And kicked him back to the Casto Hole.

Down from the Pearly Gates he flies
A howling demon from the skies
A ghastly ghost — black, grim and cold,
Came sliding back to the Casto Hole.

On terra firma safe again
Young yelping devils in his train
To the old rogues march they beat a roll
And escorted him back to the Casto Hole.

Old Wizard Nicholas was on hand
In the Witches Department holds command
He spreads his signs from Pole to Pole
To 'luminate the Casto Hole.

Witches, Wizards and Goblins grim Assembled there and were sworn in Presiding, sat the ghost of Joel
At the meeting of the Casto Hole.

And traitors ghosts, they too were there
Old Hull and Arnold took a share
And rogues were there in numbers bold
All refugees in the Casto Hole.

And Woolly-heads they come along
With chalky eyes and odor strong
In that deep den high place they hold
All abolition in the Casto Hole. Submitted by

THE LIVERPOOL GENERAL STORE: A NOSTALGIC MEMORY

The Liverpool General Store, for many years, was nestled quietly in the sleepy hamlet of Liverpool, West Virginia, on the border of Jackson and Roane Counties, at the crossroads of secondary 13 and Hartley Run Road. Secondary 13 was a side road of West Virginia State Route 21, connecting the towns of Sandyville, West Virginia, and Reedy, West Virginia. Hartley Run Road crossed over the hill to join West Virginia State Route 33 at Frozen Camp, West Virginia. Many side roads and hollows branched off from the two roads where people, who served by the store, lived in a seven square mile radius. The shortest distance to Ripley, West Virginia, where most of the supplies for the store were obtained, was 16 miles. In the winter months, secondary 13 between Sandyville and Liverpool became impassable to traffic. Fortunately, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad passed within 100 feet of the store and supplies could be freighted in. Liverpool, West Virginia was in the early days a boom town, due to the discovery of oil in the surrounding hills and valleys.

The store building was erected in the late 1800s. It was one of the largest buildings in the village of modest homes. The design was rectangular, two stories high, a side room on the right, a small office to the rear, and a wide front porch across the entrance to the building. The most prominent fixtures on the porch was the long, wooden loafer's bench. It had been carved by the pocket knives of many youthful people over the years, leaving their initials for posterity. Tin type signs posted by hucksters on the back of the bench as well as the store front read thus, "I'd Walk a Mile for a Camel," "Chew Mail Pouch Tobacco," "Square Snuff—a square deal," and "Try Willard's Message of Relief". To the left of the porch was the gasoline pump. Inside the two large four paned windows glaringly reposed carelessly stacked boxes of soap powder, oil for car engines, Putnam and Rit Dyes, and various other sundry items. A large pile of black, shiny coal was dumped in a bin beside the store, to be used as fuel for the stove in winter. The room to the right had a separate front door, but it was accessible from the inside of the store. The entrance doors to the store were double and directly in the center front of the building. The boards of the porch floor and the inside of the store were of the same wide, thick oak wood, oiled to keep down the dust that spread in from the mud road.

The interior of the store was arranged in a U shape. At first glance, the shopper could see the seasonal goods that might be stacked or sitting along the center aisle. Quite possibly there would be red apples in fall. A wood keg of salt fish, oranges or tangerines in winter, and bananas were a special treat. The large, black, pot-bellied stove presided, in an imposing manner, in the center of the room. An assortment of nail kegs, benches, and repaired chairs, usually filled with loafers, were arranged around the stove. Near the rear of the store were a battered meat case, a pop case, and a refrigerator. Directly behind them was the office where the telephones were. The large center aisle was lined on either side with three-foot-high counters, constructed of heavy wood and painted with many coats of paint, which had accumulated over the years. The counter tops were covered with linoleum scraps. Center openings in the counters allowed the storekeeper to step from counter to counter as he served the customer.

There was a wide range of products to be purchased at this store. Perhaps the most wonderful to me, as a child entering the store, was directly to my right. It was a huge assortment of candies, enclosed in huge glass show case. All manner of sweet concoctions seemed to be available there! There were suckers, jawbreakers, chewing gums, five cent candy bars, chocolate drops, hard candy, stick's of peppermint and, oh, so many more. Never again in my life would there be such an enticing display of candy! Many times my mother allowed me to take three eggs to exchange for some of these sweets. The next display was another of my favorites — the cookies and crackers. A ten pound box of oyster crackers was always pre-opened here, to be sold by the scoop full along with a slice of cheese or bologna. On the end of this first section of counter top was mounted a heavy metal holder for the wide roll of white wrapping paper. Just across the center opening was the section reserved for the placing, checking, and bagging of purchases. The customer did not move around the store to collect the items he wanted. This was the job of the storekeeper. A large, ornate, metal string holder swayed from the ceiling above this section of counter, dispensing the necessary string to tie packages which were wrapped in the white paper. To the right of the storekeeper's post were the cash register, the scales, and the wood cubbyholes where the charge account pads were stored. The walls behind this counter were lined with shelves from ceiling to floor. Scattered on these shelves was a maximum selection of one brand of canned beans, peas, corn, hominy, various fruits, flour, meal, baking powder, soda, salt, sugar, cocoa, and other basic supplies. Cereal, spices, tobacco, and cigarettes were stocked in a wider variety. For many years the meats and cheeses kept in the meat case, at the end of this counter, were sliced by hand with a large knife and wrapped in some of the white paper and tied with the string. The customers were happy when the storekeeper obtained a meat slicer and they could then designate thick or thin slices. It was a delight to have ten cents to buy a slice of cheese or bologna, a scoop full of soda crackers and a bottle of orange soda to devour, as we visited with neighbors around the store.

The left side of the store was reserved for dry goods, shoes, medicine, and other special items. The contents of the glass show case on this counter were as enticing to the shopper of the day as the counters of the first floor of the Diamond Department Store is for today's shopper. Ladies could select underwear, hosiery, hankies, and dresses from a very limited selection. The gentlemen purchased pants, shoes, boots, underwear, and stockings. There were very few articles of clothing for children. The mothers chose from the yard goods cloth to sew into dresses, petticoats, and shirts for their children. The sewing center was well stocked with cotton materials, thread, buttons, and tapes.

A large metal case was kept full of Dr. Myers patent medicines, which were guaranteed to cure all ills. Little girls found ribbons for their hair and dolls to wish for at Christmas. There were pocket knives for the boys to ponder over.

The ware-room to the extreme left contained the small tools, such as hoes, rakes, and shovels needed by the farmers of the area. The fox hunter purchased kerosene for his lantern as well as a collar and chain for his hound. A colorful display of seeds announced the coming of Spring.

The storekeeper, being a versatile man, performed many other services in the community. He would cut hair, charging 25 cents per head. In his spare moments, he pumped gas into car tanks, changed oil in the engines, and even greased the car for some customers.

The Liverpool General Store was a community center. The older members of the area whiled away the summer evenings with games of croquet. The youth congregated there to play ball, tag, hide-and-seek, or ante-over the roof. Winter afforded other methods of entertainment. The natives gathered around the pot-bellied stove, in which a warm fire was always burning. The men were complacent as they played checkers and dominoes. Others would tell spine-tingling tales of ghosts and strange happenings around the country side.

One cold winter night, one of the local exaggerators was indulging in his favorite pastime of telling frightening tales. A number of the young men, who were practical-jokers, devised a plan to get even with him. They quickly stuffed a pair of long white underwear with papers. They hurried to a spot along the road he would be traveling to go home. Bearing the ghastly image, they climbed high into an overhanging oak tree. They attached a long wire to the neck band of the underwear and waited, impatiently. When they heard the approaching footsteps of their victim, just at the right moment, they lowered the apparition into his path. He ran screaming all the way to the nearest home, and pounded frantically on the door. It was several nights before he ventured back out to the store.

Joke playing was an everyday occurrence. I had developed the habit of helping myself to the cookies and soda crackers. One day as I reached my hand into the partly open box for a free cookie, I got quite a surprise! Snap! went the mousetrap as it closed on my fingers! The audience enjoyed this caper immensely!

One of the first radios in the area was purchased by the owner of the store. On the nights Amos and Andy, Lum and Abner, Championship prize-fights, and election returns were broadcast, there would be standing room only at the store. The first Bell telephone in the community was installed in the store office. There was, however, a citizen phone co-owned by the people of the area. They used these phones to call in to the store and the storekeeper would make their long distance calls for them, in cases of emergency.

Some very diverse people and customers frequented the emporium. One eccentric, hermit-type man I remember well was Philip Anderson. His most distinctive feature was a long, white beard. His long white hair was down over his shoulders.

Some people said he had never had a hair cut or shave. He lived alone up one of the hollows. It was evident he never bathed himself or washed his clothes. He purchased his long bib overalls from the store. When the pair he was wearing became worn, he simply bought another pair to wear over the top of them. No one knew for sure how many pairs he had on.

Another local man I think of often, came to the store carrying a heavy, long stick. He was a very vocal person, telling me and the other children tales of mad dogs and snakes he fought off with the stick, along the way.

Two of my very favorite people made periodic trips to the store. Arthur Carter was a short, fat, Santa Claus type man. To walk the shortest distance, he traveled a path through the meadow, beside my childhood home. I knew the day Arthur would be coming by. I watched for him, diligently. He always had a gift for me, candy, a few pennies, or a handkerchief his sister had made. My Uncle Bert Sheppard was the other one. He lived about two miles back in the country. He came to the store in a horsedrawn buggy. I knew when he was coming because my Aunt Clara would call on the citizen phone and alert me. I watched the road, until I saw the dapple grey team come around the bend. I would rush out to meet him, climb up beside him, and ride part of the way to the store. Then as he continued on his way, I hurried back to my home and persuaded my mother to allow me to go home with him for a visit.

Years passed and I grew older, but I still found favorite people at the store. My boy-friend, later to become my husband, worked as a clerk there. I made many unnecessary shopping trips while he was employed at the store.

The Liverpool General Store and the supermarket of today are unlike in many ways. The general store, of a by gone day had a warm friendly atmosphere; the supermarket of today has an impersonal air about it. When a customer was short of cash, he was allowed to charge food at the general store, whereas the customer must pay at the time of purchase at the supermarket. The general store was simply constructed, but supermarkets are complex in design. There was no choice of brands at the general store, in contrast to the wide variety of popular and name brands which may be selected in the supermarket. The owner of the general store was a well known member of the community, however few of us know the owner of the supermarket where we shop today.

With the passing years and the appearance of more supermarkets, there was a slow decline in the sales made at the Liverpool General Store. Roads were paved and the day of the automobile and the ability to travel to town to shop had its effect. Drastic changes were made in life styles. The patrons of the Liverpool General Store began to demand a larger variety in products. The store was unable to compete with the large chain stores which bought in volume and sold products cheaper.

Radios, and finally television sets, were purchased by the people. They no longer found their diversion at the store. The social life of the community was no longer centered around the store. The business steadily became less profitable. A few years ago, the Liverpool General Store closed its doors for the last time. The building was taken down. Parts of it were sold; some lumber was used as fuel for fireplaces in homes, and the remainder was built into a garage on the property. But the tall, metal pole that for so long supported the only lighted sign in town, still stands as a monument to the Liverpool General Store, a nostalgic memory. Submitted by Mary K. Hill

FAMILY HISTORIES

ABELS

John William Abels and Alice Anderson Abels, my grandparents, are buried in Wilding Cemetery, Jackson County, West Virginia, not far from the site of their homestead. John W. was the fourth generation of his family to live in Jackson County. His earliest known ancestor was Martin Able, who moved to Jackson County with his wife and children from the Morgantown area in the early 1800s.

John Wm. and Alice (Anderson) Abels

Alice was born in Meigs County, Ohio, one of three children born to Jeremiah and Parsidia Bishop Anderson. Jeremiah's earliest known ancestor was Edward Anderson, who, with his wife Agnes, appeared first in this area in Wills Creek, Fort Cumberland, Maryland. Following their deaths, their children moved down to Wood, Jackson and Meigs Counties. Parsidia Bishop's earliest known ancestor was George Bishop, born in Maryland and married to Ann Boothe about 1776 in Montgomery County, Virginia.

John and Alice were married May 22, 1874 in Jackson County. With an inheritance from her father, they bought 100 acres at the head of Straight Fork near Wilding, "right in the woods," according to the recollections of their eldest child, Nannie. As the years went by, additional acreage on the surrounding ridges was added. Clearing the land to build a home was a real challenge, as the land was well timbered. John leased plots of eight or ten acres to get help with the clearing. Bark was peeled off the oaks and sold for tan bark in Ravenswood, and barrel staves and hoop poles were made and sold. Some of the wood was split for clapboards and shingles, and the logs were used for their three-room house and other buildings.

The land was so rich and insect-free that all crops grew well. Tobacco was the best cash crop then, but John grew only vegetables, grains and fruits. Potatoes, corn, wheat, buckwheat, oats and hops were important crops, and cherry, peach and plum trees grew in abundance on the farm. John owned the first threshing machine in the community and did all the threshing of wheat, oats and barley within a large area near his home.

A cave built into the nearby hillside served as a convenient cold storage. Vegetables and fruits were dried, pickled, or made into fruit butters. Potatoes, apples, turnips and beets were buried. Cattle and hogs provided meat for the family, as well as rabbits, squirrels, raccoon, ground hogs and opossum.

Every family had a large selection of home remedies. Catnip, pennyroyal, peppermint, tansy, hops and various roots were gathered, dried, and served as the basis for healing teas and poultices. Castor oil and turpentine were staples in the medicine cabinet.

All clothing, except shoes, was made at home. Cloth was made "starting from the sheep's back," and used for clothes, blankets, jeans and hats. Heavy socks and gloves were knit.

John and Alice had eleven children, one of whom, Molly, died after only a few months. As the children grew to adulthood, three of them remained in Jackson County and the other seven located in Parkersburg and Marietta, Ohio. The family remained close through the years, bound together by fond memories of the Wilding homestead. Submitted by Nina Abels Pitthan

ARTHUR AND LUCY (BOWER) ADAMS

Arthur (1913-1982) was born near Chiselfinger Ridge, Wetzel County, West Virginia, son of Marion and Isabelle (Lemsters) Adams. He first came to Jackson County about 1940 and worked for Samuel and Victoria Blair near the Sheppard Chapel Church. He worked on their turkey farm.

Lucy (1918-1982) was born in the Providence Community, daughter of Stansberry (1873-1948) and Dollie (1876-1967) Bower. She was first married to David Bower (1898-1966). To this marriage was born a daughter, Beatrice Kathleen. They divorced when Beatrice was approximately three years old. Lucy and Arthur were married January 17, 1944 in Parkersburg, Wood County, West Virginia by the Reverend Harley E. Bailey.

At the time of their marriage Arthur was serving in the United States Army and was shipped overseas to the European Theater of Operations a few days after their marriage. He served his country from 1941 through 1945 receiving an honorable discharge for his services. He was very proud to have fought for his country.

When Arthur was discharged from the United States Army, he returned to Parkersburg and his old job at the former Rig and Reel, now Walker/Parkersburg. At that time, Lucy was employed at the American Viscose Company, a division of FMC Corporation. She quit shortly after Arthur returned from the Army.

About 1947, they purchased a little farm on Missouri Creek, off Lost Pavement Road, Wood County, West Virginia. They lived there until May 1949. They then purchased the farm on Jaraires Run near the old Providence Church which had belonged to Lucy's parents. Arthur continued to work at the Rig and Reel and to be a farmer. It was hard work to do both jobs but he managed.

Beatrice, their daughter, attended Jackson County Schools, graduating from Gilmore High School with the class of 1956. She graduated on her 18th birthday.

Arthur O. and Lucy K. (Bower) Adams

Arthur and Lucy continued to live on Jaraires Run until 1971. They sold the farm and moved to a little house on Dutch Ridge Extension off State Route 47. They sold the farm for they felt they were too old to take care of it. Arthur retired from Walker/Parkersburg after almost 39 years of service. Lucy died February 3, 1982 and Arthur followed very quickly on February 24, 1982. (I think their love for each other was so great, that they just didn't want to live without each other.)

They had both donated their bodies to science, through the Human Gift Registry, Morgantown, West Virginia for the purpose of furthering medical science. Their ashes were returned to their daughter, Beatrice, and buried in the Independence Cemetery on Copper Fork, Jackson County, West Virginia. Submitted by Beatrice Bower Jones, daughter

W. M. ADAMS

William Meade Adams was born in Fauquier County, Virginia 9/22/1829, the son of Peter Adams and Harriett Byron Smith Adams. His ancestry has been traced to John Adams I of Worcestershire England, who, according to a Marshall history, attended Oxford University along with his first cousin, Lord Littleton. Apparently, no documentation has been found to prove that this is so. John Adams I came to Charles County, Maryland about 1700 and became a wealthy planter. He was married to Elizabeth Naylor.

John Adams II, born 2/19/1718 married Sarah Stacy Gibbons 1/3/1743. She was born 12/19/1725. He gave his oldest son, John III large possessions in Maryland and removed with his wife and younger children to Fauquier County, Virginia about 1757. He purchased 4,000 acres of land in the Deleplane area. His house, built of native stone was called "Pleasant Vale." Here he lived the life of the gentry class. Their children were:

1. Elizabeth Adams: m. Nimrod Ashby.
2. Peter Adams: b. 1786 — m. Harriett Byron Smith, his first cousin, the daughter of Elizabeth Adams and Nimrod Ashby.

William Meade Adams

William Meade was well educated. His education was the result of tutors and schooling at an Episcopalian School in not so far away Alexandria. He came to Jackson County on a lumber survey for a Clarksburg, Harrison County firm and met Martha Winter, b. (11/16/1835-3/26/1883), the daughter of James L. Winter and Sarah Bennett Winter. The Winter family had, themselves, come from Harrison County in 1854 and had taken a large parcel of land on Grass Lick. William Meade and Martha were married 10/16/1856 and established a home in Kenna. William worked in an administrative capacity for the Haskell Woolen Company in Ripley and sold insurance. Their children were:

(3) Sarah B. Adams Maddox and Florney Maddox lived at Kenna where their three children were born: Renna, Bess and Leon. They later moved to Ravenswood.

a. Renna (1886-1973) started her career as a school teacher in what is now Elcanor, W.V. but later became interested in millinery. She found work with John Franklin, a widower, who owned a store in Point Pleasant. She designed and sold hats and finally married him and became a business partner. Mr. Franklin died in 1936. Renna sold the larger store and organized a small store exclusively for women called Mrs. Franklin's Store.

b. Bess (1888-1955) who never married, lived with her mother in Ravenswood and worked as a bookkeeper for the Harpold Hardware Store for many years. After the death of her brother-in-law, John Franklin, she and her mother, Sarah, moved to Point Pleasant. Bess worked in the store with Renna until she developed cancer and died.

c. Leon (1890-1919) served in World War I and died shortly after the war was over from food poisoning. He had married and had one child who resided in Florida, the last we knew. (Unfortunately, no details are known.)

Sarah, Renna and Bess were Baptists and members of Ravenswood and Point Pleasant DAR Chapters. (Sarah, Bess and Leon are buried in the Ravenswood Cemetery; Renna in Lonoak Cemetery, Point Pleasant.)

(4) Peter M. Adams and Cora had no children. They lived at Red House and Poca in Putnam County where Peter worked as a miller, depot mail carrier and bus driver. He also worked for a time in Akron, Ohio. In late years they moved to Ripley where they died. Mabel Winter, a cousin to Peter and a niece to Cora made her home with them and cared for both in their declining years.

(5) James A. Adams and Minnie were married in Putnam County where he worked in the mill with his brother-in-law, John Z. Cadle. James and Minnie moved to a farm near Nellie, Coshocton County, Ohio, where they lived on the picturesque Walhonding River for the rest of their lives. (They had no children.)

(7) John and Cora Adams had two children, Mae (affectionately called Betty Mae) and Lester.

a. Betty Mae (1898-1987) became a school teacher. While working in one of the mountain counties, she met David Sheward, a bookkeeper for a lumbering firm. They were married and eventually moved to Galena, Ohio where Dave worked for a brickmaking firm — later became president, we think. They had three sons:

- (1) John
- (2) William Earl
- (3) Bobby

They are married and have families but we were unable to obtain information we needed to complete the Sheward line.

Lester Adams (1900-1977) married Irene Hite who resides in Huntington, W.V. Lester worked as a laborer most of his life. He was soft spoken; a gentle person who was easy to know and like.

John Adams' second wife was Mary Edwards (11/1/1879-4/15/1974). They lived at Staats Mill where John was a farmer. They had three children:

- a. Marie
- b. Margaret
- c. William Glen

a. Marie Adams (1915), spent her working years in Charleston where she first worked with the O. J. Morrison Store; worked in a clerical capacity for Sears where she worked for thirty years. After her retirement from Sears she worked another ten years with Montgomery Ward. Marie is a world traveler, a member of the Business Womens Club, DAR and the United Methodist Church.

b. Margaret Adams (1917). After completing business school started her career with an overseas assignment in Rome, Italy where she worked with FAO of the United Nations. Following her tenure with FAO, she returned to Washington, D.C. and worked with the State Department for thirty years. She remains to live in Washington where she is a patron of the arts.

c. William Glen Adams (1920-1988) graduated from Ripley High School; was in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He was married to Ruby Woodfell and lived for many years in Cincinnati where he worked as a painter for Shillitos Department Store. Upon retirement he returned to Jackson County and lived his remaining years at Fairplain.

(8) Thomas Benton Adams (1877-1953). His early years were spent as a school teacher but eventually he joined the Buffalo Insurance Company in Scottsbluff, Nebraska. He was first married to Faye Adamson, a high school teacher and native of Marietta, Ohio. They had one child who was stillborn. After Faye's death and his retirement he returned to West Virginia; married Corda (Tincher) Fisher, a "kid sweetheart." They lived happily in New Haven, Mason County, until her death and where he died a few years later. Submitted by Marie Adams and Edith Kelley near Henderson, WV. His parents were Benjamin Adams and Mary Ellen Sheppard.

Raymond was a barber in Pt. Pleasant for all his adult life. I believe he began barbering at age 14 on a riverboat tied up at the local dock. At age 28, Raymond was still single but had noticed a certain young (age 18) lady named Avis Plants. A friend of Raymond's needed a car for a date with Avis, so he asked Raymond to bring his car and they'd find him a date. His reply was, "We'll use my car, but I'll have Avis for my date." So, Raymond and Avis, my parents, met and the four attended the "belling" of Avis' brother, Russell Plants and his wife Grace. Raymond and Avis Carol Plants were married on November 15, 1933 in the home of his mother Mary Ellen White. This house was located behind the Lowe Hotel in Pt. Pleasant, WV. Their children were Jimmie H. (1935-1981),

Raymond and Peggy Adams

Tharon Elaine (1938-1945), Thomas (1943) and Barbara Ann (1945).

Raymond died of a heart attack on February 21, 1959. He had worked in a number of barber shops in Pt. Pleasant including the Lowe Hotel, Spencer Hotel and for many years, before his heart attack in October 1956, in the Greyhound Bus Station. In early 1959 after recovering from his first heart attack, Raymond put together a one-chair shop in his home at 1413 Ohio Street. His perfect haircuts would take well over thirty minutes. Such perfection caused many of his customers to follow him to his home and to a very plain barbershop. During his many years of barbering he shared shops with many other barbers. Among them were Earl Gibbs, Lewis Ball and Buck Fruth, to name a few. While at the Greyhound Station, Dad built a shoeshine stand for me to use. So, as a lad of six and seven, I shined shoes in my father's barber shop.

Raymond and Avis lived in several rented houses in Pt. Pleasant before moving to what was then Kaylong, now called West Columbia. It was in Pt. Pleasant that Jimmie and Tharon Elaine were born. Barbara and Tommy were born in the recently purchased (in 1941) home called "Adams Acre" in West Columbia. The house, a seven-room farm house and one acre of land cost $500.00. They purchased it from Samuel Eads. It was while my family lived there that my sister, Tharon Elaine, age seven years, was struck and killed by a truck driver who admitted to drinking some beers that day. Mother was in the front yard and heard it happen. The joy and love that Tharon was to our family was gone, but God gave Mother a new gift of life when 78 days later Barbara Ann was born. While Raymond and Avis tried to recover from their loss, their pain was somewhat eased by shedding love and nurture on their new "gil," as I only 23 months old called her. So, while trying to recover from their loss of Tharon and looking forward, they decided to move away from sad

The new home was in an area known as Lock 11 on the Kanawha River just above Henderson, WV. The house doubled as a small food store for this little community as well as our home. We were now living in the area of my father's birth. The years at Lock 11 were some of my earliest memories. While living there, at age three, I fell from a dog house and broke my arm. My brother Jimmie was the "unlucky" one to be the right size and age to be lowered into the cistern to clean it out periodically. The cistern was a common type water supply in 1946, but for a young lad it probably was scary to be down in that deep, dark hole. We had a few chickens that would from time to time find their way to the dinner table. Dinner was cooked on a wood burning stove. In killing the chickens, Mama would chop off the head and hang the chicken upside down on the clothesline so that they could "bleed" properly.

Mama was very active in church at Vaught Memorial Methodist at Lock 11. She always took the wee ones. Dad would sometimes attend though not as regularly as Mama and the children. When I was in the first grade at Henderson Grade School, I got into my first and last fight. My teacher, Genevieve Butler, spanked me in front of the class. It was my last spanking — in school, at least. I had learned my lesson well.

Because the store was not a great financial success, the occasional flood waters that would isolate us and the drive that Dad made to the Greyhound Barber Shop each day, my parents decided to move back to Pt. Pleasant. I went to Central School in 1950. In early 1951 we made the move to Pt. Pleasant to 1413 Ohio Street. We purchased the house from Bessie and Jerry Atkinson. It was a good move. Dad was close to his work, Mama had more time to care for her family, and Jimmy was closer to his job at the Pt. Pleasant Register office. While living at Lock 11 during floodwater time, he walked the mountains to get to his work. Now that we lived in Pt. Pleasant, I could, by age eight, have a newspaper route and so became a Register carrier.

After Dad's first heart attack in October 1956, Mama went back to school to the Portsmouth Business College and this enabled her to secure a job at the Kaiser Aluminum Plant near Ravenswood. After commuting for a year, my family began planning for another move. This time to Jackson County, to be close to Mama's work. It was at this time that my father suffered the second heart attack and was in Holzer Hospital for kidney stones where he passed away on February 21, 1959. As a result, I had to become the man of the house. Jimmie was a student at West Virginia University in Morgantown and I was but 15 and a sophomore at Ravenswood High School. Yet, my youth had long before prepared me for the responsibility of work and meeting one's obligations. As previously noted, I was shining shoes at age six, at age seven, I walked the streets of Pt. Pleasant and the corridors of the Mason County Jail selling the Pt. Pleasant Register. By age eight, I was allowed by the newspaper, to have my own route. I had a permanent route of the Register and other papers until I was a freshman at Pt. Pleasant High School. I purchased, from my own earnings, a new trombone and played in school bands until I graduated from Ravenswood High School in 1961.

Mama, Barbara Ann and I settled into our new home in December 1959. I spent the summer of 1959 working for the contractor who built the house at Millwood, WV. The home is now called "Handley's Chateau" and the home of my mother and stepfather, Raymond L. Handley. Mama worked hard at the Kaiser Plant to keep us well fed and clothed. Seeing the need to have help, I took a part-time job at Cope's Super Market in Ravenswood. My grades were not great, but I was able to give my paychecks to my mother to help on family expenses. We managed and Mother made sure there was always lots of love in our home.

After graduation in 1961 at age 17, I joined the Army. Letters of love and boxes of cookies helped to keep away the "lonelies." I had electronics training at Fort Huachuca, Arizona. In early 1962, I went to Korea for a year. Shortly after I returned from Korea, I married Sharon Kaye Knox of Ravenswood. While I was in Korea, Mama met and fell in love with Raymond L. Handley. They had set the date for June 2 and since Sharon and I hadn't set a date, we all thought, "why not." So, on June 2, 1963, at the Ravenswood First United Methodist Church we had a double wedding ceremony, mother and son. Our attendants being so many, the line, i.e., for two weddings, went from one side of the church to the other as we stood for pictures by Heilman of Ripley.

In 1964, I reenlisted in the Army and became a dental assistant and later an oral hygienist. November 1966 found me bound for Vietnam. I was assigned to an evacuation hospital and therefore, quite fortunately, inasmuch as I didn't want to have to make a decision to kill. While in Nam, I was able to travel twice to Japan. My military travels helped me greatly to love and appreciate my country. In 1970, I left the military. I wanted more freedom of choice, even the freedom to fail.

On May 15, 1975, I finished a four-year apprenticeship and became a journeyman electrician. I belong to IBEW Local #640 in Phoenix, Arizona.

My marriage to Sharon ended in divorce in April 1977. We have four children, Amelia Ann (1964), Joseph Mark (1967), Susan Elaine (1969) and Christian Theodore (1974). Amelia Ann is scheduled to deliver my first grandchild on November 1, 1986.

On May 27, 1978, I married Kay Vera Kappas of Mesa, Arizona. We had one child, Alicia Marie, born October 1979. Kay and I divorced in October 1981.

I have a great interest in family history and, five years ago, began to do video recordings. With Mother's help, we now have many, many hours of family history, both action and pictorial on videotapes. The work involved in being able to share with the family and our descendants and friends is indeed a labor of love. The great and good heritage left to us by the Plants, McKinnies, and Adams makes us want to leave footprints in the sand for others to follow. Our videotapes will serve that useful purpose. JEFFERSON DAVIS ANDERSON

Andrew Anderson was a brother of Peter Anderson, who came to Belleville in 1785. After the Indian War closed, Andrew drifted into the wild forests beyond the Ohio River where he was a hunter and trapper. He made his home in a giant, hollowed out sycamore tree near the big bend across from Ravenswood. Who or when he married was not preserved, nor was the exact site of his home known. He was a victim of cholera. Andrew had a large family and several of his children lived on Sandy, above Ravenswood. (The preceding excerpt was taken from Wood County Pioneers, by John House.)

Andrew's son, Joseph Anderson, married Nancy Stanley, Feb. 25, 1823. Their son, Joseph Anderson Jr., born in 1829, married Hepzibah Rowley. On May 19, 1880, they moved to Cabin Run, in the Liverpool area, where Joseph and his sons, William, Robert Lee, Joseph, Jefferson and Phillip had earlier blazed a trail one mile from the Ravenswood-Spencer Road. Here, they also had cut logs to build a farm and house. The kitchen was attached to the main house by a breezeway. The kitchen and the barn are still standing. The farm is currently owned by Flavy Kelly's son. Joseph and Hepzibah also had three daughters, Hepzibah (died Mar. 24, 1885), Susana and Theodocia. Joseph and Hepzibah lived out their lives on this farm. Joseph died Mar. 8, 1907.

JOE ANGUS

My ancestors have lived in Jackson County since the early 1800s. I have traced my roots back several generations and have found the graves of forty-two direct ancestors buried in Jackson County. All eight of my great-grandparents, all sixteen great-great-grandparents, eleven third great-grandparents, three fourth great-grandparents, and one fifth great-grandparent, John DeWitt, first settler of Murraysville.

Many of my ancestors were war veterans. My father, Billy Angus, was in World War II. Three great-great-grandparents, William Angus, John Dailey and John Franklin, fought for the North in the Civil War while one, Wade Hampton Benson, fought for the South. Wade Hampton Benson was shot and captured at the Battle of Droop Mountain and served two years in a Union prison camp. In the Revolutionary War, eight of my ancestors, John Culbertson, Jacob Jones, Jacob Hendershot, and his son John Hendershot, John Waggoner, Benjamin Rector, Abel Sherman and John DeWitt fought for America, while one, James Trimble, was a British officer. I had one ancestor, William Bills, who fought in the War of 1812.

I've traced the Thorns (see Thorns) all the way back to Hugh Capet, King of France. My great-great-grandmother was Caroline Thorn who married John Waggoner. John's grandfather, John Waggoner, fought in the Revolutionary War and had a difficult time getting his war pension because all his proof of being a veteran had been burned. On May 7, 1792 in Lewis County, Virginia, a band of Indians killed John's wife and four children. Three children were captured, but later escaped back to their father (see Waggoner). Ten generations back will take you to Plymouth, Massachusetts and Isaac Allerton, who came to America on the Mayflower (see Rector). My fifth great-grandfather, Abel Sherman, was killed by Indians near Marietta, Ohio in 1794. His tombstone is now in the Campus Martius Museum in Marietta.

My father, Billy Angus, is the son of Ernest Angus and Minnie Waggoner Angus. My mother is Maxine DeWitt, daughter of Otmer Salser and Mayme Rector Salser. I have three brothers, Doug, Norse and Terry and one sister, Rita Hill, wife of Doug Hill. I am married to Rina Angus, daughter of David and Phyllis Casto. Submitted by Joe Angus

JOSEPH EDWARD ANGUS

Joseph Edward Angus was born August 1870 in Wood County. Shortly after his birth his father, William Angus, moved to a farm at Drift Run. Here he grew up and worked with his father on the farm.

In 1892, Joseph Angus married Cora Winebrenner, daughter of James and Nancy Maddox Winebrenner. They had a son, William. Cora died sometime in 1893. September 1896, Joseph Angus married Alice Daily, daughter of John Daily. They were the parents of Ernest (wife Minnie Waggoner); Homer (wife Renna Forshey); Herbert (wife Ruby Waggoner); Anna (husband William McCauley); Ethel ((1) Talmage Weekly, (2) William Williams); Lucille (husband Holey Maddox); and Clarestine (husband Delbert Wilkinson). He reared his family on a farm at Drift Run, which he purchased from a brother-in-law, Enoch Robinson.

Joseph Angus, known as Ed, was a life-long farmer. He loved the farm and worked hard without modern equipment, and used horses to pull the plow and work the fields. As young boys, Edward and Billy Angus spent many summers helping Grandpa in the corn fields. Grandpa was a great influence on all of the grandchildren and they enjoyed being with him. He enjoyed his earthly home but looked forward to his home in Heaven. Joseph Angus was a devoted husband, father, and Christian. As a member of the Drift Run Methodist Church, he attended regularly. Even in his last years, past ninety years of age, he would often walk a mile to church. He was always ready to help a neighbor in need, and shared the produce from his garden with them.

Joseph Angus led an active life, although limited in later years, until the time of his death on February 3, 1970 at the age of 99½. Submitted by Ruth Pepper

Willie and Mabel were married September 20, 1916 by the late Rev. I. N. Smith of Copper Fork Road, as they sat in the horse drawn buggy, which was the means of transportation in those days.

They went to live on the Howard Oaks farm at Little Hocking, Ohio, where their first child, Elmer Leroy, was born 2-15-1919. JOHN APLIN

John Aplin, the first child of Wm. Henry (Billy) and Mary Frances (Lett) Aplin (See Family Histories — Wm. Henry Aplin), was born Feb. 24, 1848, in Ripley, Va. (WV). John's father, Billy Aplin, worked as a shoemaker at the time of John's birth.

When John Aplin was three years old the family moved to their farm located between Gay and Red Knob, Va. (WV). John and his family lived there until early 1863, when John's father, Billy Aplin, moved them to Ohio. The Civil War was in progress.

On June 24, 1863, John Aplin enlisted in the U.S. Union Army at Athens, Ohio. John was a member of Capt. L.H. Stedman's Co. A, 129th Regiment of Ohio V.T., commanded by Col. H.D. John. Two letters John Aplin wrote to his parents, during the Civil War, have been preserved in the Ellen (Rogers) Morris family. Ellen Morris is a descendant of John Aplin's sister, Alice (Aplin) Rogers Westfall. (See Family Histories — Alice (Aplin) Rogers Westfall)

The two letters John Aplin wrote home are interesting to read. The letter dated July 28, 1863 was sent to Wm. Henry Aplin, Nelsonville, Athens Co., Ohio. John wrote about Morgan's Raid, Buffington Island and Nelsonville, Ohio being burned. John also asked his father for two or three dollars to send letters home. The second letter is dated Sept. 21, 1863. John was in camp on the Tennessee side of the Cumberland Gap. John wrote about Cumberland Gap being surrendered, and of the Confederate surrendering, the prisoners taken, and of having guard duty all that day. John asked his mother, Mary Frances (Lett) Aplin, to have a can of peaches ready for him when he came home. John concluded this letter, "I have not time to write any more at present time, but remainin your son until death." On Jan. 27, 1864, John Aplin, 28 days short of his 16th birthday, died in a hospital at Cumberland Gap, Tenn. Exact cause of death unknown, grave site unknown.

On Oct. 23, 1865, a final pay certificate was prepared for $13.66 payable to Wm. Henry Aplin, father of deceased, with deductions for clothing. Pay was from Oct. 31, 1863 until time of death. Wm. Henry Aplin finally received the last pay for his son, Pvt. John Aplin, while living at New Geneva, W.V., in Dec. of 1866. Submitted by Wilma Jean (Rogers) Kelch

WILLIAM HENRY APLIN

W. Henry Aplin was known as Billy Aplin until his death, four days short of his 94th birthday. Billy Aplin was well known in the Aplin Ridge, Gay and Red Knob areas of Jackson Co., Va. (WV). Aplin Ridge, Aplin Church and the Aplin School (now Haynes Trading Post) were all named for Billy Aplin.

William Henry Aplin

Billy Aplin was born Aug. 2, 1813 in Providence, R.I., to Benjamin and Lydia (Gray) Aplin. Billy was the eleventh child out of the fifteen born to Benjamin and Lydia Aplin.

Benjamin Aplin, Billy Aplin's father, was born Nov. 26, 1769, in Providence, R.I., to John and Elizabeth (Arnold) Aplin. Benjamin Aplin married Lydia Gray on Dec. 16, 1792 in Providence, R.I. Lydia (Gray) Aplin was born Aug. 14, 1777 in Providence, R.I., to Amasa and Sarah Lydia (Turpin) Gray. Benjamin Aplin died Dec. 23, 1843 in Norwich, Muskingum Co., Ohio. Lydia (Gray) Aplin died Sept. 19, 1845 in Norwich, Ohio. Benjamin and Lydia Aplin are buried in Norwich Presbyterian Cemetery in Norwich, Ohio.

Billy Aplin's grandmother, Elizabeth (Arnold) Aplin was the great-great-granddaughter of Wm. Arnold. Wm. Arnold was associated with Roger Williams in the founding of R.I. Wm. Arnold is also the great-great-grandfather of Benedict Arnold V, the traitor. The Arnold Memorial and a Genealogy of His Descendants, compiled by Elisha Stephen Arnold, 1935, is a good book concerning the Arnold family descendants.

Sarah Lydia (Turpin) Gray, Billy Aplin's maternal grandmother, married second Christopher Cooke, great-great-grandson of Francis Cooke, who came over on the Mayflower. There is no blood relationship between the Cookes and the Aplins. Christopher and Sarah Cooke did not have children.

Billy Aplin married Mary Frances Lett on Aug. 29, 1847 in Ripley, Va. (WV). Mary (Lett) Aplin was born March 14, 1833 in Putnam Co., Va. (WV) to Lemuel C. and Nancy Elizabeth (Landers) Lett.

According to family recollections Mary Aplin, being 14 years old when she married Billy Aplin, him being 34 years old, would play with her dolls under a tree, while her husband did the plowing.

When Mary Lett married Billy Aplin, her father, Lemuel C. Lett gave them three slaves, Samp, Jim and Judy, as a wedding present. Billy Aplin treated these slaves as family and eventually freed them. One slave, Jim, who had decided to stay with the Aplins, was a smart man. He taught school for the young slaves, and saved the money Billy Aplin paid him for working on the farm. At times Jim would go to town by himself. On one of those trips Jim did not return. Jim's body was found beaten and hung from a tree, on the Radar farm, Gay Rd., Ripley, WV. It was never known for sure why, or who, did the hanging.

Billy and Mary Aplin had nine children, three sons and six daughters. Five daughters lived to adulthood. John Aplin, the eldest child of Billy and Mary Aplin was born Feb. 24, 1848 in Ripley, Va. (WV). (See Family Histories under John Aplin).

Lydia Aplin was born June 13, 1851 in Ripley, Va. (WV). Lydia Aplin married first Venson Tibbles on Dec. 23, 1871 in Ripley, WV. Lydia and Venson Tibbles were divorced on Dec. 5, 1876 in Ripley, WV. Lydia Tibbles married second, Benjamin T. Hudson on Sept. 19, 1877 in Ripley, WV. Lydia and Benjamin Hudson were divorced in Spencer, Roane Co., WV. Lydia (Aplin) Hudson died July 1, 1928, in Spencer, WV. Lydia is buried at the Halbert Cemetery, Elk Fork Rd., Gay, WV. (See Family Histories under Lydia (Aplin) Hudson).

Emily Aplin was born Feb. 7, 1853 in Ripley, Va. (WV). On May 31, 1856, when Emily was with her father, Billy Aplin, at the family's grist mill, there was a fatal accident. Emily's clothing caught in the belt of the mill, killing her. This was a great tragedy for Billy and Mary Aplin.

Sarah Aplin was born Nov. 14, 1855 in Gay, Va. (WV). Sarah Aplin married Megary (Doc) Archer on June 29, 1877 in Ripley, WV. Sarah (Aplin) Archer died on Feb. 26, 1912 at her home in Gay, WV. Both Sarah and Doc Archer are buried at the Halbert Cemetery, Gay, WV. (See Family Histories under Sarah (Aplin) Archer.)

Alice Aplin was born April 26, 1858 in Gay, Va. (WV). Alice Aplin married first, Rev. James Alfred Rogers on Oct. 28, 1877 in Ripley, WV. Alice Rogers married second, Henderson (Sank) Westfall on Nov. 28, 1903 in Ripley, WV. Alice Westfall died on April 20, 1920. She is buried at the Halbert Cemetery, Gay, WV. (See Family Histories under Alice (Aplin) Westfall.)

Nigger Jim, one of William Henry Aplin's slaves

Everet Aplin was born April 6, 1862 in Gay, Va. (WV). Everet Aplin died on Sept. 18, 1864 in Athens, Athens Co., Ohio.

Esther Aplin was born Aug. 2, 1864 in Athens, Ohio. Esther Aplin married first, Thomas Waybright on March 7, 1884 in Ripley, WV. Esther Waybright married second, George Thomas on Oct. 11, 1895 in Ripley, WV. Esther Thomas died on July 9, 1947 in Gay, WV. She is buried at the Evans Cemetery, Gay, WV. (See Family Histories under Esther (Aplin) Thomas.)

Walter Aplin was born on Feb. 23, 1867 in Gay, WV. Walter Aplin died on Jan. 9, 1868 in Gay, WV.

Billy Aplin dearly loved his five daughters that lived to adulthood. For each daughter he had built a two-story white house, on the 390⁷/₁₀ acres, more or less, that he deeded to each one, for the affection he felt for them.

Billy Aplin was a very smart man. In his lifetime he worked as a shoemaker, attorney, surveyor, farmer and even an astronomer. Billy Aplin loved to read. He had bookcases full of books, which gave him great pleasure. Some of these books are now in the possession of his great-grandson, Glen E. Romine. Billy Aplin was a great landowner, owning several thousand acres of land in Jackson County and surrounding counties. Letters to Billy Aplin for advice, bids on his timberland, asking to rent some of his land and for loans of money, are now in the possession of his great-granddaughter, Ellen (Rogers) Morris.

Billy Aplin's wife, Mary Frances (Lett) Aplin, died July 7, 1882 in Gay, WV. Wm. Henry Aplin died July 29, 1907 at his daughter Alice (Aplin) Westfall's home, Gay, WV. ARCHER

The Civil War had been over for about ten years, the railroads were beginning to open up farm land to the west, and the third generation of Archers living in Noble Co., OH were getting restless for new lands and opportunities. Between 1850 and 1870 several left for Kansas, Illinois and Indiana, but a few came back disillusioned. For those who were not willing to take the risks of the western frontiers or who wanted to try their luck, before venturing west, Jackson Co., WV looked attractive because it was near kinsmen in Noble Co., OH and land was cheaper because it was still forested.

Between 1870 and 1880, 18 Archer families moved from Noble Co., OH to Jackson Co., WV. They were the third and fourth generation descendants of the sons of James Archer, an early settler in Noble Co., OH. James Archer (b. ca. 1747 Ireland?, d. ca. 1830 Monroe (now Noble) Co., OH), had been the Captain of a Greene Co., PA militia unit fighting Indians during the Revolutionary War. James was the son of Patrick Archer (ca. 1717-ca. 1793), an Irish tailor. By 1800, sons of Patrick Archer had scattered from the original settlement in Greene Co., PA; Michael moving to Wirt Co., WV; Simon's sons, to Indiana; Joseph, to Guernsey, Richland, Franklin, and Wood counties, OH; James to Monroe (now Noble) Co., OH by about 1812, by way of Ohio Co., WV, where he lived 1798-1812.

Additional information on pre-1870 family history and relationships can be found in The Genealogical History of the Archer Family by M.B. Archer, F.J. Heer, Columbus, 1919 and in The Descendants of Patrick Archer by George Archer published serially in The Archer Quarterly, P.O. Box 6233, McLean, VA 22106.

Space permits only a brief outline of family relationships of the Jackson Co. Archers and related families. Descendants of James' six sons, except for Simon, moved into Jackson Co.:

1. Of Joseph, James: Nathan and Henry
2. Of James, James: Jacob
3. Of Nathan, James: James and Stephen
4. Of James, Joseph, James: Elisha, Weeden, Peter
5. Of Simon, Michael, James: Abraham
6. Of Michael, Jacob, James: Aaron, James William, John Riley
7. Of Michael, Joseph, James: Asberry; Martin's widow Celia Archer (James, James, James); Jocephus; John McGarry; Joseph, William Leeper.

These families initially settled in Grant District. Some bought land in Wirt and Wood counties and moved there later. Most remained in Jackson Co. until their deaths, but a few moved to Washington or Guernsey Co., OH or went west to Franklin Co., KS. Those who did not migrate were mostly descendants of the Michael, Joseph, James line. By the 1950s there were very few Archers in the Jackson Co.

These Archer families were members of the Grose, Providence and Warden Methodist Episcopal churches near Lockhart and Medina, WV. The Archers preferred farming or teaching. Those teaching in Jackson Co. were: James William (Michael, Jacob, James); Simon (Stephen, Nathan, James); and Simon (Stephen, Stephen, Nathan, James). However, Weeden (James, Joseph, James) was the Grant Dist. Justice of the Peace.

Stephen Archer (Nathan, James) married on 27 Nov. 1844 in Monroe (now Noble) Co., OH, Nancy Grandon (daughter of Enoch Grandon and Nancy Enochs) shortly after the death of Stephen's father, Nathan [b. 15 Feb. 1800; d. 15 Jun. 1845]. Stephen enlisted in Co. D 174 OVI 17 Aug. 1864 in Lowell, Adams Twp., Washington Co., OH and applied for a pension in Jackson Co. 10 Aug. 1883. Stephen and Nancy had nine children: 1. Nathan [b. 19 Apr. or 21 Aug. 1845 or Sep. 1846 Monroe Co., OH; d. 5 Apr. 1913, md. (Mrs.?) Fannie Roberts on 21 Apr. 1885, Coahoma Co., MS]; 2. Mary E. [b. 4 Mar. 1849 OH; d. 7 Dec. 1879, md. 1866 Freeman C. Thompson, b. 25 Feb. 1846, Washington Co., PA, recipient of a Congressional Medal of Honor during the Civil War]; 3. Stephen [b. ca. 1858, Stock Twp., Noble Co., OH; d. winter 1883, md. in Jackson Co., 24 Dec. 1878, Helen Josephine Butcher, b. 31 Dec. 1855, Wood Co., OH; d. 2 Feb. 1939, Waynesburg, PA]; 4. William [b. 5 Dec. 1856, md. Melissa ca. 1890]; 5. Simon [b. 13 Jul. 1858, md. Elizabeth M., b. Kansas]; 6. Amanda [b. 19 Sep. 1860, md. Jacob T. Morehead 17 May 1883, Jackson Co., WV]; 7. Martha [b. 4 Mar. 1865]; 8. Charles [b. 3 Apr. 1867]; 9. Alcina [b. 4 Oct. 1870 or 17 June 1871, Stock Twp., Noble Co., OH].

Stephen accompanied William and Melissa (Sweeney) Grandon, his wife's brother and wife from Noble Co. to Jackson Co. Nathan and his sister, Mary E., had already made homes in Alabama and Noble Co., respectively. In Jackson Co., Nancy (Grandon) Archer, not her husband, bought 150 acres 13 Mar. 1873 on Copper Fork of the Sandy. After ten years, they were unable to make any payments on the outstanding $1200 after making a downpayment of $100. The seller, R.S. Brown, foreclosed on 1 Oct. 1883. They probably lived with William and Melissa Grandon or one of their children. About 1895, except for Stephen and Amanda who remained in Jackson Co., the rest of the family moved to Franklin Co., KS where Nancy Grandon Archer died 25 Nov. 1897. After Nancy's death, Stephen stayed in the National Soldiers Home, Leavenworth, Kansas. He remarried 12 Nov. 1903 in Rantoul, Franklin Co., a widow, Mary Ann (Mrs. Solomon W.) Newlen, b. ca. 1830. Stephen died 6 Jun. 1904 in Franklin Co., KS.

Stephen Archer (Stephen, Nathan, James)

Stephen married Helen Josephine Butcher. Helen was the daughter of Thomas Jefferson Butcher and Lodema Lee. Thomas' parents were founders of Wood Co., WV and trace back to John Butcher of Loudon Co., VA, a Revolutionary War soldier. According to family stories, Helen was living with her brother, John Wesley Butcher, and went to a dance where she met Stephen, as the Archers liked to dance. Stephen and Helen had three children. All of them married in Jackson Co.:

1. Margaret [b. 17 Jan. 1880, Meadowdale, d. 27 Jul. 1947 Columbiana Co., OH; md. John Currey 29 Oct. 1899]; 2. William Thomas [b. ca. 1882, d. 13 Dec. 1937, Waynesburg, PA, md. Adda Vannoy 15 Sep. 1910]; and 3. Simon David.

Simon Archer (Stephen, Stephen, Nathan, James)

Simon David, b. 24 Aug. 1884, Sandyville, d. 6 Jul. 1948, San Diego, CA, md. 1. Marguerite Germain Bourlier 5 Mar. 1921, Belfort, France, b. 18 Apr. 1904, Etupes, France. Divorced 31 Mar. 1925, no children, md. 2. Mary Bernice Smith 10 Oct. 1930, Santa Monica, CA, b. 12 Jan. 1910, Farmington, MO, d. 28 Jan. 1971, Ventura, CA, daughter of William Alexander Smith and Virginia

Lee Covington. Child: George Warren Archer b. 11 Jun. 1939, San Diego, CA.

Stephen died in the winter of 1883, and Helen remarried Larkin Grayson [b. ca. 1848, Boyd Co., KY] 19 Nov. 1887, Jackson Co. and had one son Earl Ross [b. 26 Aug. 1888, d. 4 Dec. 1938, Chillacothe, OH]. Larkin disappeared one day and was believed to have been killed by river boat gamblers and thrown into the Ohio River. Helen and her children moved in with her brother John Wesley and Rusha (McPherson) Butcher living in a small house he built for them. Helen worked for others doing cleaning and eventually moved to Akron, OH and opened a boarding house (1918-1920) for workers at the tire factory, including some Archer relations from Jackson Co., Viola (Angus) and Sherman Archer (John, Michael, Joseph, James). John and Margaret Curry moved to Columbia Co., Ohio. William and Ada Archer accompanied Helen. Earl Grayson joined the Army and became a career NCO running a recruitment office in Chillacothe, OH where he married Sarah Etta Schofield [b. 12 Aug. 1895, Chillacothe, OH].

Simon received a grade school education (1891-1900), took an additional year of teacher instruction at the Rankin Teacher's School (1901-1902), and taught school at the White Rose School on the north fork of Little Sandy (1903-1907). He then left Jackson Co. to work for the C.R.J.&P. Railroad in Denver, CO and for the post office in Kansas City (1911-12), Denver and Washington, D.C. (1917-1918), for the Internal Revenue Service (1918), and then got a Commission in the Sanitary Corps during WW I and was stationed in Chicago. After the war, he briefly rejoined the IRS but resigned to rejoin the Army and went to France (1920-22) to collect the bodies of American soldiers for stateside burial. In France he met and married his first wife but divorced her shortly after they returned to the United States. He returned to Washington, D.C. and was employed in the Treasury Dept. for a few years, went to Miami, Florida and began a real estate business that was wiped out either by a hurricane or a land bust (1926). He went to Los Angeles and went on active duty with the Army (Jul. 1927-Jan. 1928), met his second wife, Mary Bernice Smith. After marrying they moved somewhere near El Centro, CA for his health, but Simon got restless and wanted to pursue his real estate career. They moved to San Diego about 1934, and he worked for a couple of real estate firms as a salesman before opening his own office in Sept. 1936. He hired some salesmen in 1936 and really began to sell after WW II as the Navy veterans began to settle in San Diego. He died 6 Jul. 1948 and is entombed in Cyprus View Mausoleum in San Diego, CA. Marybelle, Peter, and Sarah (Sheets) Archer

Peter Archer was born, Nov. 20, 1855, at Noble County, Ohio. He married Sarah Martha Sheets, Feb. 19, 1882, at Wirt County, West Virginia. She was born in Wood County, West Virginia, Jan. 18, 1864, the daughter of Henry and Almira (Stucky) Sheets.

Peter and Sarah (known as Sis) lived on a ridge above Route 21 at the Jackson-Wirt County line. They never had a lot of material goods but they always had plenty to eat from what they grew on their hillside farm. Their daughter, Ora, and her sons stayed with them after the other children were grown. They also cared for their granddaughter, Grace, whose mother, Eula, had died a few days after giving birth. Eula's son, Wayne, stayed each summer at their house.

Sarah, a kind, considerate person, was a hard worker who knew how to manage what little they owned. She always raised two gardens, so there would be plenty of food to store away for the winter. She was very particular about how her onions were planted. She would raise plants in a hot bed for her own garden and give extra plants to neighbors. Sarah was very successful at grafting apple trees and had one tree with five varieties of apples. A large copper kettle was used to make apple butter and Sarah always used the apples from one certain tree for this task. Apples were always plentiful and the cellar was filled with them each fall. Popcorn was also raised on the farm and this along with the apples would be the snacks for the family.

Hogs and cattle were raised on the farm and when it was time to butcher the hogs, several neighbors or relatives would come to help. The grandchildren would take the bladder from a hog and blow it up like a balloon. Some of the lard from the hogs would be used to make soap in the copper kettle. The hogs were often fed with the extra apples. One time when Grace and Sarah had washed clothes on a washboard and hung them out to dry, the hogs got out and knocked down the clean clothes. Needless to say, the job was to do all over again. There was always plenty of pork to eat. Many times, pork and potatoes were served for breakfast. The cattle were sold and some of the income would be used to pay taxes.

During the Depression when drought conditions existed, Sarah would tell the grandchildren to work hard at picking beans, digging potatoes and other chores so they would not have to go to the poorhouse. The grandchildren would help hoe the corn at a very young age. Grace was given a hoe when six years of age so she could help. At that time Grace did not have any shoes to wear and she would get sandbriers in her feet. Later, when she did get a pair of shoes, she hated them because they buttoned up and had pointed toes. The shoes cost ten cents. Sarah would sell cream so they would have a little extra income. During the construction of Route 21, some of the Negro workers would climb the hill to their house and buy fresh buttermilk from Sarah for five cents a half-gallon.

Other than visiting relatives and attending church, the family did not go very many places. Occasionally, they did go to the fair, at Evans. The grandchildren would go out the road to Uncle Jake Sheets house to listen to the radio program, Amos and Andy. Sarah gave them certain rules to follow when they went to his house. They must take off their shoes and be quiet when the program was on. They were also not allowed to ask for anything to eat. The grandchildren considered Uncle Jake rich, because he had a radio and carbide lights.

After Sarah's mother died, Sarah inherited $400 and she felt this would at least secure their financial future for awhile. Peter had other plans and used the money to purchase the only car they ever owned, a Model T Ford. Peter was a good moral person; however, he could be quick-tempered at times. He loved to sit by a tree in the yard, or on the porch, where he would sing and yodel. Peter died in 1940 and Sarah in 1941. They are buried in the Limestone Cemetery at Wood County, West Virginia. Their children:

1. Marybelle (1882-1957) married Charles McPherson and they resided, on Brushy Fork, in Grant District. Their children: Grace Thomas, Nell Smith, Lester McPherson, Hazel Thompson, Edith Wines, Murhl Corns, Nina Whited, Jean Belvin and Rae Corns.

3. Willie (1891-1896)

MacKINLEY "MAC" ARCHER

MacKinley "Mac" Archer was born on July 4,

MacKinley "Mac" Archer

1896, to Megary "Doe" and Sarah (Aplin) Archer in Gay, WV. This is where Mac and his sisters, Bertha (Archer) Romine and Florence (Archer) Winters Scrote, with brothers Guy, Clarence and William Archer were raised. They lived on the Aplin farm until Mac was about 18 years of age. The farm was sold and Mac and Bertha traveled about the United States for about a year.

Mac Archer settled in Akron, Ohio after serving in the Air Force during World War I. Mac was working at the Miller Rubber Company in Akron where he met his future wife, Mary Estelle Barstow. They were married in 1924 and had five children: William Archer, twins Ellen (Archer) Martin and Robert Archer, Evelyn (Archer) Lanielle and Mary (Archer) Timms.

Mac was one of those unfortunate people who lost their money in the 1929 stock market crash, and like many others, survived and went on to lead a happy and productive life. Mac began working at B.F. Goodrich Rubber Company shortly after the crash and retired from there after approximately 40 years.

Mac and Mary Archer bought a duplex home on Wilbeth Rd. in Akron, Ohio (area known as Kenmore) where they raised their family. Mary (Barstow) Archer died in 1951 and Mac continued to live in Akron until the time of his death. Mac enjoyed raising his children, and also enjoyed the children of the neighborhood, often taking a gang of them to local parks. Later, he also very much enjoyed his 15 grandchildren.

Mac was very fond of fishing which he did as often as he could all summer long, teaching his children to fish as well. Mac was a very strong-willed person, as well as a very colorful person (regarding his language). He was a heavy smoker all of his life until his first heart attack and when the doctors told him he had to stop . . . he stopped. After taking a medical retirement from Goodrich, Mac planned on doing some traveling, but suffered a second (fatal) heart attack on September 9, 1960, before he could implement his plans. Submitted by Robert Archer

MICHAEL H. ARCHER

Our Archer line is descended from Patrick Archer of Ireland. His first known location in America was in Greene Co., PA about 1774.

Members of the Archer family are mentioned a number of times in Howard L. Leckey's book The Tennesse Country and Its Pioneer Families (Knightstown, IN: The Bookmart, 1977).

The Archer Family settled east of Fort Jackson about 1774, taking up land in the vicinity of the old double bridge at Morrisville . . . Captain James Archer was the first to come here. He went back over the mountains and convinced his father to come out with him. Patrick Archer, the father, brought out his whole family, consisting of five sons and three daughters . . . during the troublesome days the Archers played an important part in the defense of the frontier, with at least one son giving his life in the struggle against the Indians (344).

Martin Archer, father of Michael H., died in 1876 in Ohio. His widow Celia and children moved from Ohio to West Virginia, probably in early 1880.

Michael H. Archer, son of Martin and Celia Archer, was born Oct. 28, 1869, in Noble County, Ohio. His lineage is Martin, Michael, Joseph, James I, Patrick; this ancestry has been established earlier through extensive research of others. He married Sarah (Sadie) Robison, daughter of John A. and Hanna (Truex) Robison. Their children were Mary Ellen (May 1894-Jan. 1982), Martin Hobert (Aug. 1896-Sept. 1962), Dessie Gladys (Nov. 1902-May 1988) and two children who died in infancy (James and Ruby).

Michael and Sarah Archer lived in Jackson County except for a short time when they moved to Wellsville, Ohio. About 1907 they returned to Jackson Co. and to a farm on Isaac's Run (Blood Run) in Grant District. They later had a farm on Little Sandy and still later a small farm on Independence Road.

Michael Archer was a thoughtful, industrious worker who owned and operated farms in the days when a productive farm with clean fields and good fences was a goal which was achieved through long hours of hard manual labor.

Sarah Archer died in 1937; Michael died in 1952. They are buried in the Independence Cemetery.

Michael H. and Sarah (Robinson) Archer

Their daughter, Mary Archer, married Fred D. Robinson, son of E.J. "Squire" Robinson. Fred Robinson was a teacher and principal in the Grafton, WV schools. Their children were Frederick Clay (1915-1945) and Mary Margaret (1918-1964). Margaret was a teacher in Grafton, WV. F. Clay, a medical doctor, was commissioned in the Naval Reserve and on active duty in 1945. He participated in the Iwo Jima Operation in the Pacific and was declared missing in action. Fred and Mary Robinson are buried in Ravenswood Cemetery, and their tombstone also bears an inscription of their son.

Dessie Gladys Archer, daughter of Michael and Sarah, was a school teacher. She taught at Beech Grove school prior to her marriage to Charles E. Rardon in 1927.

They lived for some years on Little Sandy, in the home Michael and Sarah had built. They later moved to Spencer, WV where Charlie Rardon owned and operated the Rardon Barber Shop.

Their children, all born on Little Sandy, were Jean Evelyn (m. George Patrick Riggs), Gladys Lois (m. Sherl L. Edler), Earl D. (m. Mary Ellen Smith) and Carl W. (m. Ginger Lou Keeton).

Charles Rardon spent considerable time in making cabinets for clocks after retirement, making a number of grandfather type for relatives and others, which, no doubt, became prized possessions.

Charles Rardon died Sept. 1985. Dessie Rardon died May 1988. They are buried in the Ravenswood Cemetery.

Martin H. Archer married Ada M. Rardin, daughter of William D. and Almeeda M. (Cox) Rardin. Both had attended the Cuba School, which was then located on a point above the public road on a dividing hill between Blood Run and Little Sandy. Martin and Ada taught school before their marriage in 1917. Martin taught his first term in Mingo Co. and Ada in Mason Co. They lived in Jackson Co. until 1920 when they moved to Rosemont, WV. While there, Martin taught in Rosemont, attended classes in Grafton for additional credits, and worked part time at a tippie on a coal mine.

They returned to Jackson Co. in 1922 and bought a farm on Isaac's Run. Their children were Martin Dole (b. 1918), Ina Ethel (1919-1974), Lewis Russell (1922-72), and Calvin Michael (b. 1927).

Martin taught for thirty-five years, teaching at a number of schools in Jackson County, including Red Brush, Beechgrove, Cuba, Sarvis Fork, Lone Star, Lockhart, Providence, Flinn and Cavin Fork. He also farmed on a part-time basis, normally doing farm work of a morning before school and at the end of his teaching day. Grading papers at night by lamplight often completed a full day. It may be difficult for those reading now to picture farm and home life of those days. The work week was often Monday-Saturday with many hours of daily work by those who operated the farms by manual labor, hand tools and horse-drawn equipment and machinery. Women cooked on wood stoves, washed the clothes on washboards, sewed, managed to find time to help neighbors when needed, helped with some outside work and often attended church on Sundays.

After he retired from his teaching career, Martin and Ada built and operated a gasoline station and limited grocery store, Archer's Esso, on their property near the intersection of Route 21 and Turkey Fork Road. As Route 21 was well used those years as a north-south route before Route 77 was built, they had a busy and enjoyable several years meeting friends, neighbors, and the traveling public in the first gasoline station at this location. The station had a friendly atmosphere; often a game of checkers was in progress.

Martin Archer died in 1962. He is buried in the Ravenswood Cemetery.

Ada Archer continues to live at the Route 21 family home. She was active in the church and in the Order of the Eastern Star for many years. She is Past Worthy Matron of the R. Douglas Chapter No. 15, O.E.S. Submitted by Martin D. Archer

ARMSTRONG

James Armstrong came from Beverly, Randolph County West Virginia about 1833, with his wife, Catherine (Weas) and their first child, a son Benjamin Franklin. In the 1830s, James bought from Jacob Starcher lots 45, 47, 49 and 51; he then owned all the lots that fronted on North Street 43 at the corner to the crossing at Mill Creek. Between 1840 and 1850, he started a tannery business, which was located on the neck of land behind the house, and between Mill Creek and Sycamore Creek. About 1848 James had the present house built, and now owned by his granddaughter, Anne King. By this time he was well to do, as can be seen by the house he built. The house originally had four bedrooms, two sitting rooms, kitchen, and a dining room. The front hall had the main stairway, and between the kitchen and the dining room was a stairway to the back bedrooms. The house had a small front porch with settees on each side, and a porch at the back of the front hall running along the dining room and kitchen. Later addition to the back of the house added a bedroom and bath upstairs and 1/2 bath and utility room downstairs. The back stairway was later removed and another bath was added upstairs. The outside walls as well as the portions of the house are made of local bricks. The heart pine floors and the doors, and the window trim are original.

James and Catherine had seven children; James Armstrong was born September 6, 1804 and died November 28, 1879; he married June 23, 1831 to Catherine (Weas); she was born on January 12, 1812 and died January 6, 1900.

MALCOLM C. ARNOLD

The Arnold family came to Jackson County in December 1957, when Malcolm (Mack) left the coal fields of southern West Virginia (McDowell County) to come to the Kaiser Plant as an electrician. Because of the housing shortage, Mack boarded first with the Neff family and later with the Ray Kennedy family, both on Wilson Street.

In August 1958, Margaret and their three sons, David 11, Jim 8, and Jeff 6, moved to 814 Ann Street, Ravenswood, where Mack and Margaret still live. In December 1958, their fourth son, Ralph Henry (Hank) was born.

Mack became active in the Ravenswood Volunteer Fire Department and the Isaac Walton League. Some of the chestnut trees he helped plant as an Isaac Walton League project are still standing. He also worked at a second job, wiring houses for Fred Miller, building contractor.

In 1960 Margaret began substitute teaching for the Jackson County Board of Education in the old high school on Sycamore Street. The next year she started teaching on a regular basis in the old 1887 building. John Hall was the principal.

All of the boys attended the Ravenswood schools and graduated from Ravenswood High School. At one time, because of the classroom shortage, they attended classes in churches and apartment buildings. All four boys were paper carriers for either the Charleston Gazette, the Parkersburg News or the Ravenswood News; David won a trip to Brazil as a carrier for the Parkersburg News; Jeff wrestled for the Ravenswood High School Varsity; and Hank participated in the band and Chamber Singers.

In 1968 David married Paula Kirk and they established a home in Kokomo, Indiana, where both worked for the Chrysler Corporation. They had two children — Jason and Melanie. David was killed in an airplane crash in 1976.

Jim served in the U S Air Force from 1968-1971. In 1971 he married Patty Hughes and the marriage ended in 1973. They have one son, Christopher, who is serving in the U S Air Force. Jim later married Rhonda West of Bath, South Carolina, and they live in North Augusta, Georgia, where both work for the Savannah River Plant.

In 1973 Jeff married Pam Moore of Rockport, West Virginia. They have four children — Nicki, Scott, Melissa, and Kelli Beth. The marriage ended in 1985. Jeff graduated from West Virginia University and has an accounting business in Parkersburg.

In 1982 Hank married Joni Kennedy of Zanesville, Ohio. He worked for Halliburton in the oil fields of Ohio, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania for ten years and is now employed by Dupont in Parkersburg. Joni works for Home Health Care of Washington County, Ohio. They live in Marietta, Ohio.

Jeff, Hank, Jim, and Mack Arnold

Mack served four years in the U S Navy, worked sixteen years in the coal mines, and worked twenty-five years for Kaiser Aluminum, retiring in 1983. His hobbies are fishing and woodworking. Margaret worked four years as a postmaster in McDowell County, taught there one year in a rural one-room school, and taught twenty-seven years in the Jackson County Schools, retiring in 1987. She devotes much time to her church and to weaving and quilting. Submitted by Margaret Arnold

ASHBY

Thomas Ashby was born in 1829, died 1925. His wife's name was Nancy, who died in 1893. They were my great-great grandparents. Tom fought in the Civil War, the West Virginia Infantry. They're buried on a hill near the Cicerone Church, in Roane County; not far from the Jackson County line.

John Henery and Polina (Pliny) Harris Ashby are buried beside them. Polina's parents came from Winston Salem; North Carolina. Her father's name was Charles Harris. He is buried at Bald Knob in Roane County.

Henery and Polina acquired a farm on White Oak Run, near the Advent Post Office in Jackson County. They had several children, whose names were Lilburn, Laura who married Perry Parsons, Henerietta who married Asbury Parsons, Halley who married Boyd Raines, Melvin, George Nannoy and my grandmother Mamie Macy, who married Roma Owens Jones.

The house at White Oak, John Henery built still stands today. Although it has been remodeled and repaired.

He also built a log school house, which was later replaced by a new school, after the land was donated to the county. The school is also still there today; it was called the Ashby School. The church that stood across the creek from the school is no longer standing. The land for the church was also donated by Henery and Pliny.

After the death of Henery and Pliny, my grandparents inherited the farm. They had seven children. One who died when she was very young. The other six were, Bessie who married Clarence Jones, Donald who married Lilly Payne, Kermit who married Fletus Buzzard, Hamon who married Dela Breedlove, Cassie who married Bernard Counts, and Verlin who married Dorothy Lacy.

My grandmother took care of Thomas (her grandfather) in his declining years. He was 96 when he died. At times he would become disoriented, throw his tray of food across the room and shout that the enemy was coming. He thought he was still fighting the war.

Bessie and Clarence lived in Roane County; they had several children who died at birth. Donald and Lilly who live in Putnam County (Liberty) had two children, a son Elwood and a daughter, Christine Stevens, who lives at Fairplain. Kermit and Fletus had three children: Carl, Frances and Phillis; they lived in Boone County; Hamon and Dela had two children: Roger and Carol. Cassie and Bernard had four children; Janet Wheatcraft, Robert Counts, Judy Sink, and Brenda Pinkerman. Bernard still lives in Jackson County. Verlin and Dorothy had two children, Katrina, and Rodney. Katrina married Paul W. Hayes. They have three children and live in Racine, Ohio. Rodney was married to Joyce Hackney; they had two children. He later married Tammy Armstead; they also have two children; they live at Silverton.

My grandfather, Roma O. Jones, was also raised in Jackson County. His parents were Frank and Nancy Jordan Jones. They are buried in the cemetery near Advent on First Creek. While my grandmother stayed at home and raised seven children, my grandfather worked away; he drove a team of horses in the oil fields of Boone County. Submitted by Katrina M. Hayes

W.J. ATKINS

William James b. 1-20-1830, d. 3-11-1894 and Mary Amanda Peterson Atkins b. 9-15-1833, d. 3-22-1920: family as written by Amanda Murrey Coe about stories her grandmother told her when Grandmother Atkins lived with the Grant Murrey family.

"Will, another letter came from Dr. Mairs today," Mary announced as her husband came in from the chores. As Will's trembling hands opened the letter both hoped and dreaded what he would say. They read slowly the brief message:

Sandyville, Va. July 20, 1861

Dear Will,

Things are peaceful here. I have my practice and have built a large house from bricks made here on my farm. No battles have been fought here and I will help you establish a home.

Joseph Mairs

Mary was the first to speak, "It sounds as if the war isn't bad in those parts. If we stay here you will have to fight and neither of us believe in fighting." "Can you stand to leave this area, Mary? My mommie is gone and your sisters at Luray and Culpepper won't go with us. My sister, Lucy, and Boot say they will go."

Mary thought a long time before she answered, "Oliver is four and doesn't need to see the fighting; neighbors upset and yesterday John Peterson received word Tad was dead. It will be hard with Oliver and Julia and me expecting another one (Mollie) but write Dr. Mairs back and see if we can come next summer."

The summer of 1862 found the families of Wm. J. and Boot Burke loading their belongings on covered wagons drawn by oxen. Their destination was an area called Sarvis Fork where Dr. Joseph Mairs had settled. They crossed the Blue Ridge Mountains to Charleston, WV mostly on trails, then northward to Ripley, over "Nigger Hill" and down Mud Run valley. Grandmother said they camped on the Lon Spears (presently compressor station) farm as a log house with a well stood there. The house was vacant but they stayed in the yard. The next morning they traveled all day to get to Dr. Mairs (Alvy Riggs property now).

He helped them settle in a large log house on Turkey Fork (where her future grandson-in-law, Charley Owens, was born). Another son, Edward, was born. Grandmother had four children but none of her family was near. The war prevented letters, so Mary dreamed of home and became very ill. Will knew she would die if they remained in Sandyville so they returned to Culpepper Court-house. When they saw the devastation, family and neighbors dead, Mary welcomed the opportunity to return to the Ohio River. Will's father, Larkin, b. 3-12-1800, d. 11-11-1889 returned with them to Ravenswood where my mother, Amanda Catherine, b. 9-15-1869, d. 6-1-1926 was born. Between Edward and Catherine two other children had been born, Thomas and Lucy.

Will and Mary finally settled at the mouth of Beaty Run and had four more children: Ben, Henry, Philip (Spanish American War veteran) and George. They had 13 children and raised 11.

Mary Amanda (Peterson) Atkins

My mother, Amanda Catherine, married Charles Grant Murrey, April 16, 1889. They had three children live to maturity:

Jessie Juno, b. 5-26-1891, d. 6-26-1972, m. 3-2-1907 Charles Owens; Amanda Frances, b. 3-15-1893, d. 2-21-1985, m. 6-10-1914 A.A. (Ottie) Coe; Frank, b. 10-13-1900, d. 8-12-1937, m. 10-3-1922 Bernice Currey.

Will, Mary and eight of their children are buried at Independence Cemetery beside the McGee Chapel. Submitted by Ruth Coe Fisher

REV. WILLIAM A. ATKINSON

William Albert Atkisson (Billy) (1841-1928) was born March 6, 1841 in Jefferson Co., Ill. At 14 he and his brother Pleasant went to live with a sister, Sara, in Weston, Va., now West Virginia. There they enlisted in the Union Army August 15, 1862, Co. D, Reg. 15, W. Va. Volunteers. Sgt.

Atkinson was in the Army hospital in Cumberland, Md. recovering from war wounds when the Civil War closed and did not know where Pleasant was. He had mustered out and returned to Missouri to rejoin relatives. Sister Sara had also returned to Missouri. Billy lost all trace of his family for forty years. About 1903 he applied for a disability pension and his name (which the Army had changed on records to Atkinson) appeared in the soldiers' newspaper of that day and was seen by Pleasant who contacted Billy by long distance telephone, quite a feat in that day. Billy, wife Lucy, and daughter Ruth visited Pleasant and his family and sister Mary Ellen and her family in the Indian Territory, now Oklahoma. (Billy kept the Atkinson spelling of his name because of the difficulty in having it changed.)

In the late 1700s, a Mr. and Mrs. Atkisson and small sons, Benjamin and James, joined a wagon train from Tennessee and headed for the Middle West. Travel in those days was slow and dangerous. Disease plagued the travelers, to say nothing of the Indians who very much disliked the newcomers. Cholera broke out among the people of the wagon train. Two of the victims were the parents of Benjamin and James. Another couple in the train took charge of the lads. They grew up in southern Iowa. James became a Baptist minister. He married Elizabeth Mendenhall and became parents of 11 children, William Albert being the ninth. Among the children were:

John who served in the Union Army and married Mary Robinson.

Newton who lived in Nebraska, also in the Union Army.

William Albert.

James Pleasant (J.P. or Plez) was a contractor for the railroad throughout the Midwest; married a girl named Sophia. They lived in tents which were moved from place to place as the railroad was constructed.

Sara moved to Weston soon after she married a Kazad. During the Civil War they moved to the Indian Territory in Oklahoma.

Betsy Jane married a Hayes, lived in Oklahoma.

Lida married a Ferdon, lived in the Midwest.

America died soon after her marriage, also lived in the Midwest.

Mary Ellen married Peter Lunsford Robinson, brother of Mary Robinson, wife of John. They lived in Missouri, later Arizona.

In 1852 Elizabeth Mendenhall Atkisson died leaving the young ones much in need of a woman's care. Some of the older children were married and had established homes of their own. A young widow, a Mrs. Shock, with a little son lived in the community. She and James married. She mothered the family and the children loved her very much. However, less than a year later she died in childbirth and the family again was left motherless. James married another widow from the community. Her treatment of the motherless children was cruel and the time came soon when it was necessary to make a change. John, the oldest son, took Mary Ellen; Lida and America went to live with another older brother. This was when Billy and Plez went to Weston to live with Sara.

Billy married (1859) Elenor Elizabeth Rausbottom (1844-1893). To this union were born Martha Jane Atkinson Boswell (1860-1936) (see Wiley A. Boswell); Prince Albert (1862 died in infancy); Laura Ellen Atkinson Staats (born 1864) lived in Charleston; Elnora (born 1866); Elizabeth Catherine Atkinson Burdette (born 1868) lived in Charleston; Geneva (born 1872) married Jenk Jones; Olive Ella Atkinson Shaver (born 1874).

Billy and Elenor made their home in the Rock Castle vicinity where he was a school teacher, then later owned and operated a saw mill business and acquired land. William gave each of his children a house pattern (lumber for a home) when they married. In his early forties William felt the call into the ministry.

Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Atkinson

After the death of his first wife, William married (1895) Lucy May Custor (1860-1949). He and Lucy moved into a log cabin back of Leon where Otis Howard (1896, lived two weeks) and Ruth Rebecca (1898-) were born. During this time Rev. Atkinson was building a home at the top of Shiloh Hill near Leon.

Ruth married Hoadly Rowe, later after his death in 1944 she married Freeland B. Shannon who died in 1956. She has lived in the Charleston area most of the time since girlhood. She lived a few years in Michigan, then much later in Santa Barbara, California, before moving back to Charleston.

Rev. Atkinson organized several Advent Christian Churches in Mason County and was their pastor: Harvey Chapel on Ten Mile Creek; Guiding Light on Tumbleston Run, Letart; Mt. Moriah near Letart in a different direction, as well as one in Ohio about ten miles down river from Gallipolis. In 1911 he became pastor of the First Advent Christian Church in Charleston. After two years he retired as a pastor.

During the last years of his life he continued to preach the gospel to the many visitors who came to see him. His numerous stories of his experiences in pioneer days of preaching and raising up churches were of interest to his many friends and family. He led a multitude of people to Christ. He continued to preach to the last, as was his wish and was talking about his Savior a few minutes before his death.

He held a great love and concern for his family and had the pleasure of holding in his arms the fifth generation. Submitted by Ruth Atkinson Rowe Shannon and Rosemary Harvey Nowlon

OMA THELMA (HARRISON) BAILEY

Oma Bailey, daughter of Cornelius and Rebecca Goodwin Harrison, was born in Charleston in a tiny white house directly behind Bream Memorial Presbyterian Church on February 21, 1896. Her parents were native Jackson Countians; Mrs. Harrison was the daughter of William and Barbara Goodwin.

Cornelius Bailey moved to Charleston because he hated working on the farm. He supported his family mixing mortar and pouring cement. Ome, the only child to be named by her father, was sixth of nine children. In order of birth they were: Ofa, Bess, Abigail, Ruby (the only other surviving child, Ruby is now 99), Pearl, Oma, Opal, Pauline, and Sattis. A third son died in infancy. The family lived on Charleston's west side, on Edgewood Road and on Charleston Street (now Washington Street West).

As the children got old enough to work, they quit school and sought employment. Ome suffered the loss of most of the vision in her right eye in an accident when she was nine and it was difficult for her to do a lot of reading, so her parents allowed her to quit school at age 14 and go to work. Her first job was at the Kanawha Woolen Mill at the corner of Clendenin and Virginia Streets. She worked at every job in the mill, from winding the large bobbins to bagging the blankets made there which were then sent to local merchants to be sold. She was making $18 per week, an impressive salary, doing piece work at the mill when she got married.

Ome worked at other jobs besides the mill, but her favorite job was as a collector for Nelson Transfer. Charleston merchants ordered merchandise for their stores which arrived in Charleston by train which Nelson Transfer would pick up at the depot and deliver it to their customers using horses and wagons. It was Ome's job to collect the money due Nelson's from their customers. She had no problems collecting the bills. People prided themselves on their honesty and paid promptly. Ome wore out a pair of shoe soles each week in her job and when she told her boss, Mr. Abbott, that she'd have to have a raise or go collecting barefoot, he gave her the raise. Her top salary at Nelson's was $15 per week. She paid her mother a minimum of $7 per week for room and board and many weeks gave her the entire $15 to help supplement the family income.

Ome married Everette O. Bailey in 1920, and on a bitterly cold day in January 1922, with their five-month old son Cecil Lee, they moved to Jackson County. They traveled in a two-seated hack with no top on it, pulled by two horses. They began their journey from the west end of Charleston at 6:30 a.m. and arrived at their two-room log house situated on Eighteen-Mile Creek near Dirty Fork (it was not yet called by the illustrious name of Pleasant Valley Road) at 7:30 p.m. The roads were poor, making the long trip seem even longer. At times the hack buried in mud up to the hubs on the large wheels.

Eventually Everette, Ome, Cecil and their younger son, Lawrence Edward (Bob), moved into the big house owned by Everette's parents at the fork of Pleasant Valley Road and Eighteen-Mile Creek. They lived there all their married life. Everette died January 5, 1972 and Ome remained at the old homeplace until 1981, when at the age of 85, she had local homebuilder Robert Stover build her a new house on the strip of land facing Pleasant Valley Road where the old school house used to stand, a small brick house with no upstairs, plenty of storage space and a cellar to store the fruits and vegetables she cans from her garden.

In the house she has a refinished-until-it-looks-like-brand-new pump organ whose appearance belies its age of 74 years. Carved into the burnished wood is a delicate design of roses spiraling toward the spindles that line the top, with beveled glass mirrors adding the crowning touch to the regal old instrument. Ome plays the instrument and sings in her rich alto voice.

Oma Thelma (Harrison) Bailey

Ome is always attired in a freshly ironed print dress covered with a full-length apron, her white hair neatly piled on her head in a top-knot. And she is always happy to have visitors.

But give her time to put on a clean apron before she answers the door. Submitted by Joyce Stover and Kymberla Easter

BALDERSON

William L. and Sarah Ward Balderson moved from Meigs County, Ohio to Jackson County in 1878, the year they were married. With William's parents, Johnthan (born May 6, 1823) and Margaret A. Lewis (born 1830) Balderson (married April 29, 1849) and had several brothers; they settled around Turkey Fork.

In 1910 one of William and Sarah's sons, Thomas Balderson, met and married Leetah Rowand. Leetah was the daughter of James E. and Emma Zahndt Rowand. Because of the borders of the counties around Turkey Fork, it is not for sure in just what county the Rowands lived. Emma and James are buried at Pee Wee.

The picture above is of Tom and Leetah and several of their children. They are standing in front of the tent that was pitched for Leetah's half brother, Calib and his wife, Mary Jeanette Showalter Rowand, when they visited from the coal mining country. The children are Velma, who married Leon Metz; Esther, who married Ed Batten; Lusta, who married William Martin; Raymond, who married Kathryn Coe; and the girl in the hat, my mother, Genevieve.

Genevieve followed her sister, Velma, to the big city of Parkersburg when she was 15 years old. There she met and married Charles Norman Watkins (parents, Frank and Lucy Morehead Watkins) on April 16, 1937. Lucy L. was born the following year and Larry N. in 1942.

All my life I heard stories about Turkey Fork, Garfield Hill and Pee Wee. But this year, 1989, is my first experience with actually knowing where they are located. That journey was certainly a journey through time for me. Submitted by Lucy L. Harries

SAMUEL L. BARBER

Samuel Lewis Barber was born Nov. 18, 1840 in Meigs County, Ohio. His father was born Sept. 16, 1814 in Ohio and his mother Dec. 28, 1817 in Pennsylvania.

The 1860 census in Meigs County listed John Barber as a laborer with a personal estate of $50, wife and eight children. Samuel was the oldest child.

Samuel married Virginia Sayre in Jackson County on April 30, 1861. His wife, born June 26, 1842, was the daughter of Rachel McGuire and Joseph Sayre, a preacher with a 2,400-acre farm in the county. The Sayres arrived in the county at the turn of the 19th century and were among its earliest settlers.

The day after his marriage, Samuel joined the State Scouts as a private and remained as such until July 10, 1862, when he entered the Federal Army, enlisting as a private in Company I of the 11th West Virginia Infantry. He rose through the ranks and was promoted to captain on Feb. 19, 1865 for gallant conduct before Richmond as the Civil War was coming to an end.

Captain Samuel Barber

During the war, he was in all the battles of the Shenandoah campaign and for a time was a doctor at the Andersonville prison. He was also present at General Lee's surrender before leaving the Army on June 28, 1865.

Samuel's wartime experiences were recorded in detail in letters to his wife. In one, he reported eating as much corn as any horse. In another, he described the charge at the Battle of Winchester as the greatest sight he had ever seen.

"The air was full of musket balls, shells, grape and cannister," he wrote. "The field smelled like hell-fire from the brimstone shells. I passed through it without blood being drawn from me. But a ball struck my canteen. Our loss is said to be 2,000 killed and wounded. The rebels, it is said, have suffered 8,000 killed and wounded."

In his early years, Samuel was a pilot on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, ran a saw mill and farmed. He was best known, however, as a doctor, having worked at the county infirmary and delivered 1,500 babies.

At the beginning of the century, he helped bring telephone service to the county, setting up a central office in Cottageville, where two of his daughters worked the switchboard. But, by the end of the first decade, a new telephone system organized that replaced the Barber Telephone Lines.

The Barbers lived on a farm just above Cottageville, along Big Mill Creek, about a mile above the county farm.

They had 12 children: Laura, Joseph, Rachel, Hiley, Elvira, Dora, Adra, Mary, Tennessee, Flora, John and Martha.

Virginia Sayre died in 1925. Samuel died Aug. 11, 1930. They are buried together in Otterbein Cemetery, near Evans. Submitted by Golden Skeen and Dennis Conrad

CAMDEN AND BIRTY (PICKENS) BARNETT

Marriage is often made of dissimilar personalities; for Cam and Birty Barnett, this was surely true. Cam Barnett, genial, industrious, took life as it came, while impetuous Birty was a spirited lady, who stepped with a quick stride. She was an avid gardener whose annual harvest yielded an abundance of succulent vegetables and colorful, fragrant flowers. For 48 years Cam and Birty traveled the road of life together.

Camden Cornelius Barnett was the son of Preston and Clara Casto Barnett, grandson of Robert and Elizabeth Barnett, grandson of Abram and Rebecca Crites Casto. He lived his entire life in the Rockcastle area and for many years was employed as a foreman on the county road system.

Birty Viola Pickens Barnett was the daughter of Philip and Adeline Stephens Pickens, granddaughter of Andrew Jackson and Manerva Stephens and Spencer and Margaret Pickens of Mason County. She was a registered midwife and for many years she traveled, sometimes walking, sometimes riding side-saddle on horseback, over hills and up hollows, and through the valleys of Jackson and adjoining counties using her God-given talents and abilities for the benefit of needy people.

Later they purchased a farm near Rockcastle and lived there until the beginning of World War I when they purchased a home and farm at Rockcastle which is now the residence of their grandson Bill Barnett and his wife Wilma.

Cam and Birty had nine children:

"A brief illness from heart disease brought death Friday morning to Camden Barnett of Rockcastle, who was one of Jackson County's most widely known farmers. His death was a shock to the family and to his hundreds of friends and came within a short time after he had been admitted to a Charleston hospital. The funeral service was held on Sunday, May 10, 1948 at the Lone Oak Church with Reverend Guthrie officiating. Cam died May 7, 1948 and is buried at Pine Hill Cemetery."

Perry Barnett (March 12, 1856-March 1, 1939) buried in Leon Cemetery, Leon, WV. Melissa Barnett (Jan. 25, 1860-1946), buried in Leon Cemetery. Mary Jane Barnett, (Sept. 4, 1861) and is buried in Bluefield Cemetery. Emily Evaline Barnett (Oct. 17, 1863) buried in Ripley Cemetery. Franklin M. Barnett (Feb. 14, 1866-March 4, 1886) buried in Barnett Cemetery. Minerva B. Barnett, lived at Narrows, Virginia. Charles Barnett (March 29, 1870) buried in Barnett Cemetery. Filson Barnett (March 8, 1870-May 2, 1883) was killed by a falling tree. Martin Barnett (Feb. 2, 1873-March 5, 1879) buried in Barnett Cemetery. Albert Barnett (April 2, 1874-August 16, 1938) buried in Barnett Cemetery. Alice Barnett (Jan. 7, 1877-Nov. 29, 1969) buried in Barnett Cemetery. Oscar Barnett (April 4, 1879-Jan. 22, 1954). Asbury Barnett (November 9, 1858-April 1931) and is buried in Barnett Cemetery.

Lucretia was born in a little log cabin on Parchment where she spent her early childhood, going to school very little and she learned to card wool, spin, weave and knit, also cook. She lived on Parchment until she was 12 years of age, then her father moved with his family to Little Spruce, a tributary of Thirteen Mile Creek. Here they erected a small log house where Lucretia spent her girlhood days. Shortly after that she lost her dearest and best friend, her mother. The death left her with the duties and responsibilities of the household.

Although a child of 12 or 13 years she fulfilled those duties and when she was 18 years of age she married Enos Barnett, who was 21 at the time. Enos and Lucretia built a log house over the hill from her home folks and lived there about two years, then moved on the Main Thirteen Mile Creek above Rockcastle, where the greater part of her life was spent. Soon the Civil War began and she had to bid goodbye to three brothers and three brothers-in-law who joined the same regiment. These were trying times and often the brothers would write home begging her to save them something to eat. They all returned after the war. One brother, Enoch, was wounded in the shoulder. She said these were the darkest days of her life, in telling of the hardships brought on by the war. She told of the women folk working in the fields during the day and doing their house work at night, while in constant fear that the rebels might swoop down upon them at any hour. Lucretia said that it was no hard task to cook and care for her family in those early days. They did not have different kinds of food to cook but always had plenty of meat, cornbread, beans and potatoes that were cooked by the open fire.

Lucretia Barnett

Aunt Crease was a grand old lady and celebrated her 99th birthday anniversary at the home of Asbury Barnett. More than 500 people attended the huge basket dinner in October of 1934. She died before her 100th birthday, following a sudden illness. She is buried in Barnett Cemetery. Submitted by Daniel A. Casto and Dempsey Barnett is buried in Pine Hill Cemetery, Ripley, West Virginia.

Clippings taken from the Jackson Herald: "The coroner in Denver, Colorado, is reported to have said of Miss Lyda Barnett that treatments and lack of care in a clinic there resulted in her death and urges members of her family to take action in her case. Miss Barnett, who died in Denver on Monday of last week had gone there on the recommendation of a Parkersburg chiropractor last December for treatment of arthritis. After she was admitted to the clinic, she tried vainly to get out but was unable to do so. Two weeks ago a former friend heard Miss Barnett was in the clinic and went to see her. She found that she weighed only 81 pounds and was in a terrible condition. She took her to her home, called a physician and she was taken to the General Hospital in Denver where she was given blood transfusions and shows some improvements. The case was reported to the Better Business Bureau and they began an investigation and tried to get back the $1,227.00 which the woman had paid for treatments."

Her life was an inspiration and her brave fight to regain her health was a contribution to the dignity, love and perseverance of human kind. She was a kind and loving person, always ready to encourage and help others. To know Lyda was to love and respect her. Submitted by Carolyn Watkins

ROBERT AND ELIZABETH BARNETT (PART I)

We who are living today here in Mason and Jackson Countys West Virginia owe a deep and lasting gratitude, first to our God and Savior Jesus Christ who died on the Cross, for such a wonderful place to live; second to our great ancestors for being here. They were mostly young, energetic, and brave men and their wives, to come here in the western part of Virginia, to conquer the wilderness the good Lord had planted so many, many years before, where the axe and saw had never cut a tree by the white man. Where the wild animals still roamed, also a few Indians still sneaking around, back when the state of Virginia, claimed all of Virginia, Pennsylvania and up to and including Pittsburgh, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and I think Illinois. We are talking about the Barnetts, Morrisons, Shinn's, Baileys, and McCollums, to name a few.

So it was in about 1812, here came Robert and Elizabeth (Rayburn) Barnett, to the Rockcastle area of Mason County, later in 1831 Jackson County of Virginia, long before the Civil War of 1861-1865. Here they built their rough log one-room house, cleared the ground, planted their corn, beans, and potatoes, built rail fences out of chestnut oak (as it was the easiest to split) also their shingles for their roof were riven with a froe and wooden mallet, mainly cut out of dogwood (as this wood was tough and hard as iron when dried). Here in this neighborhood of Rockcastle, Virginia. Robert and Elizabeth raised their family of 15 children. (We have no dates of birth for most of them.)

ROBERT AND ELIZABETH BARNETT (PART II)

William Barnett, our great-grandfather-in-law, served in Civil War Co. B. 13th West Virginia infantry, d. 2-25-1904 and buried in Barnett Cemetery, near Mt. Olive Church on Cain Ridge in Mason County, along with his second wife Emily Adeline. When William divorced his first wife Mary, she sued him and collected 53 acres of land as her dowry (this writer has the papers). William Barnett must have had a great sense of humor, marrying so young a girl. She threw a party for her young friends who were having a great time in the front room while William was in the bedroom trying to sleep when he came out and danced in the only thing he had on, a shirt! (told to me by his granddaughter, Vella Mae Morrison McCollum). William and Mary's third child Eliza Jane, d. 8-17-1936, married 3-22-1870 to John F. Morrison, who was born 2-14-1850, d. 11-27-1935, are both interred in the Mt. Olive Cemetery on Cain Ridge and near their old home and farm on Morrison Ridge, which they bought in the 1870 era; all virgin lumber, their first log house which Elzina Jane helped her Johnny saw logs to build, was down on the hillside, in the wilderness, where their first two children were born: Louisa J., b. 7-18-1871 buried in Mt. Olive Cemetery with her first husband Loring Mattox, b. ? d. ?, and George O., b. 1873 and d. 2-25-1921. They took their lunch and babies to the top of the hill where they worked from daylight to dark. Sawing the large trees and clearing the ground, leaving Louisa to watch George laying on a quilt in the shade of a tree. If George rolled off the quilt in the sun, Louisa J. was too small to get George back on. Elzina Jane and Johnny Morrison cleared the ground, built their second log house on top of the hill close to their beautiful two-story frame house which they later built. Their children including Louisa J. and George O., are William, b. 10-4-1874, d. 6-12-1876; Rutherford H., b. 9-3-1876, d. 6-12-1879; Alda, b. 4-23-1878 and died in Ohio; Mae, b. 8-5-1886.

It has been a pleasure of love to help write his history, mostly because being born so long ago, yes the old log fireplace where you could stick your fingers to the end of a burning log (especially Hickory) and get some sweet sap oozing out the end. (Man!!!) Also, dirt roads, no cars to pollute the air, no boob tubes to keep you awake, only a country telephone, lines hung mostly on trees, but especially to write about my in-laws. Yes, Robert

(NOTE) The name Barnette is spelled with and without the final "e." Some generations dropped the final "e" and later generations attached the final "e." Immigrants by the name Barnette left France for Ireland about 1662. They came to Ireland, except one. William Barnette came directly to Jamestown, Virginia. He married a daughter of Pocahontas. JOHN BARNETTE

Throughout this article the name Barnette is spelled with and without the final "e." The reason is that some generations dropped the final "e" and others attached it to the end of the name.

In 1662, two Barnette immigrants left France for Ireland. One of them was William Barnette who, instead of going to Ireland, went directly to Jamestown, Virginia where he married one of Pocahontas' daughters.

John Barnette, the son of the other immigrant, was born in Londonderry, Ireland in 1678 and he came to Pennsylvania in 1730. Three of John's sons settled in Virginia.

William Barnett was born in 1775 in Botetourt-Montgomery County, Virginia. He married Mary McGuire, daughter of John McGuire and Elizabeth Cottle. William and Mary had nine children: Elizabeth, Robert, Mary, John, William, Rebecca, Nancy, James and Ann. Eleanor and Hannah, however, were children by William's second marriage.

William and Mary lived in Greenbrier County, Virginia which originally included the areas of Bath, Highland, and the Allegheny counties that nearly extended to the present site of Charleston, West Virginia.

When Robert Barnett (1801-1882) was 11, his father William moved the family to a farm on Three Mile Creek presently located in Mason County.

Robert married Elizabeth Rayburn and they had 15 children: Mary, Evalina, Henry, William, Robert, Allen, Enos, Emily, Elliott, Eliza, Sara Ann, Ellen, George W., Mariah and Preston.

Robert and his family settled near the headwaters of Thirteen Mile Creek. Land in that section could be bought for five cents an acre, but acreage in the Kanawha Valley was 25 cents. Thus, Robert purchased for five cents an acre the land on which he cut timber and sold furs. As the population of the area increased, a store and post office evolved. The community became known as Rockcastle. Robert, the first to homestead the region, built a log cabin that existed until 1960 when Ott Barnett, grandson of Preston Barnett, constructed a new home on the exact location where Robert's cabin stood.

The Barnett Cemetery consists of approximately two hundred grave sites and overlooks the village of Rockcastle. Today the Mason/Jackson County line cross the 1,400 acres that Robert owned.

William Barnett (1829-1904) married Mary Harrison and they had 12 children: William Henry, Rosanna M., Elyina A., Nancy Americana, Elizabeth S., Permelia F., Evalina A., Francis Lincoln, Beverly Sheridan, Addie O., John Ellsworth and Emma S.

When William was 33, he enlisted in the 13th West Virginia Infantry on October 8, 1862. William fought in the following battles of the Civil War: Lynchburg, Kernstown, Second Winchester, Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek.

At the close of the war in 1865, William received an honorable discharge at Wheeling, West Virginia. Afterwards, he returned home to continue farming.

Francis Lincoln Barnett (1866-1945) married Georgia Mattox and they had two sons, Alva Clyde and George C. George died in infancy. After the death of his first wife, Francis Lincoln married Georgia Cossin.

Alva Clyde Barnett (1890-1938) married Lucy Stover and they had two sons, Raymond Lincoln and Harsel Andrew.

Raymond Lincoln Barnette (1914-1984) married Virginia Branham and they had one daughter, Delores J. Raymond was an engineer at the Fletcher Enamel Company in Dunbar, West Virginia and in World War II he was the youngest man in the group to have served in the Pentagon.

Raymond owned the Dunbar Sport Shop, and he was the manufacturer and the distributor of the Dunbar Coin Holders. As a numismatist, Raymond conducted appraisals and administered estate auctions. In addition, he formed the Dunbar Coin Club.

Furthermore, Raymond was a member of the Junior Order United American Mechanics, and he was instrumental in the establishment of the Mountain Lodge of West Virginia, Inc. at Southside. After his retirement, Raymond lived in Mason County, West Virginia where he died at Pleasant Valley Hospital.

Hersel Andrew Barnette (1915-1979) married Pauline Sayre and they had two children, Hersel Ray (Sonny) and Lou Ann.

Delores J. Barnette attended Dunbar High School. She earned a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Charleston (Morris Harvey College) with majors in speech, English and language arts. She taught for several years in the Kanawha and Mason County schools. Delores' postgraduate work at the university afforded her a permanent license to teach. Submitted by Delores J. Barnette

BARNHART

When Iva Beatrice Barnhart married John Raleigh Pryor on 9-29-1909 in Jackson County; the heritage of four Jackson County families was melded with that of the Pryor pioneers from Pennsylvania and Ohio. Iva was not only a Barnhart but she also held a part of the Safreed, Staats, and Morehouse family heritage, all of whom came to Jackson County in the early 1800s. Iva was the great-great-granddaughter of Jacob Barnhart, Sr.

Jacob, Sr. was married to Hannah Moore, and came to Jackson County before 1820 from Pennsylvania, possibly Somerset County, although he may have been born in Lancaster County. It is believed that he was the son of Henry and Catherine Bernhard. Henry was probably descended from one of the German immigrants from the Palatinate. Many of the Barnharts (German Bernhardt), as did the others from the Palatinate, immigrated between 1710 and 1730, because of religious persecution in Germany. A large proportion of them came through, or settled in, Pennsylvania. Most were farmers, although many were wagon-makers.

Jacob son of Jacob, Sr., was born in 1822 in Jackson County, and married Sarah Safreed sometime before 1844. They had eight children. Their first, John Lewis, was born on 5-27-1844 in the county. Jacob died in Jackson County. The date is unknown. Family tradition holds that Sarah lived to be 100 and died in the county in 1826(7).

John Lewis Barnhart, named after his maternal grandfather, John Lewis Safreed, was a farmer like his father and grandfather before him. On 2-25-1864 at Skull Run, John Lewis married Frances Morehouse, daughter of William and Elizabeth Ives Morehouse. (William, Elizabeth and their family came to Jackson County about 1849.) John Lewis was a veteran of the Civil War, and was a prisoner of the Confederates for a few days shortly before the end of the war. He was quite proud of his service in the Union Army. In the five generation picture his war medals are pinned on his lapel. John Lewis died in Parkersburg on 4-27-1935, just one month shy of his 91st birthday.

James Franklin Barnhart was born to John Lewis and Frances on 5-27-1866 in Jackson County, and he also became a farmer. On 11-17-1887, in the same county, he married Georgia Anna Staats. (The Staats were a pioneer family in Jackson County arriving before 1810. They were descended from the New Jersey Staats family whose history can be traced back to at least 1670.) James and Georgia had eight children. Iva Beatrice, their third child, was born on 8-29-1893 in the county. Georgia died on 10-18-1910 in Sherman, and James later married Clara Hartshorn, the daughter of Sebastian and Mary Staats Hartshorn. Mary was a sister to Georgia, thus Clara was a first cousin and stepmother to James Franklin's children.

Iva Beatrice had left home before the marriage, however, because she married John Raleigh at the age of 16. Their first child, Virginia Beatrice, was born on 8-18-1911 in Sherman. Shortly after the birth of their second child, Anne, on 2-11-1913, they moved to Wood County. They went on to have seven more daughters and three sons. Submitted by John H. Cunningham and Virginia B. BARON-SAYRE

Beginning in France during the early 1600s Nicholas Baron, a butcher by trade, migrated to Canada. He married Mary Chauvin in Montreal where she was born. Our other ancestors, Touissant Toupin Dusault (Dusseau), Noel Morin and John Baptiste Cousineau, who began settling in New France, Quebec, from 1616 to 1649, are also from France. Noel Morin, a wagonmaker, married Helene Desportes Hebert in 1640. Helene was the first white child born in New France in 1620. Of their twelve children, Germain became the first Canadian to be ordained a priest in 1659, and Marie the first Canadian nun in 1660. Helene D. Hebert Morin was the widow of William Hebert, whose father was Quebec's first settler, Louis Hebert, and is honored with a monument to the Premier Colon-first farmer. Louis was also a great friend of Samuel de Champlain, and next to Champlain was the most important person in the establishment of New France.

The heirs of these men traveled up the St. Lawrence River to Ontario 1770 thru 1780, and again during 1780 thru 1790, traveling to Detroit and Sandwich, now Windsor, Canada. Then our predecessors moved south to Frenchtown, now Monroe, Michigan in the early 1800s to help establish Erie township and the parish of St. Joseph Sur La Baie (Erie).

At this time one cousin deserves mentioning, this being Peter (the scout) Navarre, this Frenchman spent the greater part of his life in the forest, largely among the Indians. Peter Navarre was to Michigan what Daniel Boone was to Kentucky. Navarre knew the great Shawnee chief, Tecumseh. His services as interpreter and scout to Gen. William H. Harrison prompted British General Proctor to offer a reward of 200 pounds for his head, dead or alive.

On the Dusseau side of our family was Gabriel Dusseau, who married Julia Jacob in 1822 and had thirteen children. Four of their daughters died within a period of a month from an epidemic, two daughters did not marry, of the seven boys one drowned in the Erie Canal, another remained single, but Victor married Catherine Morin, whose daughter Ella Dusseau married Jerome Baron, son of Oliver Baron I.

From another root, Francois Cousineau married Mary Robideau at Detroit in 1816. During this time Francois was delivering mail on horseback between Detroit and Cleveland along trails by Lake Erie. He built a homestead where St. Joseph Church now stands and later to donate to the Church those lands, his homestead became the first rectory. His son Isadore married Rosalie Duval and had Amelia, who married Oliver Baron I who was born in 1836.

In the year 1899 the parish trustees for St. Joseph Church were Oliver Baron I, Ezekiel Baron, Dooley Trabbie and our uncle Dr. S. Dusseau M.D. Dr. Dusseau donated funds for the building of two Indian Mission Churches in Colorado, and shared in the cost of a Mission in Texas. He also paid for the education of ten Seminarians for the priesthood. He held several patents on early cars, one of which was the four-wheel drive, years before the first one.

Oliver Baron II, son of Jerome Baron and Ella Dusseau, was born in Toronto, Canada in 1899 and lived there until the age of twelve, and could only speak French. His family then moved back to the Toledo, Ohio area. While courting his future wife, Marie Krall of German-Pole descent, Oliver II had to avoid confrontation with young men of other ethnic groups driving to see her, because he was a "Frenchman." He did win her hand and raised Eugene, Alfred, and Bernadete (BeBe) during the great depression of the '30s. He was by trade a fireman, machinist, tool and die maker, and inventor. Once during those bad times someone was taking wood from his wood pile. Desiring to put an end to it he marked and loaded one log with some gunpowder then placed the log back on the woodpile. After a few days, a neighbor had a blow back of smoke from their stove. This action stopped the taking of his wood. Oliver and Marie Baron are known and addressed by their family members as "Mimi" and "Pipi," due to our French heritage.

Alfred Jerome Baron, born 1923 in Toledo, to Oliver II and Marie Baron was co-captain of Libbey High School's football team of 1942, Ohio State School Champions, and in 1941 co-champions with Steubenville High due to a tied championship game. He was also an All-State selection for playing the position of end for the same team. He served as a blimp pilot during WW II, a general superintendent for the building of the I-75 Desale bridge in Toledo, holder of one patent and owner of a building supply business. Alfred married Charlene Houck and had children: Douglas, Pamela, Glen, and Paula.

Douglas Alfred Baron born 11-18-1949 in Toledo, Ohio, married Cathy Lynn Sayre, born 12-14-1950 to Carl (Cecil) and Pansy Sayre, of Swanton, Ohio, on 10-10-1970 in Whitehouse, Ohio. Carl (Cecil) Sayre is the son of Chriss and Mary Sayre of Evans, Jackson County.

Douglas Baron received an Associate degree from the University of Toledo in 1970, assistant purchasing agent to the Mellocraft Co. before he and his wife Cathy moved to Ripley in 1975 and began the business X-PERT Carpet Cleaners. His other activities include being a Ripley Volunteer fireman, treasurer, and member of the board of directors. Trustee for the Open Bible Church and trustee, treasurer, and elder for Ripley New Life Church. He is also involved in real estate development of Northgate Estates in Ripley. Douglas and Cathy Baron have two sons, John Hayden Baron born 1-31-82, and Gregory Allen Baron born 3-16-85. Photo on page 407 Submitted by Douglas A. Baron and Carl (Cecil) Sayre

ROBERT AND FLORA BARR

In the early 1800s two young brothers came to the United States to live. They came from Ireland to settle in West Virginia. The brothers' names were John Henry Barr and George Westly Barr.

John was our great-grandfather. John and Mariann had two children, Sarah and George Henry Barr.

George Henry Barr was our grandfather. Our grandfather married three times. He raised 21 children from these marriages.

Our father, William Robert Barr, was born April 28, 1884. His father and mother were George Henry Barr and Mary Burdette. He and his brothers worked in the timber business, like their father and grandfather. Robert later worked on the railroad until he married.

Robert met a beautiful young lady and fell in love. Her name was Flora Ann Hoschar. Flora was born Aug. 2, 1891, the daughter of John W. Hoschar and Martha Rhodes Hoschar. Robert and Flora were married in 1910. Dad was known as Robert Barr.

Robert and Flora Barr

Flora and Robert bought a farm on Long Hollow, where they settled to raise a large family of 11 children. Two of the children died as infants.

Working hard from morning till night in order to provide for their family, enough food was raised so mother could preserve enough to feed the family until the following year. All meat came from the farm. Wheat was ground into flour and stored in 25 pound sacks.

Flora and Robert lived on Long Hollow all their married life. Robert died in 1933. Flora stayed on the farm with her eight remaining children. Times were not easy; all the children worked exceptionally hard and Flora was able to keep the family together. As the children matured they either married or left home.

On November 15, 1943, at the age of 52, Flora married Lawson Casto. Flora and her three young children moved into Mr. Casto's house on Foster Ridge.

They maintained two residences during this time partly due to war-time conditions. Livestock and crops were tended to on the Long Hollow Farm from the Casto Farm on Foster Ridge. Two of Flora's sons, Dale and Basil, served in World War II, and a daughter, Inez, carried the United States mail.

Lawson Casto died in 1949, but Flora remained in their home until 1969 when the property was sold. Flora then went to live with her children. She would stay a few months with one then another. She would never stay one place too long saying, "she did not want to wear her welcome out." She did this as long as she was able to care for herself. Flora died May 12, 1988.

William Robert Barr, Flora Ann Hoschar Barr, and Lawson Casto are all buried at Foster Chapel Cemetery near Rockcastle in Jackson County.

Arthur Barr, born April 21, 1911, married Opal Hollon. Five daughters. Married Sybil Forrest, 1989.

Nellie Francis Barr, born Sept. 22, 1912, married Arliage Casto. Five children.

Edith Barr, born April 29, 1914, deceased March 23, 1978, married Robert Rhodes. Two children. Married Hugh Boone.

Ray Elmer Barr, born October 8, 1916, married Gloria Sayre. Five children.

Dale F. Barr, born Sept. 9, 1922, married Anna Mae Sayre. Eight children. Married Carol Burton.

Charles Basil Barr, born May 14, 1925, married Shirley Smith. Six children.

William Robert Barr, Jr., born July 17, 1927, deceased 1965, married Helen Casto. Three children.

Inez, born June 16, 1929, married Raymond Parsons. Five children. Married Robert Brotherton.

Deloris, born Oct. 6, 1931, married Glen Rowley. Five children. Married Delmar Casto.

When Flora died in 1988 she left 146 living descendants. In the family there were five generations, all five female. Submitted by Inez Brotherton and Dale F. Barr

BECKWITH

Families whose ancestors had been together since the time of William the Conqueror were united when William Lloyd Pinnell married Olevia May Beckwith, 1/12/1912.

Great-grandfather Lewis Beckwith (4/26/1818-2/04/1897, Antioch Cemetery) married (2/22/1842) Esther —, who died 10/16/1850. Their children were Oscar Jennings (3/12/1843-10/13/1907, Antioch) and Isabel (6/23/1845-). Lewis married (6/18/1860) second wife Sarah Deen Grancil Steward from Pennsylvania (4/12/1832-12/06/1905, Antioch), and had one son, William Lewis Beckwith (9/16/1861-5/24/1942, Blaine Memorial). Sarah brought to this marriage a son, James H. Steward (7/10/1856-9/23/1909).

By the time William Lewis (Will) was 14, his father was blind, and Will had to take over full time farming duties. Will had kept a daily journal from the time he was 14 years old, and much insight has been gleaned about his family, neighbors, farm activities and everyday life and events in general on Cow Run and Jackson County. To this date, February, 1990, there are friends and family who remember his love of life, his interest in politics, and the great lengths he would go to perpetrate a practical joke. Mother Sarah would travel for miles by horse and buggy to aid the sick, and was always willing to help when a neighbor was in need.

On January 15 1885, Will married Lenora Ellen Sayre (Ella) (5/11/1863-1/03/1945, Blaine Memorial), daughter of George W. Sayre and Mary Jane Lewis. Three of their six children lived to adulthood. Son Ray (2/21/1895) was killed 8/29/1915 in a train accident at 19 years of age (Blaine Memorial); Glenn Eustice (4/06/1887-10/25/1959, Blaine); Olevia May (9/23/1890-5/02/1976, Blaine); Frank Lewis (3/01/1892-7/06/1895, Antioch); Ray Oscar; Elsie (twin to Ray) (2/21/1895-11/30/1897, Antioch); and infant son, born and died 4/27/1902.

Will and Ella stayed on the farm sharing their home with Glen, daughter-in-law, Eva, and grand-

William Lewis Beckwith,
Lenora Ellen Sayre, and son Glen Eustice daughter, Thelma, until about 1915 when they built a house in Cottageville and moved there to spend their remaining years.

Ella was a quiet homemaker, and suffered through the loss of three beloved children, and two young brothers who were drowned. After heavy spring rains in 1882, according to Will's daily journal, Barr Run was running higher and the current was more swift than could be remembered, when William David Sayre, 14 years old, fell into the water, and his brother, Thomas Lewis Sayre, 17, jumped in to save him. Both young lives were lost that May 6.

William Lewis was a staunch Democrat and a devout Christian. He was a member of the Cottageville United Brethren Church, and served as Sunday school superintendent for over 20 years. He was a Master Mason, AF&AM, Lodge #54 at Cottageville, and a charter member (along with daughter Olevia) of the Order of Eastern Star, Chapter #16, Cottageville. He was a man who planned for the future, so he built his own casket at a cost of $13.00. He cut the boards one and one fourth inch thick and put them away to dry. Fourteen years later, the boards were so dry that he could hardly cut them with a saw or drive a nail through them. He even set his own tombstone in 1926 at Blaine Memorial, where he and Ella now rest. His father-in-law, George W. Sayre, also built his own coffin out of choice walnut wood for a cost of $25.00, and grandson, Hoyt Crum, varnished it and lined it. William Lewis Beckwith and George W. Sayre lived their entire lives within ten miles of their birth and final resting places.

It is comforting to know that we have come from such fine stock.

Their son, Glen Eustice, married (7/15/1908) Mary Eva Sayre (1886-5/1971, Blaine), daughter of Peter Pierce Sayre (1856-1943) and Sallic Margaret Furgt (1857-1923), both buried at Antioch. Their children are Thelma (1909-7/29/1968); Blanche (Peg), widow, married P.J. Bays; Doris, widow, married George William Cromley, (Blaine Memorial); Lucian (Buddy) (U.S. Army, WW II), deceased; Ethel (Bet), widow, married Bill Meese; and Glendine, married Jerry Shives.

Thelma married Russell Withrow, and their children are Glen Allen, Columbus, Ohio; Vivian Louise (Kuhl), California; Byron Thomas, Lithopolis, Ohio; Grace Eleanor (Franz), Texas; and Dorinda Genevieve, Texas.

Blanche and P.J.'s offspring are Lynn (Shepherd), California; Jimmy, deceased; and Brenda, California.

Ethel is parent to Sue, Joy and Jim, all of California, and Glendine and Jerry are parents of Linda, Rodney and Nancy, all residing in Pennsylvania.

Olevia May married (1/09/1912) William Lloyd Pinnell (11/15/1888-9/23/1967, Blaine), son of William Perry Pinnell and Czrena Alwilda Williamson Lloyd. (See Pinnell)

William Lewis was a nephew of Tapley Beckwith, Jr., and Adeline Beckwith. Submitted by Doris Cromley and Grace Franz

F.H. BEE

Frederick Homer Bee (1957-1951) was a salesman all his life. He loved to talk of his life selling and traveling; he was what was known as a "drummer." He started at an early age. In order to help his mother pay for a sewing machine, she sent him out on the road with the salesman, traveling in a horse-drawn wagon, to sell sewing machines, organs and pianos. When he met the girl he would later marry, Lola Bella Brown, he was buying wool for the Hassler Brothers Mill in Ripley, driving a mule team, in Jackson County. They always declared that they saw each other once a year for four years before their marriage in 1881; that marriage endured for 56 years.

In 1907, he started a general store in Marshall, Jackson County, known as Buffalo Store Co. He continued the business for 32 years. Also, for a time he had a small factory for making brooms, called the Buffalo Broom Co. The counters in his store were constructed with broom handles forming the uprights.

Frederick Homer Bee remembered the Civil War and hiding in the cellar with his family sometimes. His father, Josiah H. Bee (1824-1876) was a captain in the Union Army stationed in West Union, where his men made a desk which is now owned by Daniel Simmons Bee of Houston, Texas, a great-great-grandson of Josiah.

Lola Brown Bee (1861-1937) was a descendant of Jackson County pioneer stock. One of her ancestors was William Parsons, one of the first settlers in the county. His son was Charles Parsons, a veteran of the American Revolution, as was John Carney, another ancestor.

Frederick Homer Bee Jr. became general manager of Scotts Greater Shows after World War I. It was one of the largest in the eastern United States. Later he put together his own business, known as the F.H. Bee Shows, which he owned for many years, until his death in 1940. He was survived by two daughters, Betty Jo and Fanny Jane Bee.

Maxine Bee Kee and grandson, Jeffrey Southall

Frederick Homer Bee Sr. died in 1951, survived by grandchildren Philip S. Bee and Maxine Bee Kee, the children of John A. Bee and Eva Simmons Bee. Philip Bee died in Houston, Texas, in 1980, leaving wife Jane Fulton Bee and five children: Phyllis Jane, John Frederick, Daniel Simmons, Beatrice and Eva Kathryn Bee.

Maxine Bee Kee has one daughter: Elencva, Mrs. Don Southall of Spencer, WV, and one grandson, Jeffrey Southall, of Washington, D.C.

BENNETT

Beatrice Genevieve Bennett, the first born to Holly Henry Bennett and Ellen Elizabeth Bennett, both deceased, now relates a part of the family story, whose ancestors lived in Jackson County in the 1800s.

Isaiah Bennett, as listed in the 1840 Census, was living in the part of Randolph County, Virginia (now West Virginia) that later became Barbour County, Virginia (now West Virginia). Barbour County was formed in 1843 and became a part of West Virginia in 1863. In the 1850 Census, Isaiah Bennett, his wife, Catherine, and five children were living in Barbour County. By 1860 the family had removed to Jackson County and settled on Cedar Run, in present Ravenswood District. The 1860 Census listed Isaiah Bennett, a farmer and a cooper by trade, his real estate assessed $4,000.00 and personal property $150.00; listed he and his wife, Catherine, and children John W. Bennett and Rachel born in Randolph County; Aaron Bennett born July 28, 1844, Mary E., and Joseph born in Barbour County, Virginia (now West Virginia). Isaiah and Catherine's children born in Jackson County were: James M. Abraham, E.(M), Newton, Florida and Harriet. Catherine Bennett, wife of Isaiah, died April 20, 1878, in Jackson County, age 55 years, 5 months, and 20 days. Isaiah Bennett died December 1, 1895. Isaiah and Catherine Bennett were buried in the Bennett Cemetery near the Wilding Road.

Aaron Bennett, son of Isaiah and Catherine Cooper Bennett, served as a private in Captain William Johnson's Company of Jackson County Home Guards in the Civil War, enlisting at Hemlock, July 20, 1863. Aaron was a farmer and a cooper by trade. On February 4, 1864, Aaron Bennett (1844-1925), son of Isaiah and Catherine Bennett, married Ann Eliza Cooper (1850-1925), daughter of William W. and Rachel Cooper. Albert and Beatrice are enjoying retirement, always have some project ongoing, and how fast the time does fly! Submitted by Beatrice B. Hite and Kenneth P. Fisher

JOSEPH BENNETT

The earliest record we find of Joseph Bennett (1806-1862) being in Jackson Co. area is when he signed the marriage bond of Mary Jane (Hughes) and Abijah Hunt on 3 May 1828. Then on 4 April 1833, he married Martha Parson (1812-1889) and they made their home on Cow Run near the Antioch Church. Some records state that Martha was the daughter of Charles and Elizabeth Parson but, so far, no proof of what Charles Parson this was. The death record of Joseph says he was born in Pennsylvania, the son of John and Jane. In book 9, page 78 we find where Joseph Bennett was one of six men appointed to lay out the county into districts. He is, also, said to have laid out the road over the hill from Cow Run to Angerona, so he may have been a surveyor.

After Joseph's death, Martha married David Wink, a widower. She is buried in cemetery across the road from Antioch Church and we assume Joseph and some of his children are buried there. In early years this cemetery was known as Bennett Cemetery.

Their children:

1. A daughter in 1840 census, over five years old. No further record.
2. Benjamin (1836-1919) married Josephine Hill (1838-1916), daughter of Laban and Rebecca (Woodruff) Hill, 21 April 1863.

3. Charles (1838-) married Nancy E. Penick 27 October 1864, daughter of Clement and Elizabeth Penick. Charles was a private in Co. B of 22nd Virginia Infantry, enlisting in 1861 and was a prisoner on 1 April 1864. Sometime after 1900 Charles and Nancy with their family moved to Indiana by horse and wagon.

4. George, died in 1861 at age 20.

5. Elizabeth (1843-) married James Parson 31 March 1864, son of Moses and Mary (Deweese) Parson.

6. John (1845-1864) a private in Co. B of the 22nd Virginia Infantry, was wounded in action 1863, a prisoner in 1864, and transferred to Fort Delaware where he died of measles. Buried at Finn's Point National Cemetery, New Jersey.

7. Emmacette (1847-1924) married Mason Casto 9 January 1867, son of Benjamin and Sarah (Shinn) Casto.

8. Irvin "Doc" (1849-1924) married Margaret J. Dunlap 23 March 1869.

9. Lewis "Jake" (1851-1914) married Charity Sayre 11 October 1875, daughter of Abel and Catherine (Anderson) Sayre.

10. Craten (1854-). In 1870 he was in household of Oscar Beckwith at age 16. No further record.

11. Easter (1856-). No further record.

12. William A. (1860-1940) married Rebecca Sands, 24 May 1879.

I am Anna (Bennett) Sayre, the only living grandchild of Joseph and Martha (Parson) Bennett. I was born 2 February 1895 on a farm near Cottageville, W. Va., the youngest child of Lewis "Jake" and Charity (Sayre) Bennett. I had six sisters and two brothers. On 21 September 1912 I married Isaac Sayre and we had 13 children. Submitted by Mrs. Anna (Bennett) Sayre

BENSON

Mathias Benson moved from Pennsylvania to Highland County, Virginia in 1787. An assessment of his estate in 1794 shows that he was a slave owner and had a still valued at $48.

Mathias had two sons, Mathias and James. James married Margret Trimble, the daughter of James Trimble who came to America from Scotland to fight for the British during the Revolutionary War. After the war he lived in Highland County, Virginia where he prospered as a landowner and slave holder. James and Margret moved to Doddridge County to raise their family. During the Civil War the family was split in half as their sons Wade Hampton and William fought for the South joining the Twentieth Virginia Cavalry, while their brother Calvin fought for the North. Wade Hampton was shot and captured during the Battle of Droop Mountain then sent to Camp Chase, a prison in Columbus, Ohio.

After Wade Hampton was released in 1865, he came to Jackson County where he married Martha Brown, daughter of Thomas and Ruth Bill Brown. Wade and Martha's daughter, Laura Benson, married Wallace Rector. Their daughter, Mayme Rector, married Otmer Salser. Otmer and Mayme are the parents of my mother, Maxine DeWitt. Submitted by Norse Angus

ELIZABETH (MILHOAN) BEVER

My great-grandmother, Elizabeth Ellen Milhoan was born in Belmont County, Ohio in 1835.

She came to Jackson County, Va. with her widowed mother, Elizabeth Starkey Milhoan and some of her brothers and sisters around 1850. Her father, John Milhoan, died around 1847 but not before he had purchased land in Jackson County. It was to this land that his widow came with her family.

The area in which the family settled was later known as Milhoan Ridge. Elizabeth Ellen Milhoan later returned to Ohio where her sister and a brother or two still lived.

She married John Bever in 1855 and together they raised a large family. Their children that reached adulthood were Mary Elizabeth, Alfredetta, Carey, Oliver, Melvin, Belle, John E., and Charles. Most of these children were born in Monroe County, Ohio where the family made their home until around 1880.

Some time later John and Elizabeth E. Bever moved to Jackson County, W. Va. with most of their children. John Bever died in the spring of 1893. Their daughter, Belle Bever, married in Jackson County, W. Va. 1897 to B.F. (Frank) Montgomery and later moved with her husband to Wood County, W. Va.

In 1900 Elizabeth E. Milhoan Bever was still living in Jackson County in the Beech Grove area with her son, Charles. Sons John E. and Melvin Bever and families lived near by.

We do not know when or why Elizabeth E. Bever went to Wood County, W. Va. to live with her daughter, Belle Bever Montgomery, but it was there she lived out the rest of her life.

Once again, Elizabeth Ellen Milhoan Bever returned to Jackson County, W. Va. and was laid to rest in the Milhoan Ridge Cemetery. Three of her sons, John E. Carey and Charles Bever, along with members of their families are buried in the Ravenswood Cemetery.

Son Melvin Bever and members of his family are buried in Cuyahoga Falls, Summit County, Ohio. Oliver F. Bever buried in Eugene, Oregon. Daughters Mary Elizabeth and Belle, Wood County, W. Va. Alfredetta in Monroe County, Ohio. Submitted by Virginia Montgomery Murray

The Beymer family has its roots dating back to Simon Bohmer born 1666, wife Margaretha born 1665 in Ransweiler, Germany. Their son Sebastian born 1701 in Bavaria, Germany. Sebastian had a son Conrad, born 1740, Baumholder Patatine region of Germany. Conrad married Juliana of Germany in 1765. The couple lived in Germany several years where Juliana bore three children, namely, Juliana, born 1766, Margaret and George and before the birth of Fredrick 1770. ARTHUR LOGAN BEYMER

Born January 15, 1885 in the community of Lockhart (known in past years as "Buttermilk").

Arthur Logan and Louella (Wilson) Beymer

He was the 11th of 13 children born to William Henry and Amanda Hamilton Beymer.

He married Louella Wilson, daughter of Amor and Elizabeth Maddox Wilson of Ravenswood on August 24, 1907. They spent all of their married life on their 38 acre farm where they raised their five children, Norene, Ronald, Philip, Delore and William (Bill).

Mr. Beymer was a farmer and well known for his work as a carpenter. He built homes for many people throughout the years in Parkersburg, Charleston and as far away as New Brighton, Pennsylvania. He never owned a car and always walked wherever he had to go. If his work was at a far distance, he would ride with one of his workers. They didn't use as many tools to work with in those days and if the job was within a few miles of his home, he walked there and carried his tools. This exercise may have contributed to his good health and long life.

He was a devout Christian and an active member of the Lockhart United Methodist Church, where he served as Choir Director and Youth Leader throughout the years. He had a very good singing voice and was talented in playing the piano and organ. His church was an important part of his life.

Mrs. Beymer preceded him in death by 13 years. She died in October 1966 and Mr. Beymer passed away in September 1979. He served a long and useful life. He was 94.

Three of his children are still living and live in Wood and Jackson counties. William (Bill) lives in Parkersburg, Philip in Evans and Norene Moore at Medina. Ronald passed away on September 21, 1987 and Delore Doolittle on June 1, 1988.

Mr. Beymer is remembered by his family for his honesty and gentleness. He was a quiet but loving man. Submitted by his granddaughter Donna Beymer Hewitt

BEYMER — WILSON

The heads of these families were natives of Ohio. Both men were soldiers of the Civil War. But after marriage came to West Virginia. Father and mother settled at Belleville, Wood County. Mother returned home for the birth of her first baby. Soon they moved to Limestone Hill, Wirt County. Here a son is born. Again they moved to Wolfe Penn Creek, Doddridge County. Here on January 27, 1881, I was born. Again they moved to a place near Weston, in Lewis County. Here the family was not increased. They now moved to near Frametown, Braxton County. Here a daughter was born. But while living here, father sold his sawmill, four teams of horses and five yoke of oxen to his helper. But from this sale, he never received a penny. Now they moved to Newton, Roane County. Here a son was born. Another move and a son was born, another move and a son was born. It was here, January 19, 1891, father died. And the Masons buried him in the little cemetery nearby. In the 18 years of married life, father and mother had brought into the world six boys and two girls. Mother was now left with eight children, and her means of support were meager.

In April 1893, mother decided to go to a sister, who had married William H. Beymer, and who had a large farm in the Lockhart section of Jackson County. On this farm, high among the hills, stood a log house. It was here mother began housekeeping. She had now moved eight times and lived in seven counties.

In the Beymer family were six boys and four girls. Here within calling distance, lived 18 first cousins. All grew to manhood and womanhood and made homes of their own. In the 72 years that have passed, not a harsh word has ever passed among them. In both families were farmers, merchants, and factory workers. One member from each family retired from railroad work. One member of the Beymer family retired from mail delivery service. Not one has ever been brought into court for a crime of any kind. One member of the Beymer family was organist at the Lockhart Church more than 50 years. All have been members of a church of their own choosing. All have been members of a political party. One member of each family has been a carpenter all his life. One member of each family has remained in the Lockhart community. Two members of the Beymer family and one of the Wilson family taught school. One member of the Wilson family graduated from Spencer High School. Also a graduate of Morris Harvey College, class of 1908. And a graduate of West Virginia Wesleyan College, class of 1908.

Members of both families have all passed away since this was written in the 60s by my dad, Guy C. Wilson. Submitted by Lee Wilson

JOHN AND BELLE BIBBEE

John Meredith Bibbee, the youngest child of Ephraim Bibbee and Eliza Mary Pinnell, was born February 1, 1880 at Cottageville, died Sept. 26, 1960 at the age of 80. He married Frances Belle Kessel, Nov. 13, 1904. She was born March 27, 1885, died Nov. 29, 1983 at the age of 98. They are buried in the Fairplain Cemetery. She was the daughter of James Mason Kessel and Flora Jane Parsons Kessel. John and Belle celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary in 1954.

John Meredith and Francis Belle Bibbee

John was four years old when he moved from Cottageville to Kenna, where he grew to manhood and was actively identified with affairs and business of that part of the county. They lived at Charleston, West Virginia, in 1904-1907 where he worked with a team of horses hauling for construction.

In 1907 he purchased a farm at Kenna, where five children were born as follows: Gerald Bibbee, Mabel Bibbee, Guy Bibbee, Ray Bibbee, and Marie Bibbee Boswell. He was a proud grandfather of five, great-grandfather of six, and a great-great-grandfather of four. The grandchildren are: Russell Bibbee, son of Gerald, Guy Bibbee, Jr., Robert Bibbee, sons of Guy Bibbee, Sr.; Terry and Sandra Boswell, daughters of Marie Boswell.

The great-grandchildren are: Keith and John Bibbee, sons of Russell; John and Elizabeth Ann of Guy, Jr.; Jason and Melinda of Robert.

The great-great-grandchildren are: Charolette, daughter of Keith; Lee, Wesley and Megan, children of Ann Withrow.

Ray served in the United States Air Force as a sergeant, spent four years in South Pacific. After his discharge from service, he spent 38 years at DuPont Plant, retiring in 1978. He is now active in farming in Jackson County.

In 1920 John purchased a farm from Dave Raines, near Ripley in Jackson County. Their farm comprises one of the larger acreages in Jackson County. During all the years of his residence on the farms and for many years afterwards, he was recognized as one of the leading and successful farmers and livestock dealers of the county. He was a progressive farmer, was untiring to improve his land and took pride in handling livestock.

He and the family farmed extensively, raising their fresh produce and food products that they sold. It helped to supplement the family income and educated the five children.

He was widely known throughout the state as a fancier and a breeder of Hereford cattle, was an appraiser for the local association for the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore for twenty-four years.

Nature was very kind in giving him a strong physical body and a wonderful disposition. He never worried over the affairs of life and always appeared in good humor. He was loyal to his friends, visited folks in sickness, or misfortune with words of wisdom; ministered to them in time of need, gave them good advice when they sought it, and was a friend to all at all times. Submitted by Mabel Bibbee

BIBBEE (BIBBY)

The Bibbees (sometimes spelled Bibby) who settled in what is now Jackson Co., WV, are believed to be descendants of William Bibby who came to Virginia in 1620 from England. Our earliest proven ancestor was John Bibbee, born June 4, 1736, probably in Rappahannock Co., VA. By 1787, John, his wife, Susannah, and their children had moved to Harrison Co. and by about 1800 to what is now Jackson Co.

John and Susannah's eighth child, Joseph, was born in VA on Apr. 5, 1783. He married Margaret "Peggy" Parsons, daughter of Charles Parsons and Elizabeth Chestnut on Aug. 3, 1809, in Gallia Co., OH. By 1813, Joseph and his younger brother, Elijah, had moved to Letart Twp., Meigs Co., OH, where they bought farmland and raised large families. In 1830, Joseph bought another farm on Mill Creek, Jackson Co. He died here on Aug. 1, 1855.

Of the nine children of Joseph and Peggy, Elijah was born Oct. 3, 1809, married Tamer Sayre on Mar. 1, 1832 in Meigs Co. and later moved to Jackson Co. where they had 11 children. Of these, only three lived to have children of their own. Margaret Matilda (1835-1915) married George Gilpin and had five children, Ephraim Sayre Bibbee (1843-1909) married Eliza Mary Pinnell and they raised seven children; many of their descendants are living today in Jackson Co. and vicinity, including granddaughter Mabel Bibbee, daughter of John Meredith Bibbee (1880-1960) and Frances Belle Kessel (1885-1983). Moses Sayre Bibbee (1855-1932) married Susan Pyle and they had 14 children.

Ephraim Sayre and Eliza Mary Pinnell Bibbee

Of the remaining children of Joseph and Peggy, Delilah (1811-1898) married Abraham Slaughter, Susan (1813-1906) married John Adams Coe (see article, this volume), Abraham (1818-?) married Hannah Long and Eliza Young, Anna (1819-1871) married Alfred Gilpin, Margaret (1824-1855) married Thomas Herdman, Alfred (1827-?) married Hester Hinzman, Amelia Rice, and Cassa Jenkins, Joseph, Jr. (1830-?) married Ereanah Combs, and Tamer (1833-1862) married George W. Coe. Submitted by Clark Blake

JOSEPH AND MARGARET BIBBEE

To add history to the Jackson County Book is an honor. I want to begin with saying that my rich family history is being gathered by my cousins, Mabel Bibbee and Clark Blake. Without their help much of our current history would go untold. Clark has brought together the past and Mabel is doing the history of my grandfather's brother, Ephraim Bibbee, to the pages of history. Clark is doing the Bibbee-Coe family.

My ancestors date back to the 1600s. Joseph Bibbee (1708-1870) married in 1809 Margaret (Peggy) Parsons, giving my past a rich heritage. A distant cousin, T.C. Parsons, a noted country doctor, did our first family heritage, recounting many interesting facts about life and times in the family. In recent times many books have been written linking families together from the Ripley, W. Va. area.

Margaret and Joseph lived in Jackson County working on their farm, and raised 10 children. Their first born, Elijah Bibbee (1809-1855), married Tamer Sayre (1811-1894) in the year of 1832. This union brought forth 11 children. Elijah followed in his father's trade as a farmer. Their children were: Charles (1832-1836), Margaret Matilda Bibbee (1835-1915) married George Gilpin, Henderson Bibbee (1838-1852), Lydia Bibbee (1840-1845), Ephraim Sayre Bibbee (1843-1848), Caroline Bibbee (1846-1850), Charlotte Bibbee (1848-1848), Morgan Rhee Bibbee (1849-1850), Elijah M. Bibbee (1851-1852), Earmid A. Bibbee (1854-1854), Moses Sayre Bibbee (1855-1932).

A point of interest at this time, 1989. My cousins, Mabel and her brother, Ray, with the aid of cousin Clark Blake have recovered the headstones of Elijah (father), Henderson, Caroline, and Morgan from being lost forever. They were on the McCoy farm. Mabel and Ray are caring for them now. Great-grandmother Tamer lived to the age of 83.

Bibbee family

Her son, Moses Sayre Bibbee, is her 11th child, and my grandfather. He took to wife Dusan Pyle in 1877. They resided in the Jackson County area for some time before they settled in Wheeling, W. Va. They had 14 children and their first, Tamer, died shortly after birth, 1878, then an unnamed infant in 1879. Winchester (1880-1923) married Florence McClung, George Ephraim (1883-1959) married Bertha Lorentz, Ona Mae Bibbee (1884-1972) married Charles Wildpert, Grover Cleveland (1886-1950) married Clara Miller, Arthur Bibbee (1887-1954) married Catherine Lorentz, Nina Bibbee (1889-1969) married Chris Kercher, Fred C. Bibbee (1891-) married Myrtle Reinhardt, Harry Bibbee (1893-) married first, Lillie Hilton, second marriage M. Elizabeth Luckel, Floyd Bibbee (1896-1987) married Emily C. Pensis, Susan Louise Bibbee (1898-19) married Stark Sloan, Christopher Cyrus Bibbee (1900-1968) married Margaret Ritz.

My father, Floyd Bibbee, is the 11th son of the 11th son. He was born in Ravenswood, W. Va.

(1896-1987) reaching the age of 91, outliving all of his siblings. As a young man, he worked for the Civil Service as a U.S. Lockman on the Ohio River. When war broke out in Europe, he enlisted in the U.S. Army, going to France in 1918. He was the only member of his family to serve in the military. After the Great War he returned to Wheeling, W. Va. and back to the river. This is where he met my mother, Emily C. Pensis, and they were married in 1921. This brought forth six children. During the early years of marriage Dad worked for Wheeling Steel Mill. Times were hard for everyone. These were the years of the Great Depression, so Dad moved the family to the Detroit, Michigan area. He returned to Civil Service work, working at the Detroit Arsenal. Then the second World War was at hand. He worked there until he retired in 1962. He and Mother moved to Clearwater, Florida.

My oldest brother is Floyd Henry Bibbee (1922). He married Jenny Herling (deceased). They had two sons, Dennis and Brian. He is now married to Rosie, and living in Gettysburg, PA. They are grandparents also. Floyd spent a short time in the Army during World War II.

Emma Lee Bibbee (1924) married Emery Barnett (divorced). A son, Thomas Richard, was born. Her second husband was James Keith (deceased). A son, Jon Robert, was born. She is now married to James Fredrick and he adopted Thomas. They reside in Gaylord, Michigan. The boys served in the armed forces during the Vietnam Conflict. Sis and Jim are great-grandparents now.

Ronald John Bibbee (1930) married Charlotte Meeker, having two children, Linda Louise and Ronald Bibbee Jr. Ronald served in the armed service during the Koran War. He retired from the Ford Motor Co. They are now living in Tampa, FL. Ron and Charlotte are grandparents. Their son, Ronald, is now serving in the U.S. Navy.

My youngest sister, Marlene Bibbee (1934) married Robert De Lair. They have one child, Sheri Lynn. She is single and has traveled throughout the USA and abroad. Robert served in the Air Force during the later part of the second World War. He is now retired from Northwest Air Lines. They reside in Jackson, Michigan.

This is my story — Dona Louise Bibbee (1931) married Jay Charles Tysinger. We have four children: three boys and one girl. I have been divorced from Jay for some time. Because of research I now belong to the D.A.R.

Our oldest is Kurt Alan and he is serving in the U.S. Air Force. He has a child, Chrystal Noel, from his first marriage to Anna Cribbs. He is now married to Lynn Valentine. They reside in Lincoln, Nebraska.

Deborah Lee Tysinger married Alan Wilkinson. They have two children, Erin Brooke and Kimberly Ann. They all reside in Shalimar, FL. Alan is serving in the U.S. Air Force. I might say this, Kurt and Alan went to school together and entered the Air Force at the same time.

My last two boys are both single. Philip J. Tysinger (1962) is going to school, soon to graduate. The youngest is Todd Louis Tysinger (1974). He is a freshman at Dunedin High School. Both boys live with me in Florida.

I mentioned earlier that my mother had six children. One was "stillborn." Although I have many kin that I have not mentioned, we have reached the ninth generation from Joseph and Margaret Bibbee with a count of approximately 664 from gathered information to date. Submitted by Donna Tysinger

BLAIN(E)

My mother, Eva Victoria Blaine, was born 1887 in Cottageville, W. Va., daughter of Grant Hiram and Sophia (Sleeth) Blaine. When she was about 21 years old she came to Pittsburgh, Pa. and stayed with former neighbors from Jackson County while looking for work. Here she met and married my father, Frank Ruffcorn. My mother's brothers and sisters, all born in Jackson Co., were: Flora who married Wm. Stewart; Charles Homer married Ora Harpold; William married Abbie Ingrove; James Herbert died in mill accident; Agnes married Ray Barker; Ellsworth married Laura Hutchinson; Forest Eugene married Clyde Wright.

The first ancestors I found were James and Ann Blain, both born in Ireland. They came to America in late 1700s, first to Pa., then to Va. and in Meigs Co., Ohio by 1813 where James bought 100 acres of land in 1820. Known children were: John (1796-1838) who married Sarah — born in Mass., two children; Robert (1798—) who sold land in 1826 to brother John; Nancy (1800-1876) married Thomas Ashworth; only three of their eight children lived: Matthew (1807-1871) born in Pa. married Susan Nease, five children: Jane (1811-1858) born in Va. married Amon Davis, two sons; and Francis Blain, my great-great-grandfather.

Francis Blain (1813-1895) was a steamboat pilot on the river from Pittsburgh to New Orleans. At the start of the Civil War, the government commandeered all boats. Francis enlisted as Cpl. in 1862, Co. C 9 IV and was wounded in battle of Cloyd's Farm, Va. He was POW, later transferred and mustered out in 1865. He was pensioned the rest of his life. Francis Blain married first Nancy Weaver in 1831 and they had Angeline who married Lafayette Bramble; Alexander married Caroline Smith; Margorann married Bennett Wheaton; Mary Jane married William Sayre; Victoria married George Bell; Sarah Frances married first John Wheaton, married second Rudolph Staats; James married Nancy Staats. All lived in Jackson County except the Brambles who went to Milan, Mo. 1887 and Victoria Bell who stayed in Meigs Co., Ohio.

Nancy (Weaver) Blain died 1849 and Francis married second Sarah Sayre. Sarah died 1855 leaving one son, Francis A., who married Lorenia Coleman. Lorenia died soon after birth of son, Frank Nelson Blain, who was raised by his grandparents. Francis A. Blain then went to Mo. with his sister's family and married second Sarah Harris there.

Francis Blain married third Cassander Cheuvront and they had Matthew who married Amanda Gates and Amos Newberry, both of Portland, Ohio.

My great-grandfather, Alexander Blaine (1834-1898), married Caroline Smith (1834-1899) daughter of Erastus and Aurilla (Follett) Smith. Both were born in Meigs County, Ohio but settled in Jackson Co. before 1860. He was a wharf-boat keeper at Ripley's Landing and for a while had a hardware store at Letart, W. Va. Alexander and Caroline were the first to be buried in Blaine Memorial Cemetery on land given by my grandfather. Other children besides my grandfather were Charles Brazilla who married Desso May Guynn and went to California; Millard Fillmore; Ida May who married Millard Wolfe and lived in Cleveland; Francis Ellsworth married Louisa Eveline Robbins and lived in Mason Co., W. Va.; Mary Victoria married Wm. Barker after she was his nurse. They lived in Washington, D.C.

My grandfather, Grant Blaine, was a farmer and worked for the railroad as foreman of a wreck crew. My grandmother, Sophia (Sleeth) born in Harrisonville, Ohio, the youngest child of Robert and Sophia (Stephens) Bowman Sleeth, was a schoolteacher before marriage. She died before I was born. JAMES BLAKE

James Blake was born in Fayette Co., PA in 1813, the son of Ephraim and Barbary Blake. In about 1833, James married Sarah (Shedrick ?), and from this marriage came George Washington Blake, born Aug. 14, 1834, Mary Ann Blake, June 15, 1836, William Shedrick Blake, Apr. 13, 1837, and James T. Blake, born ca. 1839. Blake and his family first moved to Meigs Co., OH and then to Ravenswood, Jackson Co., WV. Sarah died here on Aug. 31, 1841, and James remarried Mariah Jackson, a relative of General "Stonewall" Jackson, on Feb. 12, 1843. From this union, there were five additional children, Ephraim Wells Blake, Nov. 9, 1845, Sarah Ellen Blake, ca. 1848, Emmanuel Blake, ca. 1850, John Wesley Blake, ca. 1852, and Leander Wells Blake, Mar. 3, 1858. Mariah died on Oct. 30, 1858, and James remarried Mary Morehead in Wirt Co., WV on Mar. 10, 1859.

Soon after arriving in Jackson Co., Blake became involved in business with Ephraim Wells, an early settler in the Ravenswood area. It seems probable that Blake and his sons helped clear the timber from land that Wells had bought from the heirs of George Washington in 1836. In exchange, Wells helped Blake buy a 200-acre farm along Big Sandy Creek from Robert Park, another prominent resident of Ravenswood. James Blake died on Mar. 18, 1872. Mary Morehead Blake remarried Reuben Douglass and lived until May 28, 1899. She is buried alongside of James Blake in the Independence Cemetery, Sandyville, WV.

Of Blake's children, George W. Blake is described in another article, this volume. Mary Ann Blake married Jacob Knight. William Shedrick Blake married Orphaney Alice Coe (see article on John Adams Coe, this volume). After James Blake's death, William and his family moved to Chico, CA and later to San Francisco. William's oldest son, Charles Edward Blake (1864-1936), married Elizabeth Francis Pritchett (1874-1954) in 1899, in Dyersburg, TN, where he installed the first electric works. By 1910, they were back in San Francisco with their three children, Milton Clark Blake, born 1902, Roy George Blake, born 1904, and Vera Ina Blake (1906-1974). Milton married Carol Wilson (1900-1981) in 1928 and they have three sons, Milton Clark Blake, Jr., born 1932, Wilson Blake, born 1934, and Donn Inghram Blake, born 1936. Roy married Mildred Stegmere (1908-1970) and they have two daughters, Patricia Blake Frusch, born 1934, and Marilyn Blake West, born 1936. Vera married Antone Ferrari (1898-1989). They are survived by a daughter, Gloria O'Reilly, born in 1923.

Charles Blake family, Christmas 1932

Of the remaining children of James Blake, James T. Blake served in the 10th Virginia Cavalry during the Civil War and later moved to South America. Ephraim Wells Blake married Sinah McKay and later moved to Meigs Co., OH where he died in 1929. Sarah Ellen Blake married Elishma Beaty who bought James Blake's farm after his death. Emmanuel Blake married Janice Weas. John Wesley Blake went to California about the same time as his brother, William, and Leander Wells Blake moved to Texas in about 1879.

BOARD

The first settler in Reedy District of Roane County was Patrick Board who settled on 300 acres of land granted to him in 1816 by the Commonwealth of Virginia.

Patrick Board was born in 1750 in York County, Pennsylvania. He joined the revolutionary army of the United States in 1775 for a term of one year under Captain Daniel Morgan and made the famous "bee-line" march to Boston that fall. He re-enlisted for a three-year term in 1776 and served in the Maryland-Virginia Rifle Regiment under Colonel Hugh Stephenson until it was absorbed into the newly created 11th Virginia Regiment in 1777 where he was again under the command of Daniel Morgan. Detached from regular regimental duty, he was part of the hand-picked Light Infantry Corps that served under General Anthony Wayne at the "Paoli Massacre" in 1777 and again at the taking of the British-held post at Stony Point on the Hudson River in 1779. He was in combat engagements at Long Island during the defense of New York City in 1776, where he was taken prisoner by the British. He later escaped and rejoined his unit. He saw action at the Battle of Germantown and Chestnut Hill in Pennsylvania in 1777, and he wintered at Valley Forge in 1777-1778. He was honorably discharged at Newport, Rhode Island at the end of his three-year enlistment in 1779.

In the summer of 1781, he was a Berkeley County militiaman where he was drafted for nine months, again under General Morgan. He was sent to Yorktown, Virginia where he was placed under the command of Lafayette and where he witnessed the surrender of Cornwallis.

In October, 1988 a military marker was dedicated to his memory by his descendants. Elements of the West Virginia National Guard, whose lineage traces back to the Morgan Rifle Company, Stephenson's Rifle Regiment, and the 11th Virginia Regiment, provided the color guard.

BOSO

The progenitor of the Boso family in America was a Frenchman, Jean Baptiste Boisseaux (1756-1835). The American name is John Bates Boso. The French way of spelling the name is recorded in the Wood County Courthouse, Parkersburg, West Virginia (then Virginia). These records are now in the library of the West Virginia University, Morgantown, West Virginia.

Jean Boisseaux was born and reared in a small village on the outskirts of Paris, France. Benjamin Franklin secured France as an ally and their help with the American Revolution. Jean Baptiste Boisseaux was a soldier in the French army that came to the aid of the colonies under the leadership of Lafayette. Boisseaux saw service at Brandywine and Germantown and witnessed the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown on October 19, 1781.

Boisseaux was among a few of the French army that remained to become citizens of western Pennsylvania. He married Barbara Frick (1761-1866) in the Pittsburgh area and traveled by boat from Fort Pitt down the Ohio River to Fort Belleville. This was a dangerous trip and while tied up at the mouth of the Little Hocking River, their son Charles was born. They were the parents of six children: John, Joseph, Charles, Jacob, Mary and Wickware. The family settled on the South Fork of Lee Creek back of Belleville.

John Boso (1790-1872) married Jency Coleman (1794—) October 2, 1814 and Julia Anna Flinn (1805-1886) on January 30, 1827. Kinsman Dutton Boso (1840-1914) was among the children of the second marriage, and he married Ellen Katherine Brown (1848-1928) on February 7, 1864. Kinsman served in the Army of the United States of America during the Civil War. Their children included George Nelson Boso (1871-1948) who married Violetta Ferguson (1870-1955) on February 29, 1898.

BOSO

Jean Baptist Boisseaux (1756-1835) came to America in 1776, with General Lafayette to help the colonies in the Revolutionary War. He fought at Brandywine, Germantown, and was present at Yorktown when the war ended.

He married Barbara Frick (1761-1866), a German girl in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, changed his name to John Baptist Boso, and started west to take up land due him for his services in the war. He built a flat boat, and with his wife, and one son, John, left Pittsburgh to come down the Ohio River to Belleville, which was then Virginia in 1792. On this trip his second son, Charles, was born. They lived on a farm below Belleville, in what is now Jackson County, and had a family of six children. Charles and John remained in this area. The others went with their father and mother down the Ohio to Vevay, Indiana, where county records show they lived out their lives.

Charles Boso (1797-1898) married Sarah Anderson (1801-1884) about 1818 and they had seven children. They are buried in the Boso Cemetery, Little Pond Creek, Jackson County, WV. Their children: John I. (married Deborah Mills), Nelson (married Deborah Ingles), Isaiah (married Mary Elizabeth Orem), Eliza (married John Orem), Mary Jane (married James Marion Ferguson), Willard (married, first, Louiza Fancher, second, Mary Bell Ryley) and moved to Indiana, Charles (died as a young adult). Many descendants of Charles and Sarah Boso have lived in Jackson County.

John Boso (1790-1872) married, first, Jensey Coleman on October 2, 1814 and they had five children. John married, second, Julia Anna Flinn (1805-1886) on January 30, 1827 and they had nine children.

Michael Boso, son of John and Jensey (Coleman) Boso, married Lucretia Mills, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Brooks) Mills. They had eleven children, one of them being Alexander Boso who married Laura Elizabeth Moore. Alexander and Laura had six children, one of whom was my father, John Michael Boso. John Michael Boso married Ada Humphrey and lived at Belleville until after the 1913 flood. This flood destroyed much of that part of the country. They moved to Washington, WV when I was five months old.

When my father, John Michael, died in 1960, my mother, Ada Humphrey Boso began collecting information about her Boso relatives, seeking to find if the stories handed down through many generations could be verified. After approximately seven years of work, she turned all her findings over to Ted Boso of Summerville, WV who was compiling information for his book, The Boso Family, which was published in 1977. Mary Magdalene (Sayre) Boswell

She married Charles Benjamin Sayre (March 24, 1890 to March 15, 1952) on February 20, 1920. He was the son of James (1866-1897) and Ellen Childers Sayre (1868-1948). Charles served as a cook in WW I. He and Mary settled in Point Pleasant, WV where a daughter, Juanita, was born on November 23, 1921. They moved to Akron, Ohio, and a son, Charles Jr. was born on March 8, 1926. Charles remained single, served in WW II and died of meningitis on January 29, 1952.

Juanita married John Richard Lutey on December 30, 1940. He was the son of John James Lutey of Penzance, England and Marie Roberts Lutey of London, Ohio. John R. served in the Navy during WW II. Mary shared many memories with her children and grandchildren. She enjoyed telling about when she was teaching school and how one day, during a bad storm, her horse became frightened, broke a saddle strap, and left her in the mud. A neighbor took her in, washed and ironed her clothes, caught her horse and helped her get back to school the next day.

She also talked about how she used to play on the piles of wood shavings from the saw mill when a new home was being built.

She used to recall the huge farm meals for all the thrashers with all of the neighbors helping. Also huge pots of apple butter in the fall. Many hands made light of hard work. Fun times centered around the many small churches in the area. She also recalled the sad times when a loved one was buried in the cemetery at the top of the hill above the farm. Most of the older Boswells are buried in this family cemetery on Brotherton Fork Road near Rockcastle, West Virginia. Submitted by Sheila J. Hall

THOMAS GILBERT BOSWELL

Thomas Gilbert Boswell grew up and raised his family not far from Ripley, W. Va., in Jackson County. He was the son of Gilbert and Mary Good Boswell. He had 10 brothers and sisters:

1. Pernetta married John McCroskey, and they had two children, John Jr. and Emma.
2. Mary Elizabeth married Prophet Staats and they had one daughter, Mary Elizabeth (Molly).
3. Nancy Ann married Lawrence Wolfe.
4. Hanna married Bonapart Harrison.
5. Miriam married Ross Gillispie, and they had four children; Tom, Wade, Carl, and Miriam.
6. Irene married Wilson Haines.
7. William Leftridge married Julia French.
8. Wiley married Martha Jane Adkinson and they had five children; William, Ida Mae, Wiley, Corda and Okey.
9. George A. remained single.
10. Eliza married James Eskew and they had a son, Tom.

Thomas remained a farmer all of his life. He inherited his farm from his father for the promise to care for his mother until her death, and also any sisters that remained unmarried.

Thomas married Susan Parsons, daughter of Nicholas H. and Mary Magdalene (Casto) Parsons, uniting his family with two of the largest families in the area. They lived in a log house, but soon built a new home on the hill above the log house at 13-Mile Creek. He reared his eight children there. The firstborn, Gilbert, died at age one year. The other children were Garfield, Bernice, Mary Magdalene (Sayre), Myrtle Emma (Long), Homer Ray (married Clessie Bibbee and after her death, Lucy Little), Mable Flossie, Floyd Asbury, Miriam (married Ray Sheets).

They raised all their own food, cattle and pork for meat and milk, and cane sugar. They planted many kinds of fruit and berries. They also grew some flax and used it to spin cloth. They had chickens, turkeys and geese from which they saved feathers and made huge feather ticks and pillows. Ice was cut from the creek in the winter and stored in deep underground, straw-insulated bins. The ice was a real treat in warmer weather.

They repaired all of their own shoes, and, if need be, could make them, as their parents had taught them how. Their home was heated with wood and some coal that popped out of the ground near the house. They grew popcorn for treats, and gathered many kinds of nuts and herbs.

I was told by one of the older cousins that the overalls their grandmother made were so stiff you could stand them up in a corner.

There was always work to do, but Sunday was a day of worship, family, and friends. Salesmen would come through once or twice a year selling all kinds of household goods, toiletries, and some clothing. Sometimes they would take a meal or spend the night.

I remember one of the beds in the house as built with one side attached to the wall with ropes stretched both ways making a spring for the huge feather ticks. There was a kind of key at the ends to wind the rope tight so it would not sag. I have been told that this is where the saying, "Sleep tight," comes from. (If you wished someone a good night's sleep, you would say sleep tight meaning tighten your ropes so you won't sag.)

Someone once said memory is a ribbon that stretches from one generation to the next. We have stretched it from farms to cities, from horse travel to rockets. We have seen more inventions in our generation than any time in history. I thank God for my family, past and present, for letting me live at this time in history, in this country, America. I pray the next generation will grab these ribbons and stretch them into the next generation. Submitted by Juanita B. Lutey (Sayre) ter of William Albert Atkinson (Atkisson) (1841-1928) and Elenor Elizabeth Rousbottom (1844-1883). After the death of Wiley she and daughter Corda kept the home and farm in operation until Corda's marriage to W.T.W. Paxton, the owner of a general store in Rockcastle. This store sold every necessity — food, yard goods, nails, patent medicine, harness, lamp oil, etc. Martha did the housekeeping for the Paxtons while Corda served as postmistress at Rockcastle Post Office many years. The post office also had a Star Route.

Martha was born in Maryland but moved to Reedy, Roanoke County when a child, later moving to Jackson County where she made her home until her death. She became a member of Lone Oak Baptist Church at an early age and remained in that congregation throughout her lifetime.

Wiley, Martha, and Okey are buried in the Boswell Cemetery which is on what was the Tommy Boswell farm up Brotherton Fork from Lone Oak Church. Austin and Corda are buried in the Given Cemetery. William is buried at Leon. Ida was buried at East Liverpool, Ohio. Submitted by Charles L. Boswell and Naomi Boswell Gainer

WILLIAM G. BOSWELL

William Gilbert Boswell (1878-1960) was born at Rockcastle. He was the son of Wiley (1852-1915) and Martha Jane Atkinson Boswell (1860-1936). (For the ancestors of W.G. Boswell see Wiley A. Boswell.)

Willie attended Rockcastle School and Ripley Normal School.

He was the brother of Wiley Austin Boswell, who was a life-long resident of Given; Ida Staats who lived in East Liverpool, Ohio after her marriage to Millard Staats; Okey Boswell (1881-1886); Corda Ethel Boswell Paxton Koontz lived in Rockcastle after her marriage to Waitman T.W. Paxton, owner of a general store. Corda was post mistress at Rockcastle for many years. After the death of Paxton she married Charles Koontz and made their home on First Street, Ripley.

Willie married Rosa Edith Carney (1886-1970) in 1905. (For Rosa's ancestors see Alexander C. Carney.) Willie met Rosa when Alexander Carney hired him to turn his two-story house around which was facing Parchment Creek near Given so it would face the road. This was done by jacking up the house and putting it on logs, using horses for power.

Willie and Rosa went to housekeeping in Given before he built the house on the hill behind the then Given United Brethren Church for his family. They lived in Given until the fall of 1915 when they moved their family and household goods to Leon, Route 1, by wagon, buggy, and drove the livestock. The new farm was grown up in timber which had to be cleared before farming could take place. Their family, leaving Jackson County, consisted of Ethel, Howard, Naomi, Odessa — each born in Given. Duard was born in Leon in 1918 during the flu epidemic. He was delivered by Sarah Dunham, midwife, because Dr. B.F. Sommer was taking care of flu patients. Luella and Charles Leonard completed the family.

Willie was a life-long farmer, also mail carrier at Given and did some carpenter work. He was a member of the Leon Baptist Church serving as deacon 36 years and men's Bible teacher. He was a member of the Leon Odd Fellows and K of P Lodges.

Rosa belonged to the Leon Baptist Church where she served as young people's teacher many years. A charter member of the following: Leon Baptist Ladies Aid, Homemakers Club and Leon Temple Pythian Sisters.

The family visited the grandparents in Jackson County, traveling about 18 miles in a horse-drawn hack about once a year. It was a thrill for the children when Willie made them hickory whistles to blow along the way. A picnic lunch was carried along, also feed for the horses. It was an all-day trip.

The children's friends were always welcome in the home. Molasses making in the fall was a popular time — eating skimmings on a piece of canestock dipped in the evaporator. Wheat threshing was a big event when the farmers and womenfolk helped each other.

BOURGEOIS PART I

In 1821 a son Leon was born to Marie Madeleine Hue and Jean Amand Bourgeois. In 1851, the recently widowed Leon left his estate outside Paris and his young sons and emigrated to America. The sons left in France were raised by an aunt and one later became Prime Minister of France and won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1920.

Leon came to Jackson County and married there in 1857 to Catherine Sellers, daughter of George and Nancy Sellers. There were at least two children born of this union. The marriage ended and Leon went to Illinois, leaving one daughter to be raised by an aunt.

In Bond County, Illinois, Leon married Rhoda Catherine Jones, who died of brain congestion in 1879. There were two sons born to them, Pollard "Pollite" born in 1871 and another, George Alexander, who was younger. Leon brought his sons to Jackson County after their mother died. Leon married a Malinda Johnson on October 5, 1892.

Pollard married Mary Francis Lewis, daughter of George Lewis in 1893. They settled in Meigs County, Ohio where their first son, William Henry, was born October 18, 1894. Their second son, Cyrus Nathan, was born in West Virginia, May 1897, and their third, George Leon, was born April 1899. Their oldest daughter, Della E., was born in 1901. The fourth son, Robert B., was born February 28, 1903 and the last daughter, Susan Catherine, was born in 1906.

In 1901, George Alexander was killed by a falling tree in the Trace Fork area. He was engaged to Hettie Parsons who later died of tuberculosis. Both are buried at Mt. Pisgah Cemetery on Comet

Pleasie's sister Ferrol's son William C. Balser Jr., who many will remember from the Feed Store, lived with them for many years. William Wilmer Keebaugh lived with them from age seventeen until he went into the service during WW II, at twenty. Sandra Jo Board was taken into their home at a few years of age, growing to adulthood there. She now resides in Tennessee. William died November 8, 1969. STANSBERRY JR. AND DOLLIE (COLLINS) BOWER

Stansberry (1873-1948) was born in the Lowdell Community of Wood County, son of David and Janette (Price) Bower. He was married to Dollie Rosetta Collins (1876-1967) on March 20, 1900. Dollie was born near the Wood/Wirt County line, daughter of John and Lydia Martha (Baumgarner) Collins.

After their marriage, they lived for about two years in the Lowdell Community, then moving to Parkersburg for a short time. About 1904 they moved to what they called "Nicholson Hollow" in Jackson County. A short time later they moved to a house on Jaraires Run near the old Providence Church and School. Approximately 1924 the family moved on up Jaraires Run to another big old farmhouse. They continued to live there until 1948 when Stansberry died. Dollie and Stansberry had eight children, seven of whom lived to adulthood. Dollie was the neighborhood nurse/midwife (using her ingenuity, home remedies and good old common sense), a farmer's wife and helped to run a hotel/boarding house combination at Sandyville for many years. Stansberry was a carpenter and woodworker, farmer and beekeeper.

Their children were as follows: Harold Cecil (1900-1956) married Alice Alva Balderson (1908-1983); Alma Burnice (1902-1986) married Raymond Nelson Thomas (1902-1988);

Lawrence Gilbert (1904-1905); William Everett (1906-1976) married Arah Elizabeth Culver (1908-); Benjamin David (1910-1975) married Lydia Ann Bonnett (1916-); Velma Leland (1913-1985); Virginia Elizabeth (1915-1961) married Romeo Garrison (unknown); Lucy Katherine (1918-1982) married first, David William Walter (1896-1966) and second, Arthur Orville Adams (1913-1982). After raising seven children of their own they also assisted in raising some of their grandchildren. When their youngest daughter Lucy's first husband deserted Lucy and her baby daughter, Beatrice, Dollie and Stansberry were right there giving support to the two of them. Dollie and Stansberry cared for Beatrice while Lucy worked at the Viscose in Parkersburg to support herself and Bea. Dollie and Stansberry loved and supported all their children and grandchildren.

Stansberry was a great practical joker and loved to get a good joke on anyone he could. He was also active in his church, singing in the choir until he had his first heart attack at age 42. He loved to hold and rock his grandchildren and sing to them in his beautiful baritone voice. Dollie was also active in her church, singing in the choir, making use of her lovely soprano voice. One daughter, Lucy, and one granddaughter, Beatrice, had singing voices much like Dollie's.

Stansberry and Dollie Bower

After Stansberry's death in July 1948, Dollie sold the farm equipment, household goods, farm animals and Stansberry's beloved stands of bees. She kept the farm until the spring of 1949, when she then sold it to her youngest daughter Lucy and her husband Arthur.

After the sale of the farm, Dollie alternated living with her children until her death in 1967. She was buried on what would have been her 67th wedding anniversary. Dollie and Stansberry are buried in the Independence Cemetery on Copper Fork near Sandyville, Jackson County, West Virginia.

The last surviving member of this immediate family, Alma Burnice Bower Thomas, died in 1986 and is also interred in the Independence Cemetery. All but one of Stansberry's and Dollie's children are interred there. Submitted by Beatrice Bower Jones, granddaughter, and Dessie (Thomas) Romine

JABEL BOWLES

In the year 1817 a group of people left their homes in Franklin County, Virginia because of their dislike of negro slavery and settled at Flat Rock, Mason County, now West Virginia. After living there a year, Jabel Bowles, Gilbert Boswell and their families and Jephtha Mason journeyed to Parchment Creek, where they built and established homes. They purchased their land from one John Cantrell, who had secured patents for a large tract on Parchment Creek and Cox's Fork which was known as the Cantrell Survey.

Jabel Bowles' wife was Nancy Mason. Gilbert Boswell's wife was Elizabeth Mason, both being sisters of Jephtha Mason. Jephtha was single when he came here but he later married Rachel Lewis of Mason County. Jabel Bowles was born in 1789, the son of John and Frances Bolling Bowles. His wife Nancy was the oldest daughter of Nathan and Elizabeth Mason.

Jabel built his cabin on a low ridge a few hundred yards below the site of the present Pleasant Hill Church. One advantage of this location was a fine spring of water nearby. Jephtha Mason built his cabin about a mile down the creek from Jabel's. Gilbert Boswell built his at the present site of the village of Given. Soon other families such as Carney, Simmons, Stout, Casto, Kessel and Parsons came to build their homes in the community.

When these first settlers came to Parchment, the first settlement in what is now Jackson County (Cottageville) was less than twenty-five years old. The town of Ripley had not been laid out. There were no roads, only trails. Though the danger from hostile Indians was past, these were pioneers in the true sense. They had to clear the forests and build their log cabins.

When the settlers first came they held worship services in their various homes. In the year 1844, Jabel Bowles, assisted by Rev. Sam Black, organized a class of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the Bowles homes. Soon thereafter Jabel was the leader in building a log church near his home. This was known as the Bowles Church and soon came to be used as a school house as well. Old records state that Jabel Bowles was licensed to preach in 1860. This license was renewed each year until his death in 1875 at the ripe old age of 86. Some descendants of Jabel who became ministers are Martin V. Bowles, Alvin Bowles, Joseph S. Bowles, Charles Bowles, John W. Crites and J. Brooks Kessel.

Jabel and Nancy Bowles had at least seven children. Ona, William, and Leftridge never married. Martin went to Indiana. The others lived in Jackson County and left numerous descendants.

1. Francis married Job Kessel and lived a short distance up the valley from Jabel. They had nine children.

2. Elizabeth married Martin Crites and lived at Fairplain. They had twelve children.

3. Mason married Sarah Stout and lived a short distance down the valley from his parents. They had eleven children. Mason was a self-trained doctor of medicine and also had a license to celebrate the rites of matrimony. The farm where Mason Bowles lived is still owned by one of his descendants. Submitted by James C. Kessel

CHARLEY BOYCE

Charley Boyce was born Dec. 12, 1889, at Maul Camp, in Grant District, of Jackson County, son of James Henry and Lillian (Shutts) Boyce. He attended the Era Bell School. He met his future wife while working at a sawmill on McGraw Run. Using a team of horses, he had to haul water from the creek, near her home, to the sawmill for use in the steam engines. He married Mary "Etta" Thompson in 1914. She was born Oct. 3, 1891, at McGraw Run, Jackson County, daughter of Thomas "Lindsey" and Cemilda (Sill) Thompson. Etta attended the McGraw School. Charley went to Akron, Ohio, and worked about a year at the Goodyear Rubber Factory, making tires, then returned to Jackson County.

The family built a house on the upper part of his father's farm, on Maul Camp, about 1915. The farm provided most of the food for the family. The garden produce was either canned, pickled or dried. Hogs provided most of the meat for the family. The meat was either cured or canned. Chickens were also raised for meat as well as for eggs. Cows were milked to provide milk, butter and cottage cheese. Apples, peaches, cherries, grapes and berries were also raised on the farm. Before the installation of electricity in the early 1940s, the canning of meat and some vegetables was done outside in a large galvanized kettle over an open fire. Kerosene lamps and lanterns were used for lighting before that time.

Charley, with the help of his family, raised field corn, tobacco, wheat and oats. A crew of hired men would come at harvest time to thresh the oats and wheat. This was a lot of work for the entire family, since the threshers had to be fed all their meals and boarded over night. The straw was hauled in from the field and used as bedding for the sheep, cows and horses. Straw was also used to stuff the mattresses for the children. Part of the field corn was ground and used in cornbread, corncakes and mush. Horses were used to pull the farm equipment until a tractor was purchased in the late 1940s.

The children had to walk about two miles to attend grade school at Era Bell and Beech Grove. They also had to walk about the same distance to board the bus going to Gilmore High School. Some of the children attended the Warden Chapel Church at Medina when they were small. After the children were a little older, Etta would walk with them to the Beech Grove Church. Later, Charley and Etta became members of the Sandyville Church of Christ.

Charley died Apr. 15, 1980 and Etta died Feb. 26, 1978. They are buried in the Limestone Cemetery in Wood County, WV. They had ten children.

1. Earl (1914) married Ethel Seals and lives at the head of McGraw Run in Grant District. Their child: Dewain.

2. Opal (1916) married Delbert Miihlbach and lives at Mineral Wells, WV. Their children: Dale and Robert.

BROTHERTON

The Brotherton family is descended from the Norman English, that arrived in England during the Norman conquest in the 11th century. The first members of the family to use the name Brotherton were the descendants of Thomas of Brotherton, born in 1300 A.D., the son of Edward I of England and his second wife Marguerite, daughter of Philip III of France.

Members of our family have no record showing when the first Brotherton arrived in America. Information passed down by word of mouth indicates that members of the Brotherton family arrived early in the colonial days of Virginia.

The first member of the family to reside in Jackson County was John William Brotherton, who was born August 30, 1827, in Virginia (no reliable record of the county or father and mother). He was married to Maria Scott Dorsey, December 14, 1848 in Jefferson County, Virginia. Maria Scott Dorsey was the daughter of James W. Dorsey, and Louisa T. Heskitt, born July 3, 1829 in Jefferson County, Virginia. John and Maria moved to Giles County, Virginia prior to the birth of their first son, James Thomas, on February 11, 1852. Two additional children were born in Giles County,

John William and Maria (Dorsey) Brotherton

Virginia. They were John William Jr., September 10, 1854 and Charles Walker, December 30, 1856.

During the summer of 1858 John William moved his family to Jackson County in what is now West Virginia, where he had acquired a large tract of land on the head of Thirteen Mile Creek, near the settlement of Rockcastle. They arrived early enough to build a small cabin which provided shelter the first winter and until a house was completed the following year. The house they built during their second year in Jackson County is still in use as a dwelling today. It is currently the home of direct descendants of the builder.

After coming to Jackson County there were four additional children born to John and Maria. They were Elizabeth Ann, July 14, 1859, Lee White, March 20, 1862, Henry Franklin, August 3, 1866 and Robert Edgar, June 26, 1870.

In addition to establishing a large farm in Jackson County, John William was a practicing veterinarian and provided veterinary services for other farmers in Jackson, Putnam and Mason counties.

James Thomas was married to Sarah Elizabeth Smith on Dec. 19, 1872. Sarah died one year later, December 18, 1873. He was again married on August 8, 1875 to Regina M. Smith, the daughter of Joab Smith and Sarah Ann (Lewis) Smith. James and Regina were the parents of four sons and two daughters. His primary occupation was farming. He initially built a home on a portion of land he obtained from his father. All of his children were born at that location. On September 23, 1887 he was appointed postmaster for the Hogg Post Office, which was located at the junction of Jim Ridge and Brotherton Ridge, in southwestern Jackson County. On January 27, 1887, James and Regina purchased a small tract of farm land on Fisher Ridge, in the southern part of Jackson County, and on October 29, 1901 they purchased an additional 87½ acres that adjoined their initial purchase. During the year 1901 they moved their family from Thirteen Mile Creek to Fisher Ridge, where he resided until shortly before his death. His address on Fisher Ridge was Mt. Tell, West Virginia, where he served for several years as assistant and temporary postmaster. James served as a member of a committee of local citizens to establish a church for the community. The committee met on January 25, 1908 and pledged sufficient money to build a Methodist Church, by the public road where the common property line of P.S. Fisher and J.T. Brotherton joined the public road. From this action the Pleasant View Methodist Church was built, and is in use today, having been rebuilt at the same location, continues to serve the community. On October 19, 1919 James deeded a plot of land adjoining the church lot, containing 55 sq. rods, to the Methodist Conference as a public cemetery. Regina M. Brotherton passed away in the spring of 1919 and is buried in the cemetery at Pleasant View Church. James Thomas Brotherton died November 11, 1937 and was buried beside his wife on Fisher Ridge in southern Jackson County.

John William Jr. was married to Sidney Ann Foglesong, on May 31, 1877. She was the daughter of William H. Foglesong and Mary (Casto) Foglesong. John and Ann were the parents of three sons and four daughters. One of the daughters died as an infant. His primary occupation was farming. He built his home on land obtained from his father and resided there throughout his lifetime. His wife Ann died the year 1942 and John died on April 6, 1949. They are buried in the Brotherton Cemetery on Thirteen Mile Creek, in Jackson County.

Charles Walker died at the age of 14 years, on March 18, 1871. He is buried in the Brotherton Cemetery.

Elizabeth Ann was married to Samuel A. Waugh, on September 30, 1875. They were the parents of five sons and seven daughters. They established a home in the village of Rockcastle, Jackson County, West Virginia, where they continued to reside until their deaths. Samuel died on October 28, 1932 and Elizabeth on August 11, 1948.

Lee White was married to Nancy Alice Foglesong, on October 6, 1881, the daughter of William H. Foglesong and Mary (Casto) Foglesong. Nancy Alice was born April 5, 1861. Lee's primary occupation was farming. He established his home on a portion of his father's land and resided in that location until his death on August 24, 1941. His wife Alice died August 31, 1942. Both Lee and Alice are buried in the Fairview Church Cemetery, Given, WV.

Henry Franklin was married to Laura E. Gardner on April 2, 1899, the daughter of George F. Gardner and Mary C. (Dudding) Gardner. Laura was born January 1, 1877. Franklin's primary occupation was farming on land obtained from his father. He resided in the Brotherton family home until his death June 1, 1958. Frank and Laura were the parents of three sons and one daughter. Laura died November 12, 1937. Frank and Laura are both buried in the family cemetery.

He died in Military Camp, of pneumonia, on Oct. 27, 1861, and is buried at White Sulphur Springs Military Cemetery. She died (2-12-1898) her age being 81 years, 8 months and 24 days. She survived him by 37 years. Joab Smith was drafted into the Confederate Army by the state of Virginia, and thought he had to go. He died just a few days after his forty-ninth birthday. They were the parents of eleven children, eight of whom survived at the time of her death. The children were Andrew Lewis, Regina Moriah, George Gordon Byron, Jane, a teacher died young, Fanny was drowned when a small child, Agnes also died young, Victoria Clementine married a Mr. Wolfe. They were parents of Fred Wolfe, who was editor of the Mountaineer, a county newspaper, for many years. Augusta Anna Florence married Will Barnett, and they traveled to Oregon, by covered wagon and settled there when young. Mary Ellen, also a teacher, died in a mental hospital. Eugene B. youngest son, and Helen Ashley Lee, youngest daughter, who married Be-At Frey. Joab was called from Ohio, by the parents of the Angerona community, to be their school master, and teach their children, which he did for several years. Sarah Ann Lewis was the daughter of Col. Andrew Lewis, who was a grandson of General Andrew Lewis, and her mother was Virginia Boswell, also from Virginia. Joab Smith owned slaves, three or four, and he gave them their freedom before leaving to join the Confederate forces. All stayed with his wife and children for several years.

After Joab went away to war, and died there, his sons cut and hewed logs and built a home for their mother, and themselves on Foster Ridge. Grandma Smith lived there until her death at 81 years. Her son Andrew Lewis Smith stayed with her as long as she lived. A hutch cabinet, hand-made, probably by the same sons, and put together with square nails, is now in the care of Sarah's great-granddaughter, Valeria Powers, who with the help of her husband, Hiram, "rescued" it from the old house, a few years ago. It was restored, and given a new finish, and now holds family heirlooms, and antique dishes. Joab was one of six brothers, two of which served in the Union Army, two in the Confederate forces, and two went West and took no part in either side of the war. George Washington Smith was a brother that served in the Union Army, and has descendants in Jackson County today. Name of other brothers have been lost over the years. CHARLES L. BROWN

Charles L. Brown, youngest son of Judge Robert S. and Anna H. (Wells) Brown, was born in Elizabeth, Wirt County, Virginia, June 20, 1859. He was graduated from Bethany College on his nineteenth birthday, June 20, 1878. On November 5, 1879 he represented the alumni of the Neotrophian Society of that college at the anniversary celebration. After reading law for a year in his father's office, Mr. Brown attended law lectures at the University of Virginia, and was admitted to the bar, February 26, 1880, and entered practice in Jackson and adjoining counties, and the West Virginia supreme court of appeals.

A Democrat in politics, in August 1882, he was nominated a candidate for the West Virginia house of delegates by his party's convention of Jackson County, and at the October election defeated the Republican candidate, running ahead of his ticket, and receiving more votes than any candidate in the county at that election. In the ensuing session he served as chairman of the committee on federal relations, and as a member of the committees on the judiciary, of counties, and of municipal corporations, his being called to such important duties being eloquent attestation of his ability, such as is rarely bestowed by legislative assemblies upon one so young (then only twenty-three years of age), and during his first experience among lawmakers. The house journal with its record of his bills introduced and enacted into laws, as well as his extensive committee work, show that this confidence was in no way misplaced. In 1884 he was elected state senator and served four years with usefulness and distinction. Mr. Brown was a member of Ravenswood Lodge, No. 15, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Mr. Brown married, November 1883, Frances Tarr daughter of Hon. Cambell Tarr, a distinguished citizen of Brook county and the first Treasurer of West Virginia (18--1864). Charles and Frances had a daughter, Helen Margaret who married Frederick Hanson Fowler of Baltimore, Maryland on October 10, 1906. Their daughter, Elizabeth was the fifth generation to live in the family home which was built by her great-great-grandfather Ephriam Wells in 1848. The home is near Ravenswood, Jackson County, WV and is on part of the General Washington Lands which Mr. Wells bought in 1835.

Frances Tarr Brown (Mrs. Charles L.) was born March 25, 1859 and died November 29, 1931. Charles L. died October 2, 1937. Submitted by Elizabeth A. Fowler

JUDGE ROBERT S. BROWN

It was in Virginia that Joseph Brown, son of William Brown, was born in 1792. He married Rachel Hood, a native of Baltimore county, Maryland, and like his father chose the occupation of farming, and lived a long, honorable and useful life. He is buried beside his wife of 60 years. They reared and educated a family of nine sons and one daughter, all of whom they lived to see happily married and settled in life, except for their third son, James Marvel Brown, who died in the war with Mexico in 1847.

Judge Robert S. Brown, son of Joseph Brown, was born April 6, 1828. He was brought up on the farm. He attended such schools as the country then afforded; he was fond of reading and devoted any leisure time to reading such books as his father's ample library afforded. He entered Bethany College, Brooke County, Virginia, in 1845; he chose the profession of law, and commenced its practice at Elizabeth, Wirt County, Virginia, in April 1849. He soon secured a liberal and lucrative practice; was elected prosecuting attorney and re-elected to that office both in Wirt and Roane counties until he went on the bench as judge of the circuit.

Prior to the war, like his ancestors, he was a Democrat. But when Mr. Lincoln was elected, he at once declared his fixed purpose to support the administration of the president constitutionally elected. He was an early and active advocate and liberal promoter of the counter revolution set on foot by the loyalists of Western Virginia at Wheeling, which resulted in the formation of the new state of West Virginia, and it is confidently believed and asserted that no man contributed more time, talents or means to achieve that happy result for the people of his state than did Robert S. Brown.

In 1864 Mr. Brown was chosen elector for the third congressional district of his state, and cast his vote for the re-election of President Lincoln. In May, 1868, he sat as a delegate in the Chicago convention, served on the committee on resolutions that prepared the party platform on which General Grant was nominated, and as elector-at-large, with Hon. A. W. Campbell, of Wheeling, canvassed and carried his state for the Republican ticket.

On January 1, 1869, he went on the bench as judge of the tenth judicial circuit of WV, composed of the counties of Jackson, Roane, Calhoun and Gilmer. He brought to the judicial office the same intelligent zeal and industry that had always characterized his conduct of other affairs, and was universally regarded as a most able, learned and impartial judge.

Retiring from the judiciary, in 1878 Judge Brown was elected to the state senate by an overwhelming majority, and served therein four years. His standing may be inferred from the following editorial of January 1879:

"Judge Brown is a man of strong character, and as a born leader has spent a life of public service; he stands confessedly forward in the body of which he is now a member. His character and ability mark him out as a prominent man. He is upon many of the important committees, and his dictum is always listened to with interest. He has retired from active practice of law, and devotes his time when at home to his large property interests: his home farm at Ravenswood is one of the finest on the Ohio River."

The Odd Fellows' Grand Lodge of West Virginia was organized following the war; Judge Brown joined Ravenswood Lodge, No. 15, in 1865; he passed its several chairs, and in 1877 represented it in the State Grand Lodge.

He was a prominent member of the Odd Fellows' Lodges in West Virginia. He joined Ravenswood Lodge No. 15, in 1865, after passing its several chairs he was elected representative to the State Grand Lodge in 1877 and the Sovereign Grand Lodge in 1883.

He was united in marriage, October 2, 1849, with Anna H. Wells, eldest daughter of Ephraim Wells, a prominent and wealthy citizen of Jackson County. In 1866 Mr. Wells sold his son-in-law the farm and home he had built upon a large tract of land he had bought in 1835 from Dr. Peter (husband of Martha Custis, a devisee of George Washington). This tract adjoins the town of Ravenswood.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown lived in the large brick home Mr. Wells had built and which was completed in 1848. The Browns were the parents of three sons: William J., Ephraim W., and Charles L. Judge Brown died February 16, 1891. Mrs. Brown died November 14, 1896. Submitted by Mary Varner

BROWNELL

The Brownell family, being one of the pioneer families of Jackson County, originated in Warwick and Derbyshire, England.

Thomas Brownell, from whom most of the Brownells in America trace their descent, was born in 1619. He was the son of Sir Edmund Brownell of Coventry, Warwickshire in the reign of Queen Elizabeth (1553-1603). Thomas emigrated to America about 1639 to Portsmouth, RI.

Lewis Brownell, sixth generation of Thomas, 6/30/1771-7/17/1856 and son of Daniel (fifth) was the first to emigrate to Jackson County. He was born in Amsterdam, NY, and later moved to Albany, NY. He married Susan Winegar. Two sons were born to this union, David and Ely (seventh). His son David died as an infant and also his wife.

Ely, second son of Lewis, who later came to Jackson County, was reared by his stepmother, Sally Hoyt. To this union, five children were born; (seventh) Hannah, Sally, Janet, Francis, and George.

Lewis came to Jackson County in 1844. He purchased farmland from Bushrod Washington, a relative of George Washington. The location was known as Ripley Landing, located eight miles south of Ravenswood.

Lewis later moved his family to Jackson County. They cleared the land and a log cabin was built on a beautiful site overlooking the Ohio River.

Janet Brownell married a member of the Douglass Family (a pioneer family of Jackson County) and lived and raised a family on a farm near her parents.

The other four members of the seventh generation moved to other locations, but always returning with their families to Jackson County to visit their parents.

George Brownell was only nine years old when his parents first brought him to the farm. He remained on the farm with his parents, helping his father with all of the farm work. Later in his life he started growing large crops of potatoes and later became a potato broker. He shipped them by boat from Ripley Landing and later via the B & O Railroad which he and his father gave land for the right of way.

George married Susan Hoyt from South Carolina. To this union six children were born (eighth); Max Llewellyn, Lewis Hoyt, Elfie, Nellie, Lora Alice and Mertie.

George and Susan built a ten-room home on the site where the log cabin originally stood. The old homestead will be remembered by many Jackson County residents. Five generations lived in the house and the sixth visited and stayed in the home many times. It was a landmark in Jackson County for nearly one hundred years.

George and Susan Brownell moved into the house with their family from a smaller house on the farm. George's mother, Sally (now a widow) moved into the home at the same time. Sally was known to family and friends as a good seamstress and quilt maker. In later years the quilts were entered into the county fair at the Evans Fairgrounds. Several blue ribbons were won with Grandma Sally's quilts. She continued to sew until the time of her death at age 90.

Brownell family home 1868

Her sewing table, spinning wheel, rocking chair, and eyeglasses are in the home of her descendants who now live in Texas.

Mertie, Elfie and Nellie, daughters of George, died at a young age. They were buried along with their grandfather, Lewis, in the Brownell Cemetery located on the farm. Their grandmother, Sally, was also buried later at the same location. The cemetery is no longer on the land due to the land being cleared for a subdivision. The remains of the eight bodies were moved to the Cottageville Cemetery where George Brownell and wife Susan are buried.

Lora Brownell, the only living daughter of George, married George Bradford and moved to Tulsa, OK.

Lewis (Lew), youngest son of George married Dora Barnett. To this union, three children were born (ninth); Walton, Harry and Hazel. This Brownell family lived in a tenant house on the farm before buying a farm and home two miles from the Brownell farm.

Hazel married Ray Carrier and moved to Detroit, Michigan. She had one son.

Walton and Harry married and they each had four children. Since there are male children in this family, hopefully the Brownell name will be continued.

Lewis (Lew) carried the mail on horseback out of the Millwood Post Office for a number of years. Lena Radcliff was the postmistress.

Lewis (Lew) spent much of his life in Jackson County before moving to Kanauga, Ohio where he lived until his death.

Max, the eldest son of George and Susan, married Mary Elizabeth Sommers, daughter of Wilhelm and Catherine Rosa Sommers (German extraction). Mary was a school teacher, taught in a one room Jackson County School. Since she had quite a distance to travel, she rode a horse using a side saddle which still remains in the family as well as her hand held school bell.

Max was born and reared on the farm and lived his entire 80 years of life there. His farm and homestead were greatly cherished by him. He and wife Mary took great pride in their farm and home for 46 years.

At an early age he became a member of the United Brethren Church. He and his mother Susan attended church services together much of the time. At one time church services were held by a Pastor Martin in a school which was located on the farm. After a church was built at Cottageville, Max and his mother were regular members traveling six miles to and from the church by horse and buggy. He also attended church at Pleasant View and Millwood. He followed a daily religious program in his home after his health would not permit him to attend church. He will always be remembered by many Jackson County residents as a devout Christian.

Max and Mary had two children (ninth); Harold Leonard and Phyllis Wendelen.

After the death of his mother Susan, Max moved his wife and baby son from one of the tenant farm houses into the Brownell homestead to care for his father, George, whose health was failing. His father continued to live for five more years in the house that he had built.

Phyllis was born in the home with Dr. Harenkohl of Mt. Alto as the attending physician. This doctor delivered many babies in Jackson County during his many years of practice. He doctored five generations of the Brownell family and at a later date treated a member of the sixth generation for a minor illness.

Phyllis attended elementary school at Ripley Landing School and commuted to Ravenswood on the B & O train for four years. She graduated as salutatorian of her class. She continued her education at Marshall College. After graduation she taught at different high schools, two of which were in Jackson County: Ripley and Sandyville.

She married Raymond (Pete) Bell, a civil engineer from Berryville, VA. The wedding took place on the spacious front porch of the Brownell home, the date July 15, 1942 which was the 46th anniversary of her parents, Max and Mary. Her father was deceased at this time. Pete and Phyllis were married five years. They were living at Lexington, KY at the time of his death due to a car accident. Phyllis continued to live there and attended the University of Kentucky where she received her masters degree. Later she taught English at Marietta College, Marietta, Ohio.

She met Donald Drumm of Marietta who was the athletic director at the college. They were married and built a home in Marietta. Her mother, Mary, died a month prior to their marriage at the home of her granddaughter, who at this time lived in Parkersburg with her husband and three children.

The Jackson County farm and homestead continued to be a part of her life since she was co-owner with her brother Harold, being the fourth generation to own the farm.

Harold spent most of his life on the farm and was in the horse and cattle business. He attended school at Ripley Landing and Ravenswood, served in World War II and was a member of the American Legion. He was a substitute mail carrier transporting the mail some of the time with a horse and sulky. He was instrumental in developing a portion of the farm into a subdivision, the first road for the development being called Brownell Lane. A number of beautiful homes have been built in this subdivision in the past several years.

Harold married Frances Margrete McKown, daughter of Grover and Bessie Bowles McKown and granddaughter of Fannie Bowles, all of Ripley. Both the McKown and Bowles are pioneer families of Jackson County. To this union one daughter was born, Juanita Jean. Mrs. Lucille McKown Rollings, a native of Jackson County, was present at the time of her niece's birth and added the name of Jean to her name. Juanita (tenth) was born in the Brownell homestead where her parents were living after their marriage. Again, Dr. Harenkohl was there to deliver another baby to Jackson County.

Juanita attended school at Ripley Landing and Millwood. She also attended high school at Cottageville her first year by commuting with Dean Brown in a pickup (Dean later lost his life in World War II) and Rhea Donohew who also attended the same school. The next three years Juanita rode the school bus to Ravenswood. After graduation she moved to Pittsburgh, PA to live with her mother, Frances. She worked in an office for the Dravo Corporation and married Robert Cecil Wright, Jr. of Ravenswood, son of Robert Cecil Wright, Sr. and Maggie Livezey Wright, owners and operators of the Ravenswood Ferry for many years (another landmark of Jackson County). After graduation from the University of Pittsburgh Dental School, Cecil, Jr. opened an office for the practice of dentistry in Parkersburg and a part-time office at the home of his parents in Ravenswood.

Cecil and Juanita have three children (eleventh); Nancy Jean Wright Green was a teacher and now is a stewardess for Delta Air Lines. She is married to Jackie Dewitt Green who is an accountant and high school teacher at Mathis, Texas.

Cecelia Ann (Junie) Wright Fojtik, a school office secretary, is married to Felix David Fojtik, a farmer at Tynan, Texas.

Robert Cecil Wright III is in the swimming pool business in Corpus Christi, Texas.

Junie and Felix have two children (twelfth); Tobin David Fojtik, a freshman in college; and (twelfth), Wendelen Ann Fojtik, a junior in high school.

The Wright family moved to Sinton, Texas in 1951 and opened a dental office there. Many trips have been made by family members back to Jackson County to visit family and friends over the years.

The Wright children were the sixth generation to be a part of the Brownell farm.

Juanita Brownell Wright (tenth) was the last generation to own the farm, being in partnership with her Aunt Phyllis (Fee).

At this time the farm house was demolished. The farm land was sold to Adrain and Linda McCoy, where a beautiful home was built by them on a site close to where the Brownell homestead once stood. The subdivision portion was sold to Royal Delano Carney who had previously bought the Carter farm which at one time also belonged to the Brownell family.

(Twelfth) Toby and Wendy Fojtik, Juanita and Cecil's grandchildren, don't remember the old farm home, but they have visited in Jackson County and have been on the land, being the seventh generation to be there.

The Fojtik children are the twelfth generation of Thomas Brownell, previously mentioned in the beginning of the history.

Max, Mary and Harold (Brownnie) Brownell, Phyllis B. Drumm and her first husband, Pete Bell, are all laid to rest in the Ravenswood Cemetery. Submitted by Juanita Brownell Wright and James F. Rollins

ELIAS BUCKALEW

One of the first known ancestors of this name was Peter Buckliou who was the son of William Bucklow (born around 1620) who had emigrated at an early date to America. Another early emigrant of this name was Frederick Buckalew who came to America from Inverness-shire, Scotland in 1715.

Elias Buckalew was the first member of this family to settle in Jackson County. Elias was the son of George Buckalew who was a resident of Harrison County as early as 1811. On January 13, 1837 Elias married Spicy Romine. They lived in Harrison County until 1848. In that year they sold their small farm and Elias took the proceeds from the sale and purchased a large tract of land consisting of some 500 to 750 acres on the waters of Parchment Valley, not far from Ripley. He paid $300.00 for his new home. Elias and Spicy had at least two children and probably more whose names are not known to this writer. They are: James Madison Buckalew (Sept. 4, 1845-Jan. 3, 1935), Jonathan Albert Buckalew (March 1, 1848-May, 1928).

JOSEPH BUMGARNER

In the year 1863, the Union soldiers who were stationed in Wirt and surrounding counties were watching the soldiers of the Confederate Army very closely, who came home on furlough, etc.

Joseph Bumgarner, the oldest son of Jacob II and Nancy Bumgarner, lived on Nestleroad near Lockhart in Jackson County.

He, with his two brothers, Jacob H. and John P., enlisted in the Confederate Army. Joseph's wife died in November 1863. Some of the Union men thought this would be an opportune time to capture him when he came for his wife's funeral. So the night before the funeral, they assembled at his residence to capture him. They searched all through the house for him, even looking under the bed where his wife lay a corpse. Joseph Bumgarner was there that night, dressed in women's clothing but they failed to recognize him. His father and mother were also there that night and when the soldiers left they took his parents' horses with them. Disappointed in not locating Joseph at his home, they decided to go over to the Pisgah Church in Wirt County where Mrs. Bumgarner was to be interred the next day and capture him if he attended the funeral. It was a long journey in those days for a funeral procession from Lockhart on Sandy Creek to Pisgah on Right Reedy Creek. At that time the roads were not very good. Most of the people rode horse back. Jacob and his wife had to procure other horses to make the trip. When they arrived at the home of Joseph's father, which was just above the Pisgah church, the Union soldiers were already there. They had tied several horses to the posts of the front porch of the Bumgarner home. They had procured fodder from a nearby field and fed it to their horses on the front porch. They had brought the horses of Mr. and Mrs. Bumgarner back over on Reedy to his home and left them there but kept his saddle which they probably made use of later in the Army. Joseph Bumgarner was not at the funeral but he was on a nearby hill where he had a view of the church and the cemetery and saw the last rites of his companion as she was lowered to her final resting place to await Resurrection Day. The Union soldiers never captured Joseph Bumgarner. Submitted by John Watson Bumgarner Jr

In 1870 the family moved to the Simpson area, Jackson Co., WV.

Obituary for William Burdette, which was composed by a friend: "It has become my sad duty to announce the death of a former citizen of Monroe Co., Wm. Burdette, who died Nov. 30, 1904, at Lowdell, WV; born in Flushing, Ohio, in 1817, served his apprenticeship until his eighteenth year, moved to Monroe Co., married Miss Mary Johnston of near Woodsfield in 1842, and worked his trade until the Civil War, when he enlisted with 92 Reg. O.V.I., Captain Milton Patton. He served until close of war, receiving an honorable discharge and resuming his trade at Newcastle, after which he moved to West Virginia where his wife departed to the higher life ten years ago leaving him alone with an afflicted daughter. Eight years ago he married Miss Hannah McWilliams, a worthy help-mate who kindly waited on him until the closing scene. Mr. Burdette was in many ways a remarkable man with great mental as well as physical powers. He was a man of pronounced opinion with the courage of his conviction, an advocate of good, an enemy of evil, an uncompromising enemy of liquor traffic, a friend of the weak and oppressed against the strong, was an affectionate husband, a kind father, obliging neighbor and loyal citizen. He was interred in Simpson Chapel Cemetery, the funeral service was conducted by Rev. H. K. Riffe, of the M. E. church of which the deceased was a substantial pillar for more than sixty years. Before the final scene he spoke in bright anticipation of the eternal union with those who had gone before and urged the following in the same path those who still remain. After the conclusion of the church service the Comrades of R. B. Hayes, Post No. 20, G. A. R. conveyed the casket to the grave and interred it according to ritual. A solemn and impressive scene in presence of his children, grandchildren, and a concourse of people who assembled to pay their last tribute of respect to a worthy man, realizing that a vacancy has been made that can never be filled."

My father Lawrence "Dick" Burke was a buyer of all kinds of livestock, cattle, wool, and tobacco. He bought from the farmers all around the area. The cattle and livestock were gathered at Lockhart and Dad hired cowboys to drive the cattle to Ravenswood, West Virginia, where they were shipped to Cincinnati, Ohio or Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

The tobacco was brought to the "tobacco barn" on our farm, where women were hired to sort the tobacco leaves to size and color. Then the tobacco was tied in hands as they were called. The tying room was behind the tobacco barn and was large enough to have at least 20 women working. Some of the women acquired the taste of tobacco by chewing on a twig of tobacco while they worked, leading them to "dip snuff". After the tobacco was tied in hands, it was put in great wooden hogsheads and shipped to the tobacco market in Kentucky. My dad died when he was 58. My mother lived to the age of 88.

My grandfather was a Free and Accepted Mason. He belonged to the Ashton Lodge #12 in Ravenswood, West Virginia. His grandsons Robert, Clifford, Buhl, Koyle, and great-grandsons Jeffrey, Lawrence, and Philmore also are Masons of various degrees.

BUSH

The people in the upper Rhine River Valley in Germany had suffered long wars, heavy taxation and religious persecution. They listened eagerly to William Penn's invitation to come to Pennsylvania. There they could have freedom and perhaps they could get some of the rich farmland Penn's agents described. It would be a long hard trip, and probably would take all their money.

The family we will follow decided to come. They arrived in Philadelphia on the ship Hope on August 28, 1733. The father signed the loyalty oath to the new government with his full name Johann Michael Busch. His wife was Eva and the children were: George Adam, Lewis, Mary Margaret and John. The spelling was changed to Bush after a short time.

We will follow our direct line from the oldest son, George Adam who was 13 upon arrival in Philadelphia.

After some time in Philadelphia the family moved to the Potomac River area in Virginia where they bought land on the South Branch of the river. George Adam had married Susannah and in 1754 his son Adam was born.

In a few years the family moved westward to the Buckhannon valley. Adam lived in this area for several years. He married Margaret Hagle at Buckhannon Fort about 1777.

Adam volunteered in the American Revolution in defense of the frontier. He also served Colonel George Rogers Clark in his expedition.

Adam and Margaret had six children, one of whom was our ancestor, Paulser Bush. By the time Paulser was born in 1790, Adam had moved westward again to Cedar Creek in the present Gilmer County. Paulser grew up here and married Elizabeth Heckert. He lived in this area until his death in 1869.

Paulser's son Peter was born in Gilmer County in 1824, where they lived near Freeman's Creek. He married Sarah Norman and their first child was our grandfather, James Emmett Bush. He was born in 1840 in Gilmer County, but moved with the family to Grass Lick now in Jackson County. He left Grass Lick to join the Virginia Cavalry of the Confederate Army in 1862. After his return from the Civil War, he married Virginia Simons in 1867. Their home was near Kenna. There were ten children as follows:

Beatrice, married Mr. Garmes. Children: Ralph, Ethel, Mamie and Alma. This family lived in Tennessee.

Ella, married Warwick Pfost. Children: Arnett, Jay, John, and Beulah. The Pfosts lived in Kentucky.

Homer, married Ella Quick. Children: James, Theo, Roy, and Arnold. Married Ann Parrish. Children: Jack and Joyce. Homer built homes in Charleston, WV.

David married Molly Parsons, died age 28.

Loverna, married Rufus Oliver. Children: Sylvia Smith, Orion and John. This family lived in East Palestine, Ohio.

Ella Pfost, Loverna, Jonah, Robert, Homer, and Roy Bush

Loverta, twin to Loverna. Never married. Remained in the family home at Kenna.

Jonah Adam, married Stella Hodges. Children: Lawrence, Virginia Moore, and Loverta Gregory. Jonah and family lived in Pittsburgh, PA.

Robert, married Edna Hopkins. Children: Jonah, Leo, Kenna, Edward, Carroll, Phyllis, Geneva, Ralph and Raymond, twins. This family lived at Given, WV.

Stella, married Wm. Hodges. Children: Bessie Cadle, Russell, Homer, Josephine Lyons, Bernice Russell, and Irene McCoy. The Hodges lived in Mason County near Leon.

Roy, lived at Kenna most of his life. He remained single.

These ten children of James Emmett Bush and Virginia Simons were brought up in Kenna in Jackson County.

An annual reunion is held in Baden, WV by their descendants. It is well attended and all the cousins enjoy the day together. Submitted by Virginia B. Moore

(Mr. Stephens was his great uncle through his marriage to Minerva Minor, a sister to Caroline Minor Zearley, John's grandmother.) John was the son of the Reverend William A. John Zearley Cadle

He was married to Mary Adams (1870-1936) of Kenna, 2 May 1894. WILLIAM A. CADLE

William Anderson Cadle was born July 31, 1850 near the mouth of Bluestone River in Mercer County, Virginia, now Summers County, West Virginia; d. January 16, 1929. He was the son of John and Julia Agee Cadle and a great-grandson of Thomas Cadle who migrated to the Virginia area from Surry County, North Carolina. John Cadle moved his family to Jackson County in 1862 to establish a home in that area.

Young William became convinced of his duty to preach at the age of 15 and soon thereafter took up the active ministry of the Gospel, serving in the Baptist denomination, and remained in that work until failing health forced him to retire in the '20s. He preached in neighborhood churches and schoolhouses, and because of his extreme youth when he entered the ministry, he was familiarly known as the "Boy Preacher." Before he was 22 years of age he was ordained as a minister and accepted calls to the pastorate of churches.

Rev. William A. Cadle

In the early years of the Reverend Cadle's ministerial career, he taught several terms of school. In the meantime his reputation as a successful revivalist was growing and demand for his services reached a point where he decided to give up school teaching so that he could devote more time to the ministry. Thus, the pattern for his future life was set. He was a consistent student of the Bible and an avid reader. His library contained many books of reference, Bible Concordances and Gospel expositions. He was a mild mannered and soft spoken man in all phases of his life. In the pulpit his voice was seldom raised to a pitch higher than necessary to be audible to his audience. His sermons, for the most part, were forceful and logical and were always delivered extemporaneously. His command of English was excellent and he seldom hesitated for words to express himself.

His work in the ministry was confined largely to country churches in Mason, Jackson, Putnam, Roane and Kanawha counties, extending up the Ohio River as far as Wood County and at times over into the state of Ohio. The following is a partial list of churches he served as pastor: Ebenezer, Ripley, Grass Lick, Lone Oak, Long Hollow, Jackson County; Baden, Wolf's Valley, Leon, Concord and Harmony in Mason County; Poca, Riverside, Hurricane, Teays in Putnam County; St. Albans and Spring Hill in Kanawha County. Several of the above churches are in the Teays Valley Baptist Association of which he was Moderator during the last eight or ten years of his active ministry.

He was married to Elzena Ann Zearley, the daughter of Jacob A. Zearley and Caroline Minor, 28 February 1869. Their children were:

- (1) Emma Caroline, b. 1869, d. 1948, m. Emory Duffield;
- (2) John Zearley, b. 1871, d. 1951, m. Mary Adams;
- (3) Otho Minor, b. 1875, d. 1949, m. Dora King;
- (4) Minerva LeGrand, b. 1877, d. 1958, m. Parke Billups;

WILLIAM CARDER

The original Carder family moved from Belgium to England and then to the colonies. William Carder served in the Revolutionary War. He served 27 months as an Indian scout and a private. William married Nancy Washburn and raised seven children; Elizabeth, William, Manley, Sarah, John W., Nancy and George. He is buried in the old Bethel Cemetery in Harrison County. His son, John W. Carder, married Margaret Smith on August 15, 1815. They had a son, John Smith Carder, who married Hilda Rowley. Hilda's ancestral roots stretched back to Holland. Hilda was from Hereford in Jackson County near the present site of the Joe's Run Dam. Hilda and John Smith Carder owned extensive properties in Jackson County. They had nine children but only six survived. They were John Wesley, Hulda, Ellen, Burton, Zibe and Jane.

Burton was born March 16, 1849 in Jackson County, Virginia (now W. Va.). He married Matilda Payne and had four children: John Smith, Althea, Ester and Orton. John Smith Carder married Gertrude M. Collins in 1896 at Ripley in Jackson County. They lived on a farm on Joe's Run about two miles up the left fork. This, according to family legend, is the site of the original land grant given to the first William Carder for his participation in the Revolutionary War.

Orton Carder was raised next door to his brother John's children. He was born late in his parents' life and was of the same age as many of his nieces and nephews. Orton attended Ripley schools and graduated from Ripley Normal School. He taught in the Jackson County School system for a few years. He answered the call to the ministry in 1915 and joined the United Brethren Conference. He served in churches in Silverton, Leon, Point Pleasant and Huntington, W. Va.

John Smith Carder and wife

John Smith Carder was a large man who stood over six feet tall and was heavily built. His house stood close to the stream, Joe's Run, which was used as a highway by horses and wagons. His house was Jenny Lind style and had cracks in the walls which allowed snow to sift through in the winter. Neighbors often gathered there and friendly gatherings lasted well into the night.

He rented pasture in the Cobb Hollow area which adjoined his farm. His wife, Gertrude, would walk two miles a day up hill to milk her cows. They kept a few head of cattle and farmed the hillsides extensively. John died May 16, 1954 after being bedfast for some time. Gertrude lived the last few years of her life in Parkersburg, West Virginia. John Smith and Gertrude Carder's children were:

Ida, Burton, Lora, Alma and Lorella.

Ida married Howard Allen and lived in Parkersburg. Burton married Golda Houchin who died of TB. His second wife was named Mable. Lora married Charles Shirley and moved to Pittsburgh, PA. Lorella married Dennis Allen and also went to Pittsburgh. Alma married Romie Freeman and settled down in Jackson County. Alma and Romie had eight children: Clarence, Geneva, Lenora, Gerald, Evelyn, Lorena, Linda and Melvin. Only two settled in Jackson County. Lenora married Eddie Waggoner and had five children: Joyce, Wayne, James, John and Wendy. Geneva married Hoyt Snyder and had two sons: David and Bill.

CARNEY

Our earliest ancestor in the Jackson County area was John Carney, who came here about 1813. He fought in the Revolutionary War, as did his son Thomas and two other sons who were killed in the war. Thomas was unable to prove his participation in the Revolutionary War because of his youth at the time, however, he did serve as a scout in the Indian Wars.

Thomas Carney (born October 15, 1768-died October 19, 1846), was married to Mary "Polly" Parsons (born January 1, 1773-died December 4, 1863), daughter of Charles Parsons. Their children were: Mary; Jemima; Jesse, who married Sarah Greene; Charles, who married Elizabeth Greene; William, who married Elizabeth Bonnett; John, who married Earty Jividen; Delila, who married William Roach; Malinda, who married Peter Thomas; Anna, who was married three times, but lastly to Enoch Thomas; Spencer, who married Sally Hyde; Margaret, who married John Staats; Dorcas, who married James Brown; Mercy, who married Joseph Stout; Mahala, who married Adam Given; Phoebe, who married Calvin West; Hannah, who married Levi Casto; and Enoch, who never married.

Weedon Carney married Catherine Hoffman on May 25, 1840. She was the daughter of Thomas and Margaret Hoffman. They had the following children: Emily J., who married Joseph S. Bowles; Elmore, who married, although we're not sure to whom, and had two children before he died; Charles C.; Enoch, who married Josephine Winters; Sarah; Alexander; John, who was evidently handicapped in some way, as his father's will left instructions for his care; and Jesse. There may also have been another child, as the will mentions an H.C.

Weedon and Catherine's son Enoch C. Carney (born 1855-died January 26, 1921) was married March 23, 1879 to Josephine Winters (born December 9, 1855-died January 6, 1946) who was the daughter of Matthias Sr. and Hannah Winters. She was married to James Hoyt French (born December 7, 1905-died July 7, 1959) who was the son of Maurice Hosmer and Laura Phoebe Kessel French. They had three children. Their first son, Steven Hoyt, was born November 30, 1945, and married Linda Sue Adkins on May 3, 1968, and they have one daughter, Sarah. Their only daughter, Robin Gail, was born January 9, 1949. She was married to and divorced from Charles Michael Gillespie and they had a daughter, Amanda Hope. She later married John Keriluk and they have two sons, Travis French and Seth. ALEXANDER C. CARNEY

Alexander C. Carney (1860-1943) taught school in early life, later took up farming at Given on Parchment. He was known for Hereford cattle breeding. Being an excellent scribe, the teachers at Given School had him make copies for the students' penmanship classes as they had no penmanship textbooks. He became a member of Fairview Methodist Church in 1889.

Alexander was the son of Weedon Carney (1816-1881), married 1840 Catherine M. Hoffman (1825-1909), daughter of Thomas Hoffman of Greenbrier County, Virginia, later Mill Creek. They were members of the M.E. Church South for forty years. Their children were:

Three children died in infancy.

Alexander's grandparents were Jesse Carney (1797-1879) and Sarah (Sally) Greene. Jesse served for the longest period in justice court — 23 years (1836-1860). He served as school commissioner for one year, 1831. Their children were:

Alexander's great-grandparents were Thomas Carney (1768-1846) and Mary (Polly) Parsons (1773-1863). Thomas is said to have attended the first school within the bounds of the present Upshur County. The date of Mr. Haddox, the teacher's, school was just nine months after Washington left the White House. This would make it 1797. Polly was the daughter of Charles Parsons, Sr. and sister of Captain William Parsons, the first settler at the present site of Ripley. Thomas was an Indian scout for eight years. Once while living alone, her husband being on a scouting trip, Indians were reported in the area and Polly grew frightened, ran out of the cabin and climbed an apple tree and hid among the leaves. In a little while she saw two men with red handkerchiefs tied over their heads as a danger signal, come running to her cabin. Not finding her there they soon found her trail. One of the men, her brother Captain Billy Parsons, called her down and hurried her to the fort. Thomas was on the first grand jury in Jackson County, empaneled 1831.

The children of Thomas and Polly were:

Mary Carney remained unmarried.

Jesse Carney married Sarah (Sally) Greene.

Hannah Carney married Levi Casto in 1833.

Alexander's great-great-grandfather, John Carney, migrated from Ireland, fought in the Revolutionary War. He lost two sons in that war. He and his son, Thomas, built his cabin home in the spring of 1813 on a large tract of bottoms he owned along Mill Creek, reaching nearly to the mouth of Tug Fork.

Alexander married 1885 Mary Frances (Tad) Winter (1859-1953). She was reared in the vicinity of Fairplane on Grasslick and was a member of the Dirty Fork Baptist Church. She was the daughter of Mathias (Black Tice) Winter born 1818 and Hannah Farris Winter born 1835. Their other children were born in Harrison County. The family migrated to Jackson County.

James McConnel; William Lucius Carson (June 19, 1854 to April 19, 1929), married Agnes Marie Henderson (October 23, 1857 to June 30, 1937); John Charles Carson (December 9, 1857 to October, 1895), married D. Markanthy; Anna Marie Carson (November 20, 1859 to January 6, 1882) drowned in a whirlpool in the Ohio River; and Albert Carson (November 20, 1861 to April 1922) married Sadie Barnett.

Through A.M.'s uncle Ephriam Carson (April 8, 1834 to 1880) and Ephriam's daughter, Lula Carson Blake (born May 30, 1869), A.M. Carson was the great-great-uncle of Eugen Carson Blake, President of the World Council of Churches.

A.M. Carson's father died when A.M. was twelve. His mother and family moved to her parents' home. Mr. Carson's maternal grandparents were Lucius Cross, Sr. (December 30, 1798 to August 15, 1883) and Thriza Stanley Cross (April 2, 1801 to April 19, 1885). Lucius Cross, Sr. was the only child of Waid Cross, I (April 19, 1771 to August 14, 1819) and Sarah Alworth Cross. Waid Cross was the son of Peter Cross (August 5, 1740 to April, 1808) and Alice Warner Cross (born August 11, 1742). She is sixth in descent from William Bradford of Plymouth Colony.

Lucius Cross, Sr. was born in Mansfield, CT and came to Marietta, OH at the age of three. He was orphaned and reared by a step-mother who married John Brough, Sr. By family tradition, Lucius Cross's step-mother, Bridget Cross Brough, took Lucius Cross's inheritance to educate her son, John Brough, Jr. who became Governor of Ohio.

Following their marriage on April 15, 1821, Lucius Cross, Sr. and Thriza Stanley Cross moved to Sutton Township, Meigs County, OH. They had a saw and grist mill, a tannery, the Racine Woolen Mills, a grocery store, and a facility for building flatboats to take produce down the Ohio River.

Thriza Stanley Cross was the daughter of Timothy Stanley (June 29, 1771 to February 14, 1819), and Abigail Robbins Stanley (born April 2, 1801). Abigail Robbins Stanley was the daughter of Uni Robbins. He was from Newington, CT. The Cross, Stanley and Robbins families came to Washington County near Marietta, Ohio in the early 1800s from CT. All three families had lived in New England since the first half of the 1600s.

Cora Lasher Carson, wife of A.M. Carson, was the daughter of Morgan van Rensselaer Lasher (Sept. 24, 1825 to February 25, 1903) and Laura Melissa Cable Lasher (November 12, 1831 to July 18, 1905). She is one of four children: Homer B. Lasher, George A. Lasher (born January 5, 1860), who moved to California, and Edward Lasher, who was lost at sea.

Morvan V. Lasher was the son of John van Rensselaer Lasher (August 19, 1799 to April 9, 1882) and Catherine Martin Lasher (born February 5, 1800). The John V. Lasher family came to Ohio from Dutchess County, NY. Laura Melissa Cable Lasher was the daughter of George Cable (born October 20, 1803) and Susannah Johnson Cable (July 6, 1806 to June 14, 1857) and the granddaughter of Jonathan Cable (born 1771) and Appa Brown Cable (born June 7, 1788) of Hartford, NY.

A.M. Carson prepared to teach, but during an emergency, he went to work for his Uncle Waid Cross II in the family general store in Racine, OH. This store, Waid Cross' Sons, is the oldest continuous business in Meigs County. It is owned and operated by William Stanley Cross.

The great flood of the Ohio River occurred in 1884, and the family escaped in a skiff out the third floor window of the Cross Store. In 1889 Mr. Carson moved with his wife and two children to Ripley, WV.

He purchased an interest in the mercantile firm of J.M. Hensley & Company, who did business in West Ripley, near the railroad tracks. Later he was in partnership with W.A. Ellis. The James Poling property on the NW corner of Main and Court streets was purchased in 1895. It is the present site of Family Dollar Store. In 1914 Mr. Carson's son-in-law, Mr. Cornelius C. (Neil) Staats purchased Mr. Ellis' interest. The firm continued business under the name of A.M. Carson Store Company.

A.M. and Cora Lasher Carson lived in the brick house on the SW corner of North and Seventh streets. Their home, built in 1800 by F. Leon Clerc, is the second oldest brick house in Ripley. Their great-granddaughter Dorothy Staats (Dotty) Kerns and her family live there today.

A.M. and Cora Lasher Carson had two children: Waid Edwin Carson, M.D. (August 8, 1876 to April 10, 1946) and Bessie Evelyn Carson Staats (September 17, 1878 to November 18, 1967).

Dr. Waid Carson, son of A.M. Carson and Cora Lasher Carson, was graduated with an AB degree (1900) and a Master of Arts (1901) from Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, OH. He worked in his father's general store in Ripley and later took post-graduate courses at the University of Chicago, Chicago, IL. He was graduated from John Hopkins Medical School, Baltimore, MD in 1907. He specialized in ophthalmology and was a professor at the University of Pittsburgh, PA. Dr. Carson never married.

Bessie Carson Staats married Neil Staats (February 21, 1874 to October 17, 1935), son of Enoch Staats, Sr. and Louisa Casto Staats. (See Staats-Carson entry). Submitted by Helen Staats Harris and Wallace Waid Staats

Addie Waybright Smith Blake; Paw Paw Darrell Smith; and Great Paw Paw Fleet Waybright. On her father's side are Paw Paw Burton and Maw Maw Beverly Bailey Casto; Great Paw Paw Ray and Great Maw Maw Velma Johnson Bailey; Great Paw Paw Arden and Great Maw Maw Pearl Painter Casto; and Great-Great Maw Maw Bessie Hill Bailey.

On her father's side, her ancestry has been traced back to Jonathan and Roxana Worner Hill who came to the Jackson/Putnam area sometime around 1809 from Rhode Island and settled at the mouth of 18 Mile Creek. Most of their children married and moved away, but their son Labon Hill settled with his family in Jackson County near the present site of Rock Castle on a place known as Chestnut Orchard. He attempted to cut himself a house in a cliff by stone. By the time the lay-out of a window and door were chiseled out, he realized his task was impossible. The chisel marks on the face of this great stone are almost as plain now as the day they were put there. It has been said that this is how Rock Castle got its name.

Danielle's great Paw Paw Fleet Waybright, whose ancestors originally came from Germany, has lived on a farm on Zion Ridge all his life. He married Eva Harmon and raised thirteen children. He became known as the bare-footed hunter, believing he could sneak up better on squirrel if he was not wearing shoes. His wife passed away in 1974. He owned a 1962 Studebaker that he drove until November 1989 at the age of 93. He is a World War I veteran. Submitted by Sandy Casto

BOYD CLEO CASTO

Boyd Cleo (B. Cleo) Casto, was born May 9, 1892, at Kenna, Jackson County, West Virginia, son of Dr. F. S. and Dora Belle (Simmons) Casto. He was educated in the public schools of the county, and the Marietta Business College, Marietta, Ohio.

On June 22, 1913, he was married to Verna Valeria Polsley, daughter of W. W. and Nancy Caroline (Ridenour) Polsley. After their marriage, they both became members of the Grass Lick Baptist Church at Kenna, where they remained loyal members their lifetime, serving in various leadership positions. They are buried in the Grass Lick Church Cemetery.

Mr. Casto was one of the leading figures in political and business life of Jackson County. He engaged in the mercantile business at Kenna for a number of years, and served as Kenna's Postmaster from 1915-1921. In 1926, he was elected Clerk of the Circuit Court of Jackson County. In 1932 he was elected Clerk of the County Court of the county, and in 1938 was elected a member of the West Virginia State Senate from what was then the Fourth Senatorial District. After serving his term in the Senate, he became an Auditor in the Land Department of the State Auditor's office. He remained in this position until a few months before his death on January 23, 1951.

Mr. Casto was not only a devout Christian man, he was also very civic minded and anxious to improve the lot for others whenever, or wherever he could. During the period he served as Circuit and County Clerk there were no school buses in Jackson County. He saw the need for young folk in the community to further their education and for several there was need for transportation to and from Ripley High School. He purchased a large used panel grocery delivery truck, had benches built through the bed of the truck and this became the High School bus for some twelve to sixteen young folk, as well as provide his own transportation to and from work. On Saturdays, and days when it was not used for the students, "Cleo's bus" as it became known, transported the general public to the county seat; some to take care of business, others to see the doctor or shop for family needs. The Casto's living room was often filled with folk waiting to go to Ripley, and Mr. and Mrs. Casto, were always glad to be able to accommodate each one.

Boyd Cleo Casto

B. Cleo resided in Kenna all his life except for a period of two and one-half years when he and family lived in Charleston, West Virginia. He and Mrs. Casto were the parents of Geneva (Casto) McGrew, Josephine (Casto) Doig, Rodrick Wayne Casto, Rodney Cleo Casto, and one son died in infancy.

After the death of B. Cleo Casto, his widow, Verna Casto, continued to live in the home at Kenna. She had some remodeling done to the large house and opened it up for tourists. Many times it became a bed and breakfast home. She stayed prepared in the event folk asked for breakfast. She found her venture with the Tourist Home very rewarding and often spoke of the fine and interesting guests that had spent the night in the home. Mrs. Casto closed the home to tourism when through traffic was placed on I-77. She remained very active in church and community affairs until a few days before her death, March 30, 1968. The home then became the property of the eldest son, Rodrick Wayne Casto.

B. Cleo Casto, was a man respected by his church, community, county and by those who knew and worked with him in state government. Submitted by Rodney Cleo Casto

D. D. AND RACHEL (BOICE) CASTO

David D. Casto (1820-1899) was the son of John D. Casto and the grandson of David and Margaret Province Casto from Monongalia (later Harrison) County. John D. Casto moved to Jackson (then Mason) County about 1814. On October 28, 1819, he was married in Mason County to Susannah McDade, the daughter of James and Rachel McDade.

John and Susannah Casto had three children: David D. born 1820, Rachel born 1827, and Sintha born 1831. John died sometime after 1831, and Savannah then married William Edmonds who died prior to 1846. On April 14, 1843, David D. Casto was married to Rachel Boice (1825-1901) the daughter of Stephen and Sarah Sayre Boice. David and Rachel and their three young children left Jackson County in 1849 for Caldwell County, Missouri, accompanied by Rachel's brother, George Washington Boice, and her mother, Sarah, who died during the journey. David's mother, Susannah, chose to remain in Jackson County near her daughters.

David and Rachel Boice Casto had thirteen children: Henry Rousch (1844-1926), Enoch Sayre (1846-1922), Lavina (1848-1891), George Washington (1851-1891), Melissa Jane (1853-1856), Hannah Elizabeth (1855-1859), Sarah Alice (1858-1924), John Wesley (1860-1935), Jesse Oliver (1862-1939), Hattie Rosetta (1864-1948), Cleora Adelaide (1867-1952), Minnie May (1870-1888), and an infant son who died on January 9, 1873.

David was a farmer in Caldwell County, Missouri, until his death on January 4, 1899. On September 13, 1864, David enlisted in Captain Washington T. Filson's Company of Caldwell County Militia. A week later, he was thrown from his horse and so severely injured that he was discharged on October 10, 1864. David's eldest sons, Henry and Enoch, also served in the Civil War.

David D. and Rachel (Boice) Casto, 51st year of married life

David Casto was a slender man of rugged appearance weighing only 140 pounds and standing 5 feet 9 inches in height. Although he suffered from recurring disabilities due to his Civil War injury, he maintained his youthful appearance well into his seventh decade. David and Rachel were generous people, raising not only their own family but also the children of George and Sarilda Boice following their deaths in the mid-1880s. Rachel was a small, dignified woman of determined yet gentle appearance. Her straight, dark hair was worn pulled back and tied behind her head. She was reportedly psychic and able to foretell coming events. David and Rachel Casto are buried in the Brown Cemetery between Polo and Kingston in Caldwell County, Missouri.

Four of David's sons left Missouri. Enoch moved first to Lakecreek, Oregon, and then in about 1894 to Lewis County, Washington. Jesse Casto also moved to Lewis County sometime between 1886 and 1893. Henry moved to Kansas during the 1880s where he worked prior to homesteading near Piedmont, Oklahoma, during the Run of 1889. John Wesley Casto worked in Kansas and Washington before homesteading during 1893 in the Cherokee Strip near Covington, Oklahoma.

The family history of David and Rachel Casto has been chronicled by his great-great-grandson, Stanley D. Casto in The Descendants of David D. Casto and Rachel Boice (1979) and a supplement The Ancestors and Descendants of David D. Casto and Rachel Boice (1983). Submitted by Stanley D. Casto

David bought one hundred and seventy-two acres of land at the forks of two streams, later named Beech and Bear Forks, in the State of Virginia from a Mr. Cunningham in the year 1845. This was a hillside farm with some bottom land which was considered to be of little value because it was not located near any large rivers which could be used for transportation.

On March 15, 1849, at the age of twenty-nine, David married twenty-eight year old Louisa Casto.

It is not known if there was a house on the farm at the time it was purchased or if David build the rough-hewn home for his new bride. It was a four room house with two rooms upstairs and two rooms on ground level and it was built with logs up to twenty-four inches wide in its walls.

David and Louisa were living on the farm during the Civil War of 1861-1865 and an incident of that great conflict has been passed down through the family. It seems David had discovered that a troop of soldiers was coming through the countryside looking for food, cattle, horses or anything else beneficial to the war effort. David had a young pair of horses and a few cattle that he hoped to possess after the troop departed. It is reported the animals were hidden nearby on the farm and David had chosen a high rock from which he could keep an eye on the movement of the troop. He was apparently working closer to the edge for a better view when he fell off.

During this same time period David provided some property across the creek from his home for the construction of a schoolhouse. It was built near a large pine tree and was named the White Pine School.

The Civil War affected every family and all had to choose their side of allegiance. When Virginia seceded from the Union, the western portion elected to remain and on June 20, 1863 the State of West Virginia was admitted to the Union.

At about this time a small community in the mid-western section was gaining recognition by being named Belgrove. On August 26, 1885 the Belgrove post office was established. A Mr. Daniel Williams was named the new postmaster.

David and Louisa were the parents of four children; Rachel, Joel, Columbus, and Sarah. Columbus became a doctor. At the age of fifty-one Louisa died of measles. Following the death of Louisa, David married Melissa Booth who was the sister of his son-in-law. From this marriage David had three girls; Clora, Eva and Laura.

David L. and Melissa (Booth) Casto, Laura, Clara, and Eva

Through the years the farmhouse had remained essentially the same, but at some period of time a large kitchen had been added to the basic structure.

After David's death in 1909, Melissa divided the farm between her three children with Clora getting the section the cabin was on. She kept it until 1983 when she sold it to Cody Randolph, he now lives there.

The family graveyard is located on a point overlooking the old homestead. There are five generations of the Casto family buried in this graveyard. It has a good fence surrounding it and is presently well maintained. The five generations reposing at this location are:

- I. David, Louisa and Melissa Casto
- II. Joel and Polly Casto
- III. Theodore, Ernest and Kenna Casto
- IV. Donald Casto, son of Theodore
- V. Shirley Casto, son of Donald

DR. FREDERICK S. CASTO, M. D.

Dr. Frederick Sattes Casto was born near Ripley, West Virginia, January 25, 1867, the son of Benjamin Franklin and Mary Matilda (Craig) Casto. His paternal grandparents were Jonathan and Madaline (Weatherholt) Casto, and his maternal grandparents were Christopher and Mary (Bonnett) Craig.

On the 21st day of March 1888, Frederick S. Casto was married to Dora Belle (Simmons) Casto, at the home of her parents, Rev. Thomas W. and Sarah C. (Maddox) Simmons, at Kenna, West Virginia. The officiating Minister was W. A. Cadle. Rev. Simmons, Dora Belle's father was also a Medical Doctor, having graduated from Ohio College of Medicine, Cincinnati, class of 1867-8. Dora Belle (Simmons) Casto's paternal grandparents were Samuel and Melinda (Greer) Simmons, who came from Surry County, N. C. in 1852, and settled in Jackson County. Her maternal grandparents were Thomas and Martha (Goodwin) Maddox, who came to Jackson County from Lewis County in 1856.

Dr. Frederick S. Casto

Dr. Frederick S. Casto was a graduate of the University of Louisville, Kentucky, Medical College, class of 1893. Following graduation he and Mrs. Casto built a home at Kenna, Jackson County where he maintained a practice for thirty-one years. His two room office building was erected close by the home. During most of those years it was necessary for him to travel by horseback when making house calls. The Citizens Telephone switchboard was located in Dr. Casto's home, and frequently when returning from attending one person, a message would be waiting for the doctor to hurry to another ill one, often requiring several miles of travel. He would change horses, replenish his medical supplies which he carried in saddlebags, and be on his way. In 1917, he purchased his first car, a Model "T" Ford. The country dirt roads made limited use of the car. Many of the children born in southern Jackson County, parts of the surrounding counties during the thirty-one years Dr. Casto practiced at Kenna, were delivered by him. His standard fee for delivery at that time was five dollars. Most of the families he attended were farm folk with little ready cash. It was not unusual for him to receive a bushel of wheat, cord of wood, or garden produce, for his services.

In 1924, Dr. Casto moved to Charleston, West Virginia, where he continued to practice until his retirement in 1943, and at that time the University of Louisville awarded him a certificate of appreciation for fifty years of service. Following his official retirement and the closing of his office located at the corner of Washington and Florida Streets, many folk he had cared for through the years came to his residence located at 943 Sixth St., for medical help. An additional room, with a private entrance, was added to the home where he continued to attend the sick.

The children of Dr. Frederick S. and Dora Belle (Simmons) Casto, were Corda (Casto) Hambrick, Boyd Cleo Casto, Wilma (Casto) Rawlings, Ronald Herman Casto, and two children, Frederick and Gladys, died in infancy. Their grandchildren are: Herman and Nadine (Smith) Hambrick, children of Corda (Casto) Hambrick, Geneva (Casto) McGrew, Josephine (Casto) Doig, Rodrick Wayne and Rodney Cleo Casto, children of Boyd Cleo Casto, James Rawling, and Ruth (Rawling) Lilly, children of Wilma (Casto) Rawling, Ronald Herman Casto II, Elizabeth (Casto) Mathias, and Frederick Adams Casto, children of Ronald Herman Casto.

GEORGE RILEY CASTO

My grandfather was George Riley Casto, 1845-1942. At the age of 7 he went to live in the home of Jabel Bowles and lived there until his marriage in 1865 to Margaret Ann Hogsett, 1850-1927. Children: Allena, Ernest, Jane, Theodocia, Love, Tennie, Edward, Otmer, Mae, Blanche, Layton and Harry. Grandfather was a farmer and for many years lived on Parchment where he reared his family. He eventually moved to Millwood, but when he was about 83 years old his children persuaded him to come to live with them in Parkersburg.

Grandfather, known as a rugged individual, at 95 decided to visit his granddaughter in Detroit. He took the bus, unbeknown to his family, but arriving in Detroit, he had lost her address and started asking people on the street if they knew where Shirley lived. By chance he asked Sergeant Hollingsworth. Because of age his voice had been reduced to a whisper. Sergeant Hollingsworth took him to Receiving Hospital and the doctors said they would see that he got a good night's rest. He was tired but seemingly not worried. An orderly undertook to search him and although he protested was searched according to routine. The orderly found him wearing two pairs of trousers, and in the inner pair was $105 in gold coins, $15.00 in bills and old silver coins, old enough to be collectors' pieces, and some bank books. He told them he owned a farm near Parkersburg. Police called his daughter who made arrangements to go and bring him home.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest D. Casto

My father, Ernest, 1868-1941, the second child, married in 1889 Mary Etta Waugh, 1871-1938. Children: Howard, Manona, Glenmar, Luther, Carrie, Everett, Ada, Lucy, Leola, Lura, Erva and Lohan. All except the youngest were born at their home in Given.

Family of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Casto, back row: Carrie Ferrell, Manona Bowles, Lucy Sigmon, Lura Given; front row: Ada Raines, Erva Norris, Leola Williams, 1905

The first Given Postmaster was William (Bill) Given, and the postoffice was named in his honor. All that is known about Mr. Given's family is that he had two daughters, Ruby and Tommie. He later moved to Evans and probably from there to the Charleston area. After I was married to Forrest Given, I learned that William (Bill) Given was his great great great great uncle who had moved to Jackson County from Braxton probably searching for greener pastures.

My father, with his large family to care for, in addition to farming, made brooms for sale. He also taught singing lessons from "shaped" notes. Oh, how we loved to sing! Our family operated the Telephone Exchange in our home. As most families did in those days, they raised and canned most of the food they ate, and the men killed hogs, and took wheat and corn to the mill to be ground for flour and meal. I can remember Father making sorghum and how the "horse power" would be used to grind the cane to extract the juice to be boiled down for syrup. Mother said, "If you don't thank the Lord for your food it won't set well in your stomach." Grace was said before every meal. Emily Dickinson said, "Hold your parents dearly because without them the world is a very lonely place."

In 1915 father moved us to the Charleston area to further our education and to find industrial employment. He eventually bought property in Dunbar and we became quite active in community affairs. At present I am the only child who still resides in Dunbar. I play the organ at First Church United Methodist. I was instrumental in establishing an Endowment Fund at our church in memory of loved ones who have passed away. Submitted by Lura Agatha (Casto) Given

G. W. AND MYRTLE CASTO

On February 25, 1872, a baby boy was born to Clermont Thaw and Permelia Ann Shinn Casto at Fairplain, West Virginia. He went by the name of Jim Casto until fifteen years of age. His grandfather, George Shinn, with whom he lived said, "Your name shall be George after me and Wallace after Wallace Harpold. George Wallace Casto to be your name." His father, Thaw, died when Wall was six years old. He attended school to the sixth grade.

In early teens he worked in a harness shop at Fairplain, making harness, bridles, etc.

On April 30, 1899, he married Mary Myrtle Kessel, daughter of James Mason and Flora Jane Kessel on Parchment near Given, West Virginia. They were married at the Kessel home by the Rev. Sam Robinson.

G. W. and Myrtle Casto

They moved to Rockcastle, West Virginia, and operated a flour mill with steam. William "Bill" Casto helped part time. They lived here during the Big Flood of June 1910 and another one in 1913 that washed away two stores containing $10,000 worth of stock as well as other damage.

Three children were born here: Harlan, Willard and Hazel. In 1900 the mill was sold to two brothers: Orfe and Ceph Casto. G. W. purchased the Lafayette Sayre farm of 325 acres at Evans, West Virginia; moved there in 1912. He timbered the land and had a good farm for raising cattle.

Myrt, as she was called, raised white leghorn chickens and sold cream and eggs to buy the groceries.

G.W. always had a short pencil and a nail that he would use to figure his problems whether on a board or ground.

About 1918 three people in Jackson County had Model T's: G. W., Dr. Tom Rymer, and Dan McKown.

G.W. set three goals for himself: 1918 — build a reservoir on the hill for water to the house; 1920 — to have 85 lb. pressure; 1928 — wire the house for electricity.

The family had one of the first Crosley radios in the community, and friends would come in on Saturday night to listen to the Nashville Barn Dance.

The family attended the Evans Methodist Church. While living in Evans, another son, Raymond R., was born. The children grew up in Evans and later married — Harlan married Dollie Parsons of Given; Willard married Virginia Hood of Ripley; Hazel married Blaine Y. Hughes of Flatwoods; and Raymond married Grace Hartley of Creston in Mason County.

G.W. (often called "Wall") was sharp in business dealings. He soon began purchasing more land and property — farm at Willow grove, building at Ripley as well as other property.

G.W. had one sister, Flora, who married W. B. Stewart. They owned the Stewart Tourist Home on Church Street in Ripley. He also had a step-father, A. A. "Archie" Reynolds and three half-sisters, Mary, Della and Minnie. Mary married Jeff Sayre, Della married Marshall Long, and Minnie married James Casto.

Rockcastle Flour Mill

G.W. and Myrt were very caring and friendly people. When they operated the flour mill at Rockcastle, Wall would often tell customers who came to the mill to go to the house to get something to eat. This same attitude carried over to Evans. Occasionally, a tramp, as they were called in those days, would stop and ask for something to eat. Myrt would never turn a hungry person away, so she would make them sandwiches and on their way they would go.

The preacher of the church would often ride his horse and later came by car to the Casto home for a visit and chicken dinner. It was customary to have chicken when the preacher visited.

Myrtle was one of fourteen Kessel children. She was a woman of intelligence, strength, warmth, and a good home maker. She won first prize on bread making at the Jackson County Fair for several years, attended Woman's Camp at Jackson's Mill for nine years, member of Millcreek Valley Farm Woman's Club and Order of Eastern Star at Ripley. G.W. died July 18, 1952, at age 82. Myrtle died November 20, 1939, at age 61. Both are buried at Otterbein Cemetery.

G.W.'s grandparents were Elmore H. and Phoebe Cunningham Casto. Myrtle's grandparents were Alexis Fink Parsons, Sr. and Phoebe Casto Parsons.

They have six grandchildren: Harlan Casto, Jr., Hazel Parsons, Lowell Hood Casto, Gloria Hughes, Lewis Raymond Casto, Gary Hughes. Submitted by Hazel C. Hughes and Raymond R. Casto

Their daughter Mildred Loreen was born June 16, 1916. In 1917 they bought a farm located on Foster Ridge near Rockcastle. Holly taught school and they farmed.

Holly and Mabel Casto, 1954

While living at Rockcastle, two other daughters were born: Macil Irene, December 9, 1917, and Freda Grace, October 11, 1922. In 1923, they sold the farm to Holly's uncle, Lawson Casto, and moved to Ripley.

The three daughters graduated from Ripley High School and Mildred and Grace graduated from Marshall College and became teachers. Mildred taught in Jackson and Kanawha counties, retiring in 1972; and Grace taught in Jackson and Putnam counties, retiring in 1980. Macil attended Martz Beauty School in Huntington and worked there and in Akron. During World War II, Mildred served two years as a WAVE in the U.S. Navy.

Mildred married William W. Fisher of Charleston in 1946. He was a Captain in the Charleston Police Department at the time of his death in 1973. Their daughter, Nancy Humphreys, is a teacher in Charleston.

Macil married George Dinkins of Huntington in 1938. He retired from Goodyear Aerospace in Akron, and died in 1982. Their two sons are William D. and Neil, who live with their families in Ohio.

Grace married Arnold Boggess of Jackson County in 1947. He was a heavy equipment operator before retiring in 1981. They have two daughters and a son. Rebecca Dee Simmons is a teacher in Florida. Sarah Lee McCallister lives at Hurricane. Christopher Boggess is stationed with the U.S. Army at Fort Lewis, Washington.

Holly belonged to the Masonic and IOOF lodges. They attended Ripley Baptist Church. My father died in 1954 and my mother in 1983. They are buried at Otterbein Cemetery, Evans.

Dad and Mom always stressed education. Of their descendants, at this time, there are six college graduates. Submitted by Mildred Casto Fisher

ICIE MYRTLE (PARSONS) CASTO

ICIE CASTO is responsible for a large amount of the population of this county. Mother of nine, dozens of grand-children, greats into the threes' numbering in the hundreds; these are the family by blood. But, Icie was also a midwife delivering hundreds of our current population.

Born December 13, 1891, the eldest of fifteen children born to William Henderson "Billo" and Mary (Shumaker) Parsons, Icie and her youngest sister, Sylvia (Parsons) Young are the lone survivors.

Icie Myrtle Casto

In May 1986 Icie was honored for her many years (50 plus) of service as midwife and nursing the sick by receiving the 35th Star Award of West Virginia; also an excellent article in the Ravenswood News. Her mother, Mary, born ca. 1870, was the daughter of Hezekiah King Shumaker, a doctor in the Civil War and Susanna (Hively) Meadows who married May 2, 1867 in Roane County.

Her father, William Henderson "Billo" Parsons, Icie remembers as being a 6 foot 7 inch redhead, was raised on a houseboat. His father Fielding "Felix" Parsons was a river man. Felix married October 16, 1851 to Virginia Louise Westfall. Her grandfather, Zachariah Westfall came from Hacker's Creek to Mill Creek in 1827 and settled on Buffalo Lick Run of Tug Fork. Virginia's father was Andrew Westfall; her mother Mary Hyre. The Westfall family has been traced back to the 16th century Holland.

Icie, in her retirement years is known to be an avid fisherman and for the colorful quilts she pieces. A warm cheerful woman. We are all so proud of "Grandma Icie", and are proud to be numbered as her great-grandchildren. Submitted by Katharin Casto Angus and David J. Casto II

I. A. AND ROSEANNA (BARNETT) CASTO

Isaac Alexander Casto was born January 29, 1848, the youngest child of Benjamin and Sarah Shinn Casto of Parchment Creek.

His grandparents were William and Patsy Parsons Casto who came from Lewis or Upshur County and first settled near Mill Creek about 1810.

William's parents were two of the earliest families to make a settlement in the present Jackson County when they moved to Little Spruce, a tributary of Thirteen Mile Creek where they erected a small log house.

Alexander, affectionately known as "Uncle Zan," had four sisters: Martha married Elisha Stewart, Elcy died in childhood, Lucretia married Enos Barnett, and Phoebe married Alexis F. Parsons, Sr. His brothers were Solomon, Moses, Mason, Enoch, Joseph and Edmond.

While a youth, he united with the Baptist Church and with others later established and erected the Long Hollow Baptist Church.

Hearing about the Civil War from two of his older brothers who had enlisted as Union soldiers, the fifteen-year old West Virginian felt the urge to join the Army. In December 1863, the name of Isaac A. Casto was added to Company G, 13th Regiment, W. Va. Infantry under Captain Mason. Experiences during his Army service included walking to Lynchburg, Va., and back to Charleston, living in tents on frozen ground, getting a slight bullet wound in the leg, spending time under General Sheridan, and getting measles shortly after the War ended. Most of the battles and skirmishes in which he took part were around Lynchburg, Cedar Creek, Winchester, and Lexington.

During the National Election, he and other soldiers were permitted to vote. The soldiers were lined up and given slips of paper with Lincoln's name on them. A hat was passed to collect the votes. After his arrival at the end of the Civil War, he was not allowed to vote again until he was twenty-one years old, but because he was a soldier, he was privileged to vote at age 16.

When General Lee surrendered to Grant at Appomattox, April 1865, soldier Casto returned to his W. Va. home where, on March 8, 1866, he married Roseanna Barnett, daughter of William and Mary Harrison Barnett, a girl barely fifteen years of age. They first lived in a home along the Kanawha River in Mason County but later moved to Little Spruce near Rockcastle.

Isaac and Roseanna Casto

Three sons and four daughters were born to them: Vinton Casto (1867-1949), Allen Asbury Casto (1869-1955), Elisha Lawson Casto (1872-1949), Mary Lona (1875-1880), Lucretia Jane Woodard (1876-1893), Elizabeth Florence Lathcy (1879-1896), and Bertha Mae Woodard (1882-1902).

The name Barnett is spelled with and without the final "e". One of the early Barnetts, a William came directly from France to Jamestown, Va., where he married a daughter of Pocahontas.

Roseanna's brothers and sisters were: William, Elyna, Nancy, Elizabeth, Permelia, Evalina, Francis Lincoln, Beverly, Addie, John, and Emma. She had two half-brothers: McKinley and Henry Barnett.

At the age of 33, Roseanna's father enlisted in the 13th W. Va. Infantry on October 8, 1862. He had seven children at the time and had seven more after the War. He resumed farming his 600 acres farm after his Army discharge. He died in 1904.

In 1915, "Zan" and Roseanna left their farm and moved to Evans, W. Va. They lived to celebrate their sixty-fifth wedding anniversary.

My great-grandmother Roseanna died January 19, 1932, and my great-grandfather Isaac Alexander Casto died March 6, 1938. They were buried in the Barnett cemetery at Rockcastle.

I will always remember his visits to the home of my parents in Ripley — his black coat and trousers, high black shoes, and that beautiful white short beard. A TRUE GENTLEMAN IN EVERY WAY. Submitted by Grace Casto Boggess

DR. JAMES C. CASTO

Dr. James C. Casto (1829-1919) lived and practiced medicine at Staats Mill. He was self-taught but was licensed to practice medicine under the laws of West Virginia in 1867. He was also a minister and was licensed by the Methodist Protestant conference of West Virginia. He grew his own herbs from which he made some of his medicines. The Bible was always placed in his medical bag before he went to a patient's bedside. Thus, he ministered to their spiritual needs as well as their physical needs. He practiced for many years in Jackson, Roane, and Kanawha Counties while making his home at Staats Mill. His parents, George and Sarah Ours, were early Jackson County residents. Dr. Jim married Sarah Bradley (1832-1907). They raised six children that follow: Sophronia married Robert Rankin; Maggie married Benjamin Windle; Elina married C. M. Booth; Virgil married Mollie Skidmore; Holly married Virginia Johns; and Dennis married Alice Keenan.

All three of Dr. Jim's sons graduated from medical schools and became doctors. Dr. Holly W. Casto (1872-1933) graduated from Ohio State University in 1896. He lived and practiced medicine in Ravenswood. Dr. Dennis D. Casto (1867-1933) graduated from the Sterling Medical college in 1891 and was re-issued a diploma when the college re-named Ohio State University. He lived and practiced medicine in Ripley. Dr. Virgil L. Casto (1865-1936) was graduated from the University at Louisville, Kentucky in 1887 with honors.

Dr. Virgil and Mollie Casto

He began to practice in Staats Mill and moved to Ripley after the birth of his son. He practiced there until his death. In 1907 he took postgraduate courses in the large medical schools in Chicago. He was quite advanced for his day and had the first microscope and x-ray in Ripley. He mixed his own prescriptions like his father before him. "Doc

Former home on Main street (Ripley)

Virge" married Mollie Alice Skidmore in 1888. Their two children, Madaline Casto Parsons and Wendell E. Casto, lived, worked, and raised their families in Ripley.

Madaline married W. King Parsons in 1927. This was the first wedding in the now Calvary United Methodist church. Madaline graduated from the University of Charleston and taught school in Ripley. King graduated from Marshall University, taught, was with the State Department of Education, and became a successful business man in Ripley. Their three children, Robert K. Parsons, Mollie A. Casto, and Nancy S. Wilson graduated from college, married, and raised families.

Wendell married Clara Jordan and had two children, James and Jacqueline. After her death he married Addie Staats and they had one son, Phillip Casto. Wendell graduated from the University of Cincinnati and became a dentist in Ripley. All three children graduated from college, married, and raised families. Phillip also became a dentist and practices today where his father and grandfather practiced before him.

All of these generations were active in their communities, churches and professions. Submitted by Madaline C. Parsons & Nancy S. Wilson

J. M. CASTO

J. M. (Doc) Casto was born in a log house near Rockcastle, Jackson County, West Virginia October 28, 1865, to Joseph and Mariah Morrison Casto. There has been much discussion as to what the initials J. M. stood for. Some said it was James Madison others said it was John Madison. We could find no record of a birth certificate. His death certificate only listed J. M. Casto, as do all other written material that we could find about him except a marriage certificate on file in the Jackson County Court House which listed his name as John Madison.

On December 23, 1886 he was united in marriage to Rebecca Belle Barnett, born January 7, 1871, daughter of Preston Barnett and Chlora Casto Barnett of Rockcastle, West Virginia. To this union twelve children were born: Opha, October 18, 1887, married Mary Hill, two children, Mable and Pearl. Mary died, Opha then married Ellie Knapp, one son, Carl. Lloyd Preston, November 25, 1889, married Minnie Ethel Baker, three children, Basil Leonard, Hazel Irene, Denver Lloyd. Clara Ann (Doll) October 18, 1891, married Erkie Warner, three children, Golda, Gladys, Earkey Jr. Lilly, October 13, 1893, married Charlie McKinny, seven children, Lucy, Willie, Burdell, Leonard, Hazel, Ernest, Jean. Dorothy, October 10, 1896, married Clark Harris, six children, Ivy, Marie, Walter, Lillian, Myrtle, Jane. Emma, January 8, 1898, married Earl Rollins, two children, Edna Mae, Elva. Foy, January 1, 1902, and wife Lillian, four children, Marilyn, Darrell, Jimmy, Roger. Oshel and Osa twins, January 17, 1904. Oshel and his wife Helen had one son, Oshel Jr. Osa married Julius Beil, three children, Paul, Betty, Julius Jr. Lola, January 31, 1909, married Albert Kunkle, daughter, Donna June. Orville, July 31, 1906, married Nancy Herdman, eight children, Maxine, Dottie, Donald, Delmer, Paula, Raymond, Mary, Mertie. Ethel, November 22, 1913, married Roy Swick, two daughters, Sonjaetta, Rebecca.

In April 1911, Uncle Doc as he was commonly called, moved from Rockcastle area to the old Byrd Stone farm, formerly Sullivan farm on Rocky Fork and Waterloo, in Cologne District, Mason County, where he spent the remainder of his life as a farmer. Electricity was brought into this area in the mid 1940s but he never accepted the new conveniences and stayed with the old oil lamps and open fire. Also cooked on the old wood stove and used outdoor facilities.

Uncle Doc was one of the first in this area to purchase a new automobile, a 1913 Model T Ford. He later purchased a 1921 Overland. Charlie (Bear) King said his first ride in an automobile was in Uncle Doc's Model T.

On August 16, 1936 his wife Rebecca departed this life and was buried in the Mt. Olive Cemetery at Rockcastle.

In November 1939 he was again united in marriage to Mrs. Nina Stewart Sayre.

Uncle Doc was converted at the Mt. Olive E. U. B. Church in the year 1909 and expressed his trust in his Savior. He departed this life September 4, 1958 at the home of his son, Lloyd and was laid to rest beside his first wife in the Mt. Olive Cemetery. Submitted by Denver L. Casto

JOEL AND POLLY (STAATS) CASTO

Joel Casto, son of David L. and Louisa Casto, and Polly Staats, daughter of Isaac and Eliza Staats, were married October 17, 1878 and went to live on a farm Joel had bought and was located far back on the hill from the home of his parents. The house set on a large flat piece of land and the children were raised in the ways of the farmer.

Joel lost his eyesight at about the age of forty-six years due to cataracts. They were removed once, but they reformed, never to be removed again.

The children helped as much as they could. Theodore worked away from home and sent money to help out. Ernest as a very small boy would ride the farm horse through rows of vegetables and field corn with his father holding the plow handles trying to plow. Ernest would watch for objects his father might stumble on and warn him of the obstacles. In pictures of Joel as a young man, he appears with black hair and a black beard. He was very short for a man while Polly was a tall, slim woman with brown hair. Joel kept his long beard, that had turned white, until his death. Polly suffered a stroke around the age of sixty and never fully recovered.

Joel and Polly moved with Mary and Kenna to a new home on the creek close to the homes of Lizzie and Theodore. After the deaths of Polly, Mary and Kenna, the other children took turns taking care of Joel until his death. I have had different family members relate how good Joel's daughter, Anna, and family were to their father and grandfather.

Joel and Polly were the parents of: Lizzy Casto (1881-1965) married E. C. Luther in his prime years was a farmer, and carpenter, he worked on the WPA program to provide for his family, he was a laborer at Kaiser Aluminum Plant in Ravenswood, West Virginia during construction, after retirement age mowed cemeteries. Oma a housewife, jobs consisted of cooking, sewing for family and others, gardening, canning huge amounts, midwife, 4-H leader several years at Given, West Virginia, member of the Parchment Valley Extension Homemakers Club and also baby sitter for different families.

For several years both were members of the Parchment Chapel Church in Given, West Virginia, left that church and joined a nondenominational church, holding services in their home.

For them both Saturday was shopping in Ripley, West Virginia, visiting, stopping at all grocery stores for best buys. Sunday was a big day for family, friends, cooking, eating, talking, sitting around, stories, new and old, weather.

Walking, many stories told about when they had to walk to visit people, church, work, school, outhouse (until the late sixties). Luther and Oma in the year 1980 purchased their first car. They sure felt proud.

We all love to go back in memories, sometimes; but we move on to become history.

Bible, Joel 1:2-3. "Hath this been in your days, or even in the days of your fathers? Tell ye your children of it, and let your children tell their children and their children another generation."

Many patrons were waiting at the boxes to buy stamps and talk for a few minutes. Many used pennies to mail their letters. He had many, many friends on the route, all ready to help in any way they could. During the cold winter days he would often find a warm sandwich in the mail box or a piece of warm mincemeat pie from an elderly lady on Long Hollow. He appreciated it all. Every one on the route was his friend.

THEODORE AND MAUDE (FIELDS) CASTO

Theodore Casto (1883-1966), son of Joel and Polly Staats Casto married Maude Ann Fields, daughter of Frank and Samantha Catherine Hatcher Fields.

All of the children of Joel and Polly were of small stature. The three boys were all about the same size and the same black hair.

Before Theodore was married he loafed around the coal mines and logging camps playing cards and "buying time." If a man went to work at a coal mine or logging camp and worked several days then decided to move on or got homesick, and would be several days yet to payday, he would sell his time for about half of what his pay would be.

Theodore and Maude (Fields) Casto

Then the person "buying time" would finish the work period and collect full pay on payday.

Theodore met Maude Fields when he was carrying the U. S. Mail for one of his friends who was sick. He was walking to the Red Knob post office carrying the mail sacks when he met Maude in the road. They both spoke as they passed and each was proceeding on down the road when Maude turned around for a second glance. He had turned also and they must have been some magic at that moment for they were married on January 8, 1911.

Theodore had purchased a sixteen acre farm a few years before his marriage. There was an old four room house that they repaired and they lived in it until the fall of 1919.

Before the birth of their sixth child Theodore built a large six room house close to the old one. The front part of the house had drop siding on it and he had enough siding for the kitchen and dining room, but it was never installed. It was a good planed lumber and Theodore was a good carpenter. He was called on to make caskets when anyone in the neighborhood died and the lumber was used for the needs of his friends and neighbors.

Theodore and Maude were married over fifty years until her death. Two of their daughters, Helen Casto and Sybil Casto Harper, still live in the family home which is located on the White Pine Road between Belgrove and Kentuck.

Theodore and Maude are buried in the Casto family cemetery over-looking the old home of David and Louisa Casto.

The first descendant of Theodore Casto is Rosa Penelope Rhodes, who was the daughter of Theodore Casto and Esta Tenney. After Esta married Edward Rhodes, Rosa used Rhodes as her surname.

Wilbur and Gertrude raised cattle, sheep, chickens (for their own use), vegetables, and hay, and corn for their animals.

They first owned a farm at Belgrove in Washington District in Jackson County until after Robert was born and some of the infants, then traded that farm to his parents and moved to the farm at Straight Run in Washington District, Jackson County, West Virginia, where they lived until after Wilbur's death. Said farm has been sold and is no longer in the family.

WILLIAM G. CASTO

On May 6, 1888, William Granville Casto was born to Benjamin Grant and Sarah Naomi (Beller) Casto. He was born in the home of his grandparents Joseph and Mariah (Morrison) Casto and was the first of ten children (John S., born November 3, 1889; Marie, born January 3, 1892; Charles Victor, born March 11, 1894; Clarence A., born October 19, 1896; Grace, born December 13, 1897; Ethel L., born September 15, 1900; Edward Reynold, born March 15, 1903; Virginia Dare, born October 5, 1907; and Mornia Irene, born July 13, 1912). Only a portion of the foundation of the house remains today along the road leading from Rock Castle to the Mt. Olive Church.

Just before his 22nd birthday, on April 25, 1910, Granville married Cora Alice Smith (John Wyatt and Eliza Jane (Garret) Smith) at Point Pleasant, Mason, West Virginia. He farmed and hauled freight between Kenna and Ripley. Granville and Alice first lived in his parents' home on Shamblen Run from 1910 to 1913 while his parents and brothers and sisters had moved to Cleveland, Ohio. It was in this home that the first two of eleven children were born to Granville and Alice: William Victor, born July 12, 1911, and Jonathan Grant, born June 3, 1913 (died October 1, 1980).

In the fall of 1913, Granville and Alice moved to Kenna. Here, Granville continued to haul freight to and from Ripley while Alice ran the boarding house at Kenna. Granville Leon was born here on December 23, 1915 (died November 10, 1978). In 1916, Granville and his family moved to Teed Hill (Given Route). Raymond Smith was born here on May 14, 1917.

In December 1917, Granville and his family traveled by train to Vinton, Gallia County, Ohio, to the home of his parents, who had moved there in 1915 after returning to Shamblen Run in 1913. Alice and the children stayed while Granville returned by train to Teed Hill. He sold most of their possessions at a farm sale and loaded the few remaining items on his freight wagon and started a three day journey to Vinton. He traveled through snow and mud to Letart where he crossed the Ohio River by ferry. He would spend the night at people's homes along the route.

Granville had purchased about 120 acres of land on Abney Road in Ewington and started a produce and dairy farm. The produce was trucked to market in Charleston by way of the old Route 17 that followed along the north side of the Kanawha River. By 1945 he no longer raised produce and switched entirely to dairy farming. It was here on the farm that the remaining seven children were born: Naomi Jane, born March 10, 1919; Edward Clayton, born February 16, 1924 (died August 9, 1924); Stanley Eugene, born June 28, 1922 (died April 13, 1945); Elizabeth Marie, born February 20, 1924; James Allen, born August 5, 1926; William Harold, born February 28, 1928; and Annalu, born August 17, 1929.

In August 1948, Granville and Alice began building a home in Vinton which was completed about a year later. They lived there until their deaths: Granville, July 9, 1975, and Alice, April 16, 1981. Alice and Granville were affectionately known as "Mom and Pop" by family and friends. Although Pop never officially retired from farming, in about 1965, Jim assumed management of the farm. Pop was always there to lend a hand and later in his spare time served as mayor of Vinton.

WILLIAM RICHARD AND HANNAH M. CASTO

The many grandchildren wish to contribute this article as a tribute to our grandparents, William Richard and Hannah Margaret Casto who were married at Rockcastle on February 1, 1877.

William Richard was born in 1856, second son of Joseph and Mariah (Morrison) Casto. Joseph was born in 1826, the first born to Benjamin and Sarah (Shinn) Casto. Benjamin was born in 1799 on the Buckhannon River at French Creek, Randolph County, Virginia. He was a son of William C. Casto, Sr. and supposedly Hannah (Bonnett) Casto who died before 1810. Sarah was the daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Hyde) Shinn, and the descendant of Quaker John Shinn who arrived in New Jersey in 1676. William C. Casto Sr. and his second wife Margaret, came to Jackson County around 1815 and settled in the neighborhood of what is now Cedar Lakes.

Hanna Margaret was born in 1859, the ninth child of Elijah and Mary (Sayre) Little, who married in Mason County in 1844. They were the parents of thirteen children.

To this union were born fifteen children, four of which preceded them in death: Perry Clayton, Viona, Orville Estel and another died at birth. The eleven raised to maturity were:

W. R. Casto home at Rockcastle

William Richard operated a store and mill at Rockcastle where he made many warm friends. Hannah Margaret was known as a mother to the community and much loved by all children, especially her grandchildren, who now fondly remember the happy days spent at her house on weekends and summer vacations. This was clearly evident in the poem written by Aubrey Hancel Kay, a grandson who spent his childhood days at Rockcastle. His grandfather was the miller mentioned in this poem, as well as owner of the general store.

OUT AT OLD ROCKCASTLE

Up the dusty road I wander,
Collecting mem'ries long asunder;
A turn by the brook where once was a mill,
There's nothing there now, but a memory still;
Where I watched once as a boy, the millers skill;
Out at old Rockcastle.

The blacksmith shop beside the road
Has carried unwell the heavy load;
Of relentless storms and time that wore;
The old clapboard walls, and askew door,
And caved in roof and rusty blower —
Out at old Rockcastle.

The grandest building of them all,
General store and Odd Fellow's Hall,
Stands proud yet with majestic power,
On its grand wide porch I played by the hour,
Or run to its cover from a summer shower —
Out at old Rockcastle.

The swinging foot bridge still is there,
In spite of years of ceaseless wear,
Its cables bound to huge oak trees,
Swaying still in a light summer breeze,
Or bearing footsteps in a winters freeze —
Out at old Rockcastle.

The one room school is there yet, too
Blanketed under a sky of blue —
With rolling hills or undotted green,
Giving it background of beauty serene,
Stands the Bethel School proud as a queen,
Out at old Rockcastle.

William Richard departed this life on January 30, 1923. Hannah Margaret on January 3, 1939. Both are buried at Mt. Olive Cemetery along with his parents, Joseph and Mariah Casto. Submitted by Margaret C. Sharp and Katherine L. Stout

LAWRENCE S. CAVENDISH

Lawrence Cavendish and Larna Bartlett were married in 1942 while living in Summers County, West Virginia. Ancestors of both families arrived in the thirteen original colonies and settled in Virginia about 1780. The Bartletts migrated to Harrison County and the Cavendishes to Fayette County in what is now West Virginia.

Shortly after marriage, Lawrence was to spend more than three years in India with the U. S. Army during WWII. Larna moved to Charleston, West Virginia to attend business college and later worked for the Du Pont Company.

Following WWII and graduate school at WVU, the Cavendishes moved to Ripley in 1946. Lawrence was employed as Vocational Agriculture teacher and advisor for the Ripley Chapter of Future Farmers of America.

It was here that the Cavendish children were born and spent their early years. Bonnie was born in November 1946, Stanley in December 1947 and Michael in June 1955.

Some of the highlights of Cavendish's tenure in Jackson County include the awards received by the Ripley FFA chapter. In addition to several individual awards by chapter FFA members, the chapter was awarded the State and American Gold Emblem award, which is the highest award given to FFA Chapters. This continued for several years.

Also during this period the Ripley FFA chapter, as a part of the Jackson County Agricultural Council, cooperated with other local and state agencies in a "Land Use Day" on September 15, 1949. This was a total "Face Lifting" of the Jackson County Farm located near Cottageville where a conservation program was put in place in one day instead of several years it would have required for an individual. Several thousand spectators from a wide area came to watch the "Face Lifting" operation. This farm is now the site of the Jackson County Fair.

Another special event that took place in 1949 was the establishment of the State FFA-FHA Camp by the West Virginia Legislature. A team of persons and organizations including the Chamber of Commerce, the Jackson Herald, Ripley FFA Chapter, local politicians and many interested citizens went to work to have the FFA-FHA Camp located in Jackson County. With the help of the Jackson County Commission, the Easter Farms near Salt Hill were purchased and offered as the site for the camp. This was accepted by the West Virginia Board of Education and the camp became a reality for Jackson County.

In 1952 Cavendish was transferred from Ripley High School to develop the new camping facility which was to become known as Cedar Lakes. Cavendish remained at Cedar Lakes until 1964 when he moved on to work for the WVU Cooperative Extension Service. Submitted by L. S. Cavendish

CHANCEY

The pioneer ancestors of the Chancey families of Jackson County and surrounding areas were Hiram and Isabel (Meadows) Chancey, who settled in the area early in 1825. Hiram (ca 1794-1865), the son of Roswell and Content Chancey, was born in New York — possibly in the Steuben County area where his father had land as early as 1796. Roswell (1770-ca 1845) was the son of Israel and Elizabeth Chauncey of Amherst, Massachusetts and (later) Columbia County, New York. Israel (1744-1785) was a great-great-grandson of Charles Chauncy (1592-1672), the second president of Harvard College, who immigrated to New England from Hertfordshire, England in 1638.

Hiram and Isabel farmed 200 acres which stretched along the Middle Fork of Reedy Creek. Their log cabin stood at the mouth of Fore Run near the present-day Stony Point Church. Hiram is said to have been a Wesleyan Methodist preacher in the early days of the area's settlement and he undoubtedly was educated above the common standard of the time. In politics he was at first a Whig and then a staunch Republican, especially during the Civil War. Hiram and Isabel had nine children: James, Calvary, Martha, Roswell, Andrew, Hiram, Elvira, John Jackson, Elizabeth, Nehemiah, Irene, and William Alexander.

James (1817-1875) married Polly, a daughter of Cornelius and Anna Staats, and they made their home and farmed in eastern Jackson County at Grasslick. From 1843 to 1845, James served as a Constable for Jackson County. The children of Jim and Polly were William Riley, Caroline, Ann Elizabeth, John, Roswell, Isaac, Hiram, Letha, and James.

Calvary (1821-1894) married 1) Hetty Westfall and 2) Rebecca Hall (a widow of a Mr. Wolf). He farmed along the Middle Fork and was described by contemporaries as "picturesque" and "eccentric." His children by Hetty were William and Andrew. He and Rebecca had Martha, David Horner, Alexander, Irene Alice, Permilie Catharine, Ernest Clifton, Calvary Mead, and Isaac.

David Chancey and daughters, Stella and Dolly, 1910

Martha (born ca 1823) married Noah, a son of Andrew and Elizabeth Westfall. Noah and Martha farmed in the 27th District of Jackson (ca 1850); however, she had died by 1860. Their children: Hiram, William, and Isabel.

Roswell (1824-1876) married Violetta, a daughter of Jacob and Eda Coon. He was active in Roane County affairs, being both a Justice of the Peace and a member of the County Court. Roswell was a strong Unionist in the Civil War Administration of Roane. They famed along the Middle Fork and had the following children: Jacob Tichnell, Roseanne, Isabel, Hiram Irven, and William Hannibal.

Andrew (1825-1905) married Mary, a daughter of William and Mary Stewart, and farmed along the Middle Fork. During the Civil War he was a Roane County deputy sheriff and afterwards was on the county's Board of Supervisors. Andrew's and Mary's children were Minerva Jane, George Harvey, William, Cornelius, and Susan.

Hiram (born ca 1827) and Elizabeth (born ca 1830) both died before reaching maturity. Elvira (born ca 1828) married James Hartman and moved west sometime during the 1850s. Nehemiah (born ca 1833) was living with his parents in 1850 but his whereabouts thereafter are unknown.

Irene (born 1835) married George W. Fore (1834-1909), a son of Martin and Ann Fore of Prince Edward County, Virginia. George, a cripple in one leg, kept a small farm along the Middle Fork and also taught school and acted as an auctioneer.

Their children were James, William, Elvira, Ida, Martha Tabitha, George, Bailey, Thomas Hoyt, and Susan.

William Alexander (1838-1872) married Sarah Ann, a daughter of Samuel and Parthenia Rhodes, and farmed along the Middle Fork. He served as a Union Soldier in the Civil War and was seriously wounded during the Battle of Cloyd's Mountain. The children of William and Sarah were Lelia Cora, Cordelia Jane, Martha Elizabeth, Hiram McClellan (Max), Mary Eliza, and William Emery. Submitted by Clifton Chancey and Harold Chancey

JOHN L. CHANEY PART II

Madgie Edith Chaney (Turley) was born May 11, 1898 to John Lewis and Octavia Dalton Chaney on Charlies Creek. This is in the Trace Fork area in Lincoln County, West Virginia. Linzy, Tom, Leonard, Oklahoma, and Edith were born before the family moved to Clymer Creek, Putnam County. On this 100 acre farm Robert (Jack), Dewey, Roscoe and Luvenia were born.

Life was hard for this family. The food had to come from the ground by their hands. The boys worked long hours in the fields and barns. Tobacco was raised for their cash income. Edith, being the older girl, worked the fields as well as the house.

She milked before breakfast and went to the fields after washing the breakfast dishes. She returned to the house ahead of the boys to help serve the next meal. Of course, she was excused from the fields on wash day and ironing day. Sunday was church day and social day. The boys could all play a musical instrument and sing, so the Chaney home was a gathering place on Sunday afternoon. Since Octavia preferred her children to be home, she always prepared extra food for their friends. She tolerated bean stringings and apple peelings knowing she had to go back and redo part of them. The young folks had other things on their minds besides apples and beans.

Gas was discovered on Clymer Creek and the Chaney farm was no exception. This gave John and Octavia a more comfortable and better life for their later years.

Octavia and John Chaney

John's and Octavia's families had both come to West Virginia from Danville, Pittsylvania County, Virginia. We do not know when Octavia's family came, but John told many tales about his trip over the Appalachian Mountains in the covered wagon. In 1870, John was 12 years old when his parents, with their eight children, made the long journey. The food and supplies that were packed for the trip was supplemented with birds and small animals killed daily for fresh meat. The milk cow also made the trip providing fresh milk and butter.

When gas was discovered on the farm, a young man from Tango, Lincoln County, was one of the workers. He was John Frazier Turley and he won Edith's heart and took her hand in marriage. Their marriage lasted twenty years and sadly ended in divorce. Fray, as he was called, was a good provider and loved his family. He assumed the responsibility to teach them the Christian faith from the Bible. Two daughters, Edna Julene and Artist Evilee, were born to them.

M. Edith (Chaney) Turley and Pearl Pullen

After the children were grown, Edith pursued a career in practical nursing. Again, she worked extremely hard for long hours, but she was financially independent and purchased her own home. At the age of 62, she sold her home that was in St. Albans and purchased a mobile home. At this time, she retired and moved back to Putnam County in the town of Hurricane to be near her remaining family and friends.

At the age of 80, it was apparent that she should be near one of her daughters. Edith moved to Ripley, Jackson County in 1978. Her mobile home was placed on the American Legion Trailer Park, east of the Mill Creek bridge on U. S. Route 33. She remained there five years, enjoying the easy access to the shopping area before moving ten miles west to Cottageville. Her daughter, Artist, lived in Evergreen Hills, where her husband, Howard Taylor, built a studio apartment in their home for Edith. Edith is now past ninety-one years old and still in good health for her age. She is sweet and childishly humble. She has brought happiness with her.

She has one surviving brother, Jack, living in Madison, Boone County. He is now eighty-eight years old and enjoying reasonably good health, too. For further reference, see Genealogies: Chaney, Dalton and Turley. Submitted by Madgie E. Turley and Jack Chaney

CHAPMAN/STARCHER

Mabel Louise Starcher Chapman, born May 6, 1920, is the daughter of Floyd L. and Ocie Mae Rhodes Starcher, and the great-great-granddaughter of Samuel Lewis Hays, the United States Congressman who appointed "Stonewall" Jackson to West Point, and of Jacob and Ann Staats Starcher, early settlers of Ripley and Jackson County. She was graduated from Ripley High School in 1938. In 1974, at 54 years of age, she received a BS degree in Business Administration from Morris Harvey College, now the University of Charleston, and a Master of Social Work degree from West Virginia University in 1985.

Married to William Ervin Chapman on June 4, 1938, and later divorced in 1960, she has one child, Ronald L. Chapman, who resides in Ripley with his wife, the former E. Joyce Earl Golden of

Mabel Louise Chapman

Parkersburg. A 1957 graduate of Ripley High School, Ronald graduated with a BA degree from Morris Harvey College in May 1965, and from the West Virginia University College of Law in May 1970. He was admitted to the practice of law in 1970, and was Assistant Prosecuting Attorney of Jackson County from 1970 to 1973. He served as a Captain with the U.S. Army Judge Advocate General's Corps as Chief Defense Counsel, Chief Prosecutor, and Chief of Legal Assistance and Claims with the office of the SJA, 8th Infantry Division, U.S. Army Europe, was a Senior Counsel with the West Virginia Worker's Compensation Fund, and was a West Virginia Assistant Attorney General. He is presently an Administrative Law Judge with the Office of Hearings and Appeals, Social Security Administration, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, at Charleston, West Virginia.

Mabel Starcher Chapman has one granddaughter, Jennifer Karin Chapman, born September 1, 1966, the daughter of Ronald Chapman and Anna Carol Casdorff Chapman Cunningham, formerly of Charleston, West Virginia. Jennifer was graduated from Ripley High School in 1984, where she was active in the Viking Band. Pursuing her interest in theater and stage production, she was graduated from WVU with a BA degree in Theater Arts in 1989. While at WVU she was a participant in many productions of the Theater Department in various capacities, and played trumpet with the Mountaineer Marching Band, the concert band, and the jazz band. She presently resides in Winter Park, Florida.

Mabel Chapman was a Jackson County Deputy Sheriff from 1943 through 1956. In 1957, she became the first Executive Secretary in the newly created West Virginia Department of Finance and Administration, and later was Assistant Comptroller of that department until June 1961. In her off duty hours she was the riding instructor at Coonskin Park Stables at Charleston. From 1961 to 1963 she operated Mountain State Riding School in Dickinson, where 500 students from Charleston and outlying areas came to learn horsemanship skills and the art of horse showmanship. In the latter part of 1963 she moved the school to her family farm, known as Willow Haven, in Ripley. This acreage is the only farm listed in the city limits of Ripley. It is part of the original lands of Jacob Starcher, her great-great-grandfather. In addition to horses, Hereford cattle are raised on the farm.

In 1966 Mabel Chapman was employed as a social worker by the West Virginia Department of Welfare. She worked mainly out of the Jackson County office in adult services until August 31, 1987, occasionally riding horseback to visit families in rural areas where vehicles could not be driven. She is a West Virginia Licensed Certified Social Worker, and from September 7, 1987, to present has been with Social Services at Jackson General Hospital.

Mabel Chapman has been a member of several organizations, associations, and clubs, some of which are the National Horseman's Association; state and local horseman's association; past chairperson and past secretary of the Jackson County Committee on Aging; a member of the National Association of Social Workers; a member, director, and the present president of the Jackson County Historical Society; a member of the West Virginia and Regional History Association; a member of the WVU Alumni Association; member of the Hacker's Creek Pioneer Descendants, which is the point or origin of the Starcher family in West Virginia after migrating from Pennsylvania; and is a communicant of St. John's Episcopal Church in Ripley, where she serves on the Altar Guild.

Sharing her father's love of horses, she has pursued such as a life-long hobby and profession. She has bred, raised, trained, sold, and shown quality horses for over 40 years. Her efforts earned her numerous trophies, ribbons, and awards, including state and tri-state championships. Her knowledge of horses resulted in her selection as a horse show judge on many occasions. Few of the ribbons and trophies remain, however. This is due to her practice of conducting a horse show as a graduation exercise for her many classes of students over the years. The prizes she gave out to each of her students in the shows were her own trophies and ribbons, won at countless horse shows in Ohio, Kentucky, and West Virginia.

Mabel Chapman is a very highly respected and greatly loved member of the community, and I am proud to say, "She is my mother." Submitted by Ronald L. Chapman

CHEUVRONT

In 1838 or 1839, four children of Rev. Joseph Cheuvront left their homes in Harrison and Lewis Counties, West Virginia (then Virginia), and settled on the Left Fork of Sandy Creek in Jackson County. They came by flatboat down the Monongahela and Ohio Rivers to Ravenswood, then travelled up Sandy Creek to their new homes between Lockhart and Drift Run. Some of the younger men drove a herd of livestock overland. The brothers were Aaron, Amos and James L. Cheuvront and the sister was Priscilla (Cheuvront) Powers, wife of John Powers.

The parents of these children were Joseph Cheuvront (1752-1832) and Elizabeth Elsworth (1759-1800). Joseph was born February 2, 1757 in Strasbourg, France, the son of Francis Cheuvront and Nicole Febvre. He died March 25, 1832 near Good Hope, Harrison County, West Virginia. His first wife, Elizabeth Elsworth, was born March 20, 1759 in Rowan County, North Carolina, the daughter of Moses Elsworth (1732-1801) and Anna Maria Elizabeth Henckel (1731-1824). She died August 18, 1800 near Good Hope. Joseph came to America in 1774 and although raised a Catholic, he soon joined the Methodist Church and became one of the early circuit-riding Methodist ministers in northern Virginia and north-eastern Ohio. He served as a Private in the Virginia Militia during the Revolution. Joseph's second wife was Sarah Bollen, born June 22, 1780 in Pennsylvania. She died about 1864 in Harrison County. Joseph and his wives are buried in the Cheuvront Family Cemetery near Good Hope, Harrison County.

Aaron Cheuvront

Aaron Cheuvront was born March 14, 1780 in Fredericksburg, Virginia. He died February 9, 1863 in Jackson County and is buried in the Maddox Cemetery, north of Odaville. He was married three times: first to Matilda Grant, who died in 1802 or 1803, in Harrison County; second to Sarah Richards (1782-1841) who died in Jackson County and is buried in the Maddox Cemetery. His third wife was Matilda Bolin, born June 2, 1813 and died March 6, 1887 in Jackson County and also buried in the Maddox Cemetery. Aaron's children were: 1) Isaac (1802-1896), buried in Fairview Church Cemetery in Roane County. He married first, Catherine Childers (1808-1874), second Mrs. Fanny G. Way (1836-). 2) Elizabeth (1804-1866), married William O. Maddox (1805-1841). They are buried in the Maddox Cemetery. 3) Lemuel (1808-?), moved to Nebraska. 4) Joseph (1809-), married Hannah McGinnis (1811-), moved to Nebraska. 5) Amos (-1847), married Deborah Morehead (1825-). Possibly buried in Maddox Cemetery.

Amos Cheuvront

Amos Cheuvront was born April 23, 1794 at Good Hope, Harrison County. He died January 12, 1873 in Lebanon Township, Meigs County, Ohio and is buried at Portland, Ohio. Amos served as a Private in Captain John Bozarth's Co. of the Virginia Militia during the War of 1812. His wife was Sarah Joseph, born in 1799 in Ohio and died January 29, 1892 at Portland, Meigs County, Ohio. Their children were: 1) Mary Jane (1820-1905), married John Lockhart (1815-1882), buried in Sheppard's Chapel Cemetery at Wiseburg, Jackson County. 2) Joseph B. (1822-1897), married Elizabeth Lockhart (1826-1891), buried in the Maddox Cemetery. 3) Perry (1823-1871-2), burial place unknown, married Nancy Lockhart (1830-1912). 4) Francis A. (1830-1851). 5) John W. (1832-1851). Both buried in Ravenswood Cemetery. 6) Cassandra (1835-1894), married Francis Blain (1814-1896), buried at Portland, Meigs County, Ohio. 7) Benjamin (1837-), burial place unknown, married Flora Flescher (1840-1903). 8) Sarah M. (1841-1851), buried in Ravenswood Cemetery.

James Lightford Cheuvront

James L. Cheuvront was born February 25, 1798 at Good Hope, Harrison County. He died September 6, 1840 in Jackson County and is buried in the Maddox Cemetery. His wife was Eliza England, born in 1805, died January 23, 1885, buried in the Maddox Cemetery. Their children were: 1) Mary E. (1828-), married Thomas R. (1837-1921), married (1) Rebecca Maddox (1836-), (2) Martha Currey (1837-), (3) Britanna Saunders (1858-). 5) Gideon (1840-).

Elizabeth E. and Alexander Hall are buried in the Maddox Cemetery. Edward J. and his third wife are buried in the Mt. Zion Cemetery at Mineral Wells, Wood County. The dates of death and burial places of the other children are unknown to us.

Priscilla Cheuvront

Priscilla Cheuvront was born October 22, 1785 in Harrison County. She died December 8, 1850 near Lockhart, Jackson County and is buried in the Maddox Cemetery. Her husband was John Powers (1789-), who may or may not be buried in the Maddox Cemetery. John and Priscilla are said to have had several children but the only ones we know of who came to Jackson County were Sarah A. B. Powers (-died between 1851 and 1857), married Joseph Chapman Cheuvront (1832-), and Nancy Powers (1824-). Joseph Chapman Cheuvront was the son of Thomas and Belinda (Grant) Cheuvront. Thomas was the son of Rev. Joseph Cheuvront and his second wife, Sarah Bollen, and was a half-brother of Aaron, Amos, James L. and Priscilla.

Another half-brother who at least passed through Jackson County was Enoch Cheuvront, who married his third wife, Matilda Gites (or Gates), in Jackson County.

Aaron Cheuvront lived near what is now Lockhart. Amos first settled on Nesselroad Run near its junction with Sandy Creek, but by 1850 had moved to the town of Ravenswood. He became a merchant in Ravenswood, but was ruined by the Civil War. James L. lived about a mile above Odaville near the Maddox Cemetery. John and Priscilla Powers lived near Lockhart. Submitted by Darrell Conger and Lillian Moore

CHRISTIAN AND BARBARA (RABALD) CLICK

Christian Click was born November 15, 1811, in Unterbatchdorf, Elsass (Alsace-Lorraine) Ger-many, according to the emigration papers signed in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. His name was listed as Klick. Some records indicate that in German it could have been Gluck. He died March 5, 1868, and is buried at Jackson Chapel (Mt. Hebron) Cemetery, Jackson County, West Virginia.

His wife, Barbara Rabald, was born April 20, 1815, in Batchdorf, Canton Sulz, Alsace. She died October 9, 1897 and is buried also in the Jackson County cemetery. It has been said that 75 percent of the people buried in this cemetery were either relatives of the Click or Gerlach family of which I am a descendant of both families.

CLICK

The Click family came from Balchdorf Alsace, Germany. Henrick Cluck, as it was pronounced in Germany, was my great-great-great-grandfather, wife unknown. He had one son Christian Click born November 15, 1811. On May 15, 1935, Rev. Kaiser Grsterly united Christian and Barbara Rabald (born April 20, 1815) in marriage. Barbara was the daughter of Lorenz and Barbara Mutz Rabald of Balchdorf Alsace.

Their first child, Christopher was born June 15, 1836 in Balchdorf. Then they decided to come to America. Their second son was registered as being born December 30, 1837 in Pennsylvania, but my grandfather (his son) said his father, Phillip, was born "crossing the water". Their port of arrival or name of the ship is not known. In June of 1848 Christian was naturalized in Beaver County, Pennsylvania and at that time stated that he arrived in the United States in 1837. The following children were born to Christian Click: Christopher born June 15, 1836, unmarried; Phillip born December 30, 1837, married Sarah Lesley and had six children and then married Louise and had eight children; Henry born January 12, 1843, married Jemina Carney; Andrew born in 1845, married Melissa Gray; George born December 10, 1847, married Christina Durst and had six children; Sarah born June 4, 1850, married Peter Mark Durst and had five children; Jacob born April 24, 1854, married Amanda Canter and had five children and then married Lillie Miller and had seven children.

When Christopher became a young man he came down the Ohio River settled near Millwood and built a store near the railroad and river. He then sent for his parents and family to come join him. They sold their farm for $700.00 and moved to Jackson County. Later Henry and his son Kenna Click worked in the store with Christopher. Christian bought a large farm about two miles south of what is now Mt. Alto and his sons settled all around in Mason County.

Phillip Click sent back to Pennsylvania for his childhood sweetheart, Sarah Rebecca Lesley, to come down on the train to become his wife. Robert and Francis were married on December 29, 1886 at the home of her parents in Mt. Alto by B. R. Ridenour. They moved to Jackson County to the Dutch Ridge, Clarksburg Road. My parents William Phillip Click and Amelia Caroline Hussell (born February 24, 1892) were married on September 7, 1910 at Pomeroy, Ohio. They lived on his father's farm with his parents the first year they were married. It was there that their first child was born, Violet Leona Click (July 4, 1911). COAST-FLOYD

John Coast, the first of the Coast family to live in Jackson County had immigrated from England with his father and one brother. He came to Jackson County and married Ellanor Ferguson, daughter of Jas Ferguson, of Jackson County, originally from Ireland.

He had two sons, George W. and John F. Coast and daughters Frances and Leota. Both sons had farms near Mud Run. In 1872, John F. (1852-1931) married Malinda Boyce Parsons (1844-1892) widow of Armstrong Parsons. Children of this marriage were Charley McKeever Coast, Addie Coast Cook, Erma Coast, and Mattie Coast Conley. After Malinda's death, John married Florence Morgan of Sandyville. Children of this marriage were Otis, Foster, Edith, and John.

Charley Coast (1875-1944) was a cattle dealer of Meigs County, Ohio and Jackson County, West Virginia. He married Hattie McKay of Meigs County and built his cattle business in both Portland, Ohio, and Ravenswood, West Virginia. One daughter was born of this marriage, Helen Coast Hayes, who resides on what was McKay family land in Portland, Ohio. This marriage ended in divorce in 1921. Charley Coast resided for some time in Ravenswood. The Ravenswood News of May 2, 1918, published a front page story about

Mr. Coast which stated that he started dealing in cattle at age 15 and began shipping to markets "25 years ago." It reports a shipment of 85 full cattle cars to Pittsburg "his favorite market," his selling of war bonds and stamps, and urging beef production for the war effort.

In the January 8, 1925, edition, The News published a front page account entitled "Coast-Floyd" of "a very pretty wedding" of Charley M. Coast and Georgia Floyd of Crow Summit with the following description "the eldest son of John F. Coast has, for a number of years, been engaged in the farming-cattle shipping industry. Charley is kind, affable, big-hearted, and numbers his friends among young and old by the score."

The bride, Georgia Floyd, is described as "a lady in all that the word implies, a competent home-keeper and a public school teacher of marked success and ability." They resided on the farm at Comet (now called Crooked Run). Mr. Coast would purchase cattle in the late summer and fall, and winter them on corn grown on the farm. His daughter remembers the spring cattle drives, when the drivers would start rounding up the cattle before dawn and drive them to the B & O Depot at Ravenswood where they were loaded on train and shipped to markets at Pittsburg and Cincinnati. He was one of those instrumental in establishing the Jackson County Livestock Market behind the B & O train station in Ripley. The Jackson Herald of March 11, 1943, ran a front page story and picture of Mr. Coast addressing a sale at the Ripley Livestock Company, with the text of his speech urging cattle growers to produce more beef for the "brave boys who are risking all for their country." He died in 1944. At the time of his death, he was a member of the Comet M. E. Church, the Board of Directors of the Jackson County Bank, the Cattleman's Association, and the Ravenswood Lion's Club. Survivors included his wife, Georgia, and two daughters, Helen Coast Hayes and Willa May Coast.

Charley and Georgia F. Coast

Georgia Floyd Coast (1885-1964) was the daughter of David L. Floyd (1857-1924) and Sarah Elizabeth Cole Floyd (1860-1935). The families of David L. Floyd and Joseph E. Cole moved from Marion County to Jackson County in 1891 to remove their families from what they called the "dangerous and lawless" conditions that accompanied the opening of oil fields near Mannington, Marion County. David Floyd purchased a farm at Crow Summit, now Crooked Run. The large old farmhouse had a tradition as a safe harbor for fleeing Confederates during the Civil War where a capture and shooting had allegedly taken place. The house burned in the 1940s; the farm is now the home of veterinarian Dr. Paul Shockey, great-grandson of George W. Coast, mentioned earlier in this account. The Joseph Cole family lived on the adjoining farm. Joseph Cole's daughter, Sara Elizabeth, married David L. Floyd, March 27, 1879. Children were Ira, Georgia, William, and Leslie. Mr. Floyd's obituary states that he was one of those who helped establish the Comet M. E. Church in that community. Comet school was built on the southwest edge of his farm on a half acre he deeded to the Jackson County Board of Education.

Georgia Floyd, following a family tradition, prepared for a teaching career. She attended Lee Normal School in Ripley and traveled by train to take classes at Marshall College. Her great-uncle, Grant Floyd, school-master in Marion County, was credited in the press for first introducing daily prayer into the public schools of West Virginia. She taught from 1901 to 1925 in the public elementary schools of Jackson and Ohio counties beginning and ending her teaching career at Comet School.

Willa May, daughter of Charley and Georgia Coast, taught at Ripley High School from 1949 to 1986. She married Charles "Skip" McGinley in 1949. Both have been active in community affairs and upon his death in 1984, Willa was appointed to Ripley City Council. She served 1 1/2 terms as council member, 1 1/2 terms as recorder, and is now serving as Mayor. They reared four children. Submitted by Willa McGinley and John McGinley

John Coast was born in Kintyre, Ireland about 1815. His wife, Eleanor Ferguson, was also born in Ireland about 1822.

John was in debtors prison. He owed the amount of two pounds and couldn't pay. So they cut two pounds of flesh from his hip and put his family on ship for the new world. Naturally, he carried this scar to his grave. They eventually settled on Sycamore Creek, after settling on Wheeling Island first. They and their family floated down the Ohio River on a raft.

They raised seven children: Mary, James, Charles T., John, Jane, Louisa, and George W.

George W. (1857) married Kate Ashley, June 24, 1883 in Jackson County. Their children were Blanche, Roy W., Leota, Helen, Sara, and Artie.

Blanche married Tom Casto. Roy married A. Board and they had one son, Raymond. She died and he remarried a lady by the name of Stella. I do not know her last name. Leota married Glen King — their children were Clifford, Margueret, Katie, Helen, Iva, Lucy, Betty, Robert, and Rosalie.

Helen married Roscoe C. Smith — their children were George H., Paul C., Dale, Althea, and Alwilda.

Sarah married William Chapman — their children were Warren, Ervin, Catherine, and Madeline.

COE (COO)

Records of the "Coo" family surfaced in the 1200's in Essex and Suffolk counties, England.

The first to gain recognition was Sir John Coo (1340-1415) who was the Captain in Sir Conan Doyle's historical novel, The White Company.

The present spelling, "Coe", was not adopted until around 1800.

Thomas Coe, Gentleman, accompanied Captain John Smith on his historic voyage up the Chesapeake in 1608. His nephew, William Coe, Gentleman (1600-1645) is the ancestor of the family that migrated into Jackson County.

His son, Richard Coe, Sr. (ca 1630-1724) came to Charles County, Maryland from Groton, England in about 1651. Richard Coe, Jr. (ca 1670-1757) and his son William Coe, Sr. (born 1718 and died 1793) were born in Charles County, Maryland. William's sixth child was Presley (born 1760) in Fairfax County, Virginia, married Delilah Perry (born 1781). After the death of Presley's mother, Jane Ford Coe, the family moved to Wood County, Virginia. Two of Presley's sons: Alexander Charles (born 1803 and died 1886) father of Lysander and John Adams (born 1805 and died 1883) came to Jackson County looking for Ohio River farm land. John A. married Susan Bibbee (born 1813 and died 1905) February 28, 1833. Susan was the daughter of Joseph and Peggy Parsons Bibbee (cf. Bibbee Article, this volume).

John A. amassed a small fortune in real estate; the present County Farm, Cottageville was their first home. He served as constable of Jackson County from 1835-50, and also served as a delegate to the Democratic Convention of 1857.

John and Susan had seven children, all born in Jackson County except Margaret, the eldest, born in Wood: Margaret Jane (1834-1910), Alfred Lewis (1838-1920), Orphaney Alice (1841-1924), Fuel Perry (1844-1923), John Adams, Jr. (1847-?), Charlotte (Lottie) (1848-1909), and George Washington (1857-1928).

Orphaney married William Blake (cf. Blake Article, this volume) and moved to San Jose, California.

Perry moved to Nicholas County to supervise a large tract of timber. He and his wife, Mariah Goff, had ten children.

The remaining five children stayed in Jackson County. Alfred joined the Confederate Army in April, 1863 and served as the flag bearer in the 17th Virginia Cavalry. He fought in several famous battles including Gettysburg and was wounded at Urbana, Maryland. Alfred married Mary Piercy in 1867. Their four children were: Lewis P., Lulu Williams, Lola (Johnnie) Stewart, and A.A. (Ottie).

The great-grandchildren of John A. Coe living in Jackson County in the year of 1989 are: Gwendolyn Hughes Robinson and Aloise Hughes Bosworth, daughters of Edith Coe Hughes and Granddaughters of George Washington Coe. Bobbie Coe Fisher, daughter of A.A. Coe and granddaughter of Alfred and Mary Piercy Coe. Submitted by Clark Blake and Bobbie C. Fisher

COLEMAN

The Colemans were a prominent family in the early days of the Belleville Colony and are still prominent through their descendants in Jackson and Wood Counties. One of the tragedies of Fort Belleville in the Indian Wars was the killing of Micheal Coleman. He was shot by an Indian while eating breakfast while on a hunting trip at Falls Mills Creek, February 1793.

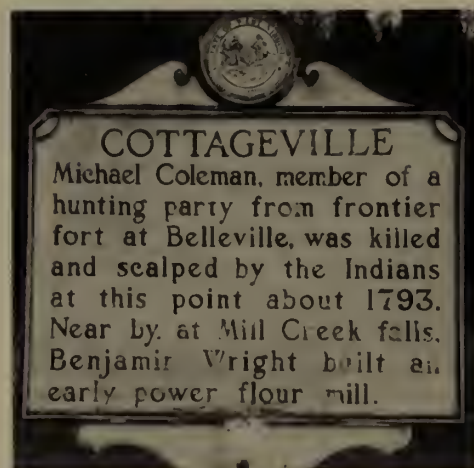

In Ravenswood in 1876 Thomas Coleman said, "I was born in the wilderness of Kanawha County in 1801". He related the killing of his grandfather. The Indians, as tradition goes, got two scalps from his head as he was double crowned, resulting in a bonus cash prize of four hundred dollars per scalp. Thomas Coleman said there was inability in the Coleman family to agree on the name Micheal or Malcolm Coleman. His Aunt Nancy Roberts claimed his name to be John but Thomas said he believed it was Malcolm. He had come with his family from near Carlisle, Pennsylvania in 1787 to Fort Belleville. Their children: (1) Samuel, (2) John married Phebe, Decoy called her "Polly", (3) James married Nancy Anderson, (4) Margaret married James Boso, (5) Mary "Polly" married James White (my ancestor), (6) Micheal Coleman married Angeline Turner in 1815, (7) Eberly Coleman married Joseph Dewey in 1815. It is thought Peter Anderson's wife was their tenth child or a younger sister of Micheal Coleman. John Coleman was a member of the hunting party at the time of his father's death. After that he became an Indian fighter and hunter in the Belleville area. In 1812 he sold land owned on both sides of Pond Creek and was thought to have gone West. John Coleman and wife Mary ("Polly") both signed their names with an "X" in the Rardon deed. There is something in the above that does not seem possible, if they were children of Micheal Coleman, they were all very young when he died but there is no account of any other family.

James Coleman was the founder of the Jackson County family. He married Nancy Anderson sister of Peter Anderson during the time that Belleville was in Kanawha County. He died in 1803, leaving two small children; (1) Thomas born at Letart Falls, Ohio on June 2, 1801 and was two years old when his father died. The mother died the next year in 1804, after which he was taken by his mothers brother, presumably Peter Anderson. He bound out to learn the blacksmith trade, but ran away when fifteen years old and hired on a keelboat as a cook. He continued with various jobs on the river and finally became a prospector. He married Sarah Roush, daughter of Henry Roush of Letart Falls, Ohio on December 23, 1831. After the organization of Jackson County he became the first Justice of the Peace in Muses Bottom. Either he or his uncle Thomas bought the old Stanley place above the mouth of little Pond Creek. They raised ten children. (2) Thomas Coleman married Mary Ann White of Belleville and they were the parents of Thomas Coleman, the Parkersburg, West Virginia lawyer, son Henry was a southern Methodist minister. He visited the Holy Land and spent years lecturing; he was the author of a book Light In The East. A sister, Mary, was the first wife of Isaac Adams the Jackson County politician. MICHAEL COLEMAN

The saga of Michael Coleman ended in the area indicated by this historical road marker in Cottageville, where he was scalped by the Indians. Much has been written about the incident in which different spellings have been used for Michael. He has been referred to as Malcom, Mecum, etc. Our best information has come to us as related by our grandfather, Thomas Benton Coleman, who was told the stories by his father, Thomas Coleman, who was a grandson of Michael Coleman. Michael was a scout, an Indian fighter, and a Revolutionary soldier, who had served in the Bedford County, Pennsylvania County Militia in 1778. He served at Fort Pitt, Fort Henry in Wheeling, and the Marietta Fort. In 1787 he came to Fort Belleville from Carlisle, Pennsylvania with his family and several other Scotch families, including the families of Peter and Andrew Anderson.

Michael Coleman marker

In February, 1793, he went with his son John, Elijah Pixley and James Ryan on a hunting expedition over the Mill Creek hills, to replenish food supplies for the Fort. They paddled down the river in their boats, known as pirogues, and up the creek to a good hunting ground. The weather turned cold and the water had fallen too low for the full boat of fresh meat to pass over the falls. Therefore, John Coleman and Elijah Pixley returned to the Fort for a supply of salt and other necessities. During their absence, the Indians attacked and shot Michael. Ryan escaped and went back to the Fort. When help returned, they found Michael scalped and stripped of his clothing, the camp plundered and all of the supplies gone. They buried Michael on that spot, which is now commemorated by the marker.

Michael Coleman was born about 1735 probably in Carlisle, Pennsylvania although it is possible that he was born in Scotland. He died in February 1793. He married Margaret unknown last name and dates of birth and marriage, seven children:

1. John, Sr. born ca. 1760 date of death unknown, married Margaret Roush (in the Wood County census 1850).

10. Sarah Ellen, born April 18, 1852, death date unknown.

Thomas Coleman, born at Letart Falls, West Virginia, son of James and Nancy Anderson Coleman. (See Michael Coleman History.) His father died when he was two years old, his mother died when he was three. Following his parent's deaths, Thomas was cared for by a maternal uncle, Peter Anderson, and his wife Margaret Anderson. When he was about fourteen, he started working at many of the pioneer jobs: blacksmith, making sugar and molasses and finally on a keel boat, where he rose from cook to "steersman" and soon became the owner of his own boat. He plied between Belleville and the Salt Licks on the Kanawha River and traded in articles of trade in early days. At a young age, he had his first farm on Pond Creek, as a result of his careful saving of his earnings. He purchased land continuously; the land where he lived, raised his family and died, was purchased in about 1820, three years before his marriage. He continued to acquire land until he owned 3,000 acres. Henrietta Fitzhugh's diary indicates also that he purchased a lot in Ravenswood. The land he acquired in Muses Bottom was part of the land originally granted to General George Muse by King George III of England for his service in the French and Indian War of 1754-1762. General Muse did not come to the area, but sold the land to Charles Smith, Sr., a revolutionary soldier, in Richmond, Virginia who did not come to the area of (W) Virginia, but willed the land to Charles Smith Jr. who did come to Muses Bottom and sold land, which continued to be called Muses Bottom.

Thomas was a Justice of the Peace, by appointment of the Governor of Virginia, and later elected by the people. He was the first Postmaster of Muses Bottom in 1836. He served fifteen years on the County Court during 1840-1856. He was always a promoter of schools, a builder of roads and churches. When the B & O Railroad came through Jackson County, instead of selling the right of way, Thomas made an agreement with the railroad, that all the trains would stop at his farm or at the Murraysville Station. Thus, down through the years, there was always easy access for the many visitors and businessmen who came to Muses Bottom.

On July 4, 1876, there was a large annual centennial celebration at Ravenswood. The two speakers were Judge R.S. Brown and Thomas Coleman, who was then over 75 years old. Judge Brown wrote a detailed obituary for the Jackson Herald, February 28, 1890, in which he wrote not only of Thomas' death, but of the man himself, as an intimate friend.

Upon his death, Thomas' land was divided among his ten children. Thomas Benton, Elijah, Jane Williams and Nancy Roberts, remained in the Muses Bottom area for the remainder of their lives. The others moved to other parts of the country. The brick house Nancy and Mr. Roberts built still stands occupied by the fourth generation of Nancy's family.

His son Henry was a Methodist Episcopal Church South Minister who made a number of trips to the Holy Land and traveled as a lecturer. He was also active in the Masonic Order and wrote extensively of that experience. He made his home in Louisville, Kentucky and had several children, some of whom are still in that area. Mary Ann Coleman moved to Marietta with her seven children during the school months so they could attend Marietta Academy. The letters written to her husband during those years described the activities and achievements of the children in school. Three of the sons received their bachelor's degrees from Marietta College and went on with other education from there.

Emmett received his law degree from Western Reserve University. Thomas received his law degree from West Virginia University. William Henry received his medical degree at Louisville College of Medicine, and remained to practice medicine in Louisville until his death. Emmett and Thomas both practiced law in Parkersburg for a period of time, until Emmett moved, in 1911, to Corpus Christi, Texas, where he practiced law until his death. Thomas later moved from Parkersburg to Charleston, West Virginia and practiced law there until his death. John and Wade were both businessmen, John in Parkersburg and Wade in Charleston.

Mary Ann's diaries reveal frequent visits from her sons and close family relationships. There are also letters written frequently to our father, Wade. In the summers, there were many family gatherings at the Muses Bottom farm, and Mary Ann continued to live there until the last few years of her life when she moved to Wheeling with her daughter

Benton Coleman home

Sophia, and died there.

The last home on the Coleman farm burned in January, 1950. On the foundation of that house stands a little white house which had been on another section of the farm, and had been lived in continuously since about 1903. The house that burned in 1950 was the last of three houses on the land where the first had been built by Thomas (1801-1890). The barn and corncrib still stand.

CONLEY

My name is Foster Cline and I was born at Frozen Camp, West Virginia. I am the second child of Okey and Clara Conley Cline. My great-grandparents, James and Frances Parsons Conley immigrated from Ireland to West Virginia. My grandfather James (Jr.?) was born March 7, 1868 in Jackson County. He married Viola Hendershot, born in Marietta, Ohio, April 9, 1870, in 1889. James homesteaded 103 acres on Big Run at Frozen Camp. It was there he cleared ground to build a log cabin. I have heard him tell how he cut and slashed brush for two weeks before the first tree fell. This land is now the site of the dam on Big Run. On this 103 acres, James and Viola raised tobacco, sheep, and cattle along with ducks, chickens, turkeys, and pigs. He ran a gristmill on this farm where farmers from all around came to have their corn meal and cattle feed ground. It was on this farm that their seven children were born: five girls and two boys.

COOPER

Artimas Cooper was born July 25, 1847 son of William and Martha Ann (Barney) Cooper. His ancestors date back as far as 1734 from Scotland and Ireland. In Kentucky he enlisted in the Army as did his father and brother. In 1863, he was too young to join in his first attempt so he went home and wrote the number 21 on a paper and placed it in his boot. When he went back and they asked him how old he was, he said "I am standing on 21." They admitted him in the Army and assigned him as a doctor's orderly, then a drummer in the Army band and finally as a regular infantryman. He served for three years and was honorably discharged with a pension.

Sarah Susanna (Rake) Cooper was born September 5, 1853 at Duck Creek Noble County, Ohio the daughter of Isaac and Elizabeth Rake. When she was six years old, her parents moved to Marietta, Ohio where they resided until the year of 1865. When she was twelve years old, the Rake family moved to Greenup, Kentucky. The year she was sixteen, she met Artimas Cooper. Their courtship lasted four years during which time he fought in the Civil War. When he returned, he married her March 3, 1873. At the age of seventeen, she was baptized into the Church of Christ of Evangelist Powers. After the first two of twelve children were born, they purchased a farm at Horners Run in Jackson County, near Garfield, West Virginia. Here the rest of their 12 children were born. Their home was a solid log cabin with a puncheon floor which was a typical home of that time. Although not as fancy as some we see today, it provided all the shelter, comfort and love that tied a family into the happy unit that it was. Artemas Cooper died April 21, 1908 at Marietta, Ohio from a wound on his head caused by a rail striking him on the head a few years prior to his death. He and his father are both buried in the Meadowdale Cemetery. At one time, William Isaac Cooper owned and operated a store at Duncan about 1910-11.

My father was Charles Clifton Brotton. He was born in Noble County, Ohio November 3, 1868 and came to West Virginia about 1873. My mother was Mollie E. Cooper who was born at Greenup, Kentucky in 1874, the oldest of the family of Artemas and Sarah Cooper. They both lived in the same vicinity and went to the same school. They married May 7, 1893 and lived in Jackson County raising eleven children. I was fifth down the line, two brothers and two sisters older than myself. At this point (1989), there are four of us living. There were seven girls and four boys. Submitted by Georgia Brotton Showalter

CORBIN

The Corbin family is unquestionably of English origin. Not much is known of the family anciently, but it has been traced back at least as far as the 13th century. The first Corbins came to America in early colonial times. A Henry Corbin is known to have arrived in Virginia in 1654. The earliest one who can be definitely placed in our ancestry is one John Corbin who was living in Richmond County, Virginia in 1692. Our line then comes down through John Jr., William, Peter, George, John W. and Oliver Perry.

George Corbin married Sarah "Sally" Jennings about 1785 and had nine children. Their oldest child, John W., was born in Culpepper County, Virginia, October 7, 1786. After service in the War of 1812, John came to the Booth's Creek section of Harrison (now Taylor) County. In 1819 John W. Corbin married Rebecca Williams, daughter of James and Barsheba Williams of Monongalia County. They became the parents of twelve children, all of whom reared large families. John W. Corbin was called as a member of the first grand jury convened in Taylor County after its formation in 1844. In 1850 John W. and Rebecca and their large family moved to Ritchie County. There they lived the rest of their days and are buried at Ellenboro.

Oliver Perry, the second child and eldest son of John W. and Rebecca Corbin, was born November 10, 1821 in Harrison (now Taylor) County. He was probably named for Oliver Hazzard Perry, the American naval hero of the War of 1812. March 2, 1845, Oliver was married to Nancy Ann Taylor, daughter of Joseph and Deborah (Gaston) Taylor. Oliver and Nancy moved to Bridgeport, Harrison County, where they became the parents of six children. When the youngest children (twins) were only a year old, the mother died of typhoid fever contracted while voluntarily nursing a neighbor's family. Some ten months later, Oliver married Mary Lindsey, daughter of Thompson and Lucy (Golden) Lindsey.

In the fall of 1858 Oliver and Mary and their children, now numbering seven, moved to Jackson County. They settled on the Pleasant Valley fork of Grasslick Creek, about nine miles south of Ripley. The reason for the move is unknown. However, it may have been for economic reasons. Jackson County was more sparsely populated at the time, thus providing a good opportunity for a man to make a living cutting timber and farming the rich newly cleared land. Oliver first purchased 160 acres from Matthias and Amanda Goodwin. He later added to this until he owned 375 acres. The Goodwins had earlier moved from Harrison County, and that may have been a reason why Oliver decided to settle in this particular place.

Children of Oliver Perry and Nancy Ann Taylor were:

Adolphus (1846-1934) who emigrated to Missouri and reared his family there.

Rebecca (1848-1919) who married Robert Jones.

Taylor (1850-1922) who married Sabra Ellen McDonald.

Lorenzo (1852-1860)

Martha Columbia (1855-1938) who married Rev. William H. Maddox.

Mary Virginia (1855-1935) who married John H. Faber.

Children of Oliver Perry and Mary Lindsey were:

Byron (1858-1934) who married Jessie Board.

Alice (1859-1938) who married Alonzo Maddox, brother of William H.

Albert (1861-1941) who married Lelia Ann Ray.

Belle (1863-1949) who married Jesse H.G. Winter.

Dorothy May (1865-1927) who married Emmet Winter, brother of Jesse.

Elizabeth (1868-1943) who married D.E. Kessel.

Draper (1870-1957) who married Tina Bowles.

Craten (1872-1909) who married Dora Fisher.

Ella (1875-1955) who married Dennis Kessel, brother of D.E.

C.M. "Tene" (1877-1959) who married Orpha Maddox niece of Alonzo.

Zorah (1881-1930) who married Claude R. Smith.

Oliver Perry Corbin died unexpectedly December 24, 1895 at the age of 74. Mary survived him by some 20 years. They are buried in the Grasslick church cemetery, which is not far from the old family home. Some of Oliver's descendants still live in Jackson County, but the majority have scattered to other parts of the United States. Submitted by Joan Crane

C. LEE CORDER

I was raised in the community of Big Isaac in Doddridge County. In 1960 I graduated from Doddridge County High School and in June of 1965 I completed my formal education upon graduation from Salem College, Salem, West Virginia.

While a student at Salem College, I experienced the pleasure of meeting a most attractive and enchanting, little blond cheerleader, Sue Ann McDaniel, from West Milford, West Virginia.

Sue Ann was one of the sisters of the locally well known group — The McDaniel Sisters. She and her sisters sang very much around the Clarksburg area and also competed in the Ted Mack's Amateur Hour in New York.

In August of 1965 we were united in a marriage that has blossomed into a 24-year romance.

Also in August of that year we began our career of producing a livelihood. We both wanted to teach school and were offered employment in other states; however, being true Mountaineers, we wanted to stay in our home state.

We arrived in Ravenswood August 23, 1965 after having talked with Clara Bell Denning and Howard Brownlee of the Ravenswood Education Foundation. Under the guidance of Jackie Whittington, then manager of Regency Apartments, we began housekeeping.

Sue Ann started teaching first grade at Kaiser Elementary, then North Elementary, where she is presently employed and has been promoted to the second grade after 24 years.

I began my career at Ravenswood High School, teaching under the great leadership of true teachers of the "Ole School", Gay Cox, W.D. Sullivan, "Pop" and Ollie Mason, Virgil Hupp and Jim Porter to mention a few. I taught only three years at Ravenswood High School but I must say I formed some very dear and lasting friendships with teachers and students alike that are still strong today.

In May of 1968 I began a career with Kaiser Aluminum and today am employed with Ravenswood Aluminum Corporation.

C. Lee Corder family, Sue Ann, Jeff, Lee, Joe

Our marriage has been blessed with the greatest gift ever — we have two fine sons. The oldest is Joe who arrived in June of 1966 and Jeff in April of 1970. They both graduated from Ravenswood High School and are true Jackson Countians, hunting the hills and fishing the streams and the beautiful Ohio of our beloved Jackson County.

Joe is employed as a driver for Hartley Oil and Jeff is a midshipman at the United State Naval Academy in Annapolis, Maryland.

Jackson County is very near and dear to us and it is our most sincere wish to spend our days here in the great valley and the almighty, separate and sovereign state of Jackson County. Submitted by C. Lee Corder

James and Martha bought 62 acres from his stepfather on McGraw Run. The McGraw School was built on a portion of this farm. All of the Corns children and many of the grandchildren attended this school, which is no longer standing. It was destroyed by a fire December 27, 1980.

After Martha died, James married Agnes Ruth Miller on August 5, 1905. James and Ruth lived for some time at Sandyville, where James operated and worked in a blacksmith shop. He also worked in Cincinnati, Ohio as a carpenter. He broke his ankle in a fall from a high building. James spent several months in the hospital. This accident eventually left him crippled. He walked with crutches or a cane for the rest of his life and had to ride a pony in his travels. James and Ruth moved from Sandyville back to McGraw Run where they lived the remainder of their lives. Children born to James and Ruth were Nole (1906), William (1907), Gilbert (1909), Delmer (1910), Ernestine (1912), Hugh (1914), Bessie (1916), Carl (1917), Merle (1918), John (1923). He was interested in anything unusual, and had a sense of humor. A gourmet, he always had a kind word for the cook. His last years were spent in Jackson County. He is buried at Longview Cemetery, Evans.

FERREL AND MAE (STEEL) CULVER

Ferrel Culver's parents were Samuel and Arthelia (Bunner) Culver, who lived on Lockhart's Fork, in Grant District. This property is now owned by Paul Somerville. The house (now a barn) is still standing. Ferrel's paternal grandparents were John and Velma Culver and his maternal grandparents were Ferrel and Rachel Bunner. Ferrel (1882-1975) was seventeen years old when his mother died. There were several younger children in the family. The John Barlow family took the baby and cared for it until it died at the age of six months. Some of the other children were placed with family and friends, while Samuel went to South Dakota to take up homesteading. The five older children, Della, Ella, Alice, Ferrel and John, chose to stay in Jackson County. Ferrel took the three younger children, Minnie (age five), Charles (age eight) and James (age nine), to Ravenswood, put name tags on each, gave them a sack lunch and a little money and put them on a train for South Dakota. When they arrived at their destination, they had more money than when they started. Minnie ended up in the state of Washington. Charley bought several hundred acres in Canada, where he lived the remainder of his life. James went to work for the railroad in Canada, and also remained there. Samuel remarried when he lived in Canada. His wife and the wife of James came from England on a small boat. It took three months to come across the ocean. While in route, a man died and they threw him overboard, because the whales were trying to overturn the boat. Samuel came back to West Virginia in 1930 where he remained until his death in 1947. Samuel and Arthelia are buried in the Providence Cemetery. John finally left West Virginia and went to California where he took up barbering.

Mae (Steele) Culver (1883-1943) was the daughter of Sherman and Martha (Archer) Steele. Her paternal grandparents were George and Amy (Lockhart) Steele. They are buried in the Sheppard's Chapel Cemetery, in Grant District. George Steele served in the Civil War. Mae's maternal grandparents were Michael and Jane Archer.

Ferrel and Mae Culver were the parents of

CUNNINGHAM

The Cunningham family of Kenna was established in Jackson County in 1842 when William D. Cunningham, son of William H. Cunningham, purchased 176 acres on the Trace Fork of the Pocatlico River.

The Cunningham clan is from Ayrshire, Scotland, and reliable Cunningham history can be traced back to the year 1150. The Cunningham Castle, "Glenarnock", which today stands in ruins, is on the banks of the Garnock River, two miles north of Kilbirney, Scotland.

Our first Cunningham ancestors arrived in Philadelphia between 1745 and 1750 from Dublin, Ireland. They migrated to the region of the North Fork of the South Branch of the Potomac River, and from there William H. Cunningham (1778-1858) moved in 1807 to Kanawha County traveling by horse and buggy with his wife and several children. He lived in Kanawha County until his death in 1858. William D., founder of the Kenna Cunninghams, was a small boy during this move.

William D. Cunningham (1802-1885) married Sarah A. Fowler, (ca. 1805-1880), da. Joshua and Levina Fowler, buried Rock Spring Cemetery. Their five children: (1) Elizabeth born 1833, married James L. McVey; their children: Alfred McVey married Tina Boggess; Samuel McVey never married, (2) Christopher C. (1836-1900) married Mary Jane Hoffman; One known son: George Summers; (3) Harrison D. Harrison D. and Rachel (Fisher) Cunningham

One contribution the Harrison D. Cunningham family made to Jackson County was the formation and building of Watts Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church South on Route 21, south side of Divide Hill at Kenna. On one acre of Cunningham Land, Harrison D., along with some neighbors, constructed a church from timber cut on the Cunningham farm. The church was completed in 1881 and dedicated by and named for Presiding Elder H.T. Watts of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. It was deeded to trustees for the Methodist Church in 1889 by Harrison D. Watts Chapel was sold by the Methodist Church to members in 1982 and continues as a house of worship called the Watts Chapel Community Church.

From this family came Young's Department Store in Charleston, started by the daughter of Marcella; Cunningham Funeral Home in Charleston, started by Everett Frye; and a Presiding Elder of the Methodist Church, Leftridge S. CUNNINGHAM

Ayrshire, Scotland is the original dwelling place of the CUNNINGHAM FAMILY. The Cunningham history can be traced back to the year 1150.

Cunningham is located in Ayr County, Scotland. The Cunningham Castle is still standing in ruins on the Garnock River in Scotland.

The Cunningham family is of Scotch-Irish lineage. The first ancestors to arrive in America from Dublin, Ireland were JAMES, JOHN, and WILLIAM CUNNINGHAM. They arrived in Philadelphia in 1745-1750. These three brothers were early pioneers on the North Fork of the Potomac in Pendleton County, West Virginia in 1753.

The only family that has been elaborated on is the family of James Cunningham and his wife Margaret. They had five children: MOSES, ELIZABETH, JACOB, ISAAC, and HUGH.

HUGH CUNNINGHAM and his family lived on Bingamon Creek and later in Harrison County. Hugh was the father of Thomas, Edward, Walter, William, Benjamin, Joseph, and Adam, an early settler on the South Branch of the Potomac.

During August of 1785, two of Hugh Cunningham's sons, THOMAS and EDWARD'S family were faced with a great tribulation. These families were attacked by six savage Indians. They resided on Bingamon Creek of the West Fork and now the dividing line between Harrison and Marion Counties. During this cruel and vicious attack, Thomas' children were brutally murdered. Thomas' wife, originally Pheobe Tucker, was captured by the Indians and was later ransomed to a great Captain, Simon Girty. Pheobe Cunningham then began a long and desperate journey to return to her husband. She joined a party to travel the dangerous forest route to the east. She finally made her way back home only to find that her husband was also ransomed by the Indians, and taken to Kentucky. Miraculously, Thomas had heard of his wife's existence on the Holstein River in Virginia and retraced her steps to be reunited with his loving wife. The Cunninghams reconstructed their lives and were blessed by God with the presence of more children.

The Cunningham descendants dedicated a stone and a bronze plaque to these Cunninghams. The plaque is located on Cunningham Run, approximately one mile from Peora and six miles from Shinnston, West Virginia. The top of the plaque reads, "Site of the Community's First Settlers, Thomas and Edward Cunningham whose houses were burned by Indians August 1785 and Mrs. Thomas Cunningham captured and her children slain."

WILLIAM H. CUNNINGHAM first appeared on the Tax Rolls of Kanawha County in 1807. It is assumed this is the same William Cunningham, son of Hugh Cunningham and brother of Edward and Thomas Cunningham. William H. Cunningham was born in 1778 in Virginia. He was of Scotch-Irish stock. He was a stonemason by trade and a lawyer by profession. He married Maria Wilson. They and their family moved from the region of the north fork of the south branch of the Potomac to Kanawha county. He appeared on the 1810 census record of Kanawha County, where he spent the majority of his life. He was placed in Southern Jackson County in 1830, when he lived near Leonard Fisher. William H. Cunningham's life ended in 1858 at the approximate age of seventy.

WILLIAM D. CUNNINGHAM was one of many children of William H. Cunningham. William D. was born in 1802 and came to Charleston with his father and family. He married Sarah A. Fowler. Instead of trading his team of horses for property in Charleston, he chose to obtain property in Jackson County and keep his team of horses. William and Sarah Cunningham had the following children: Elizabeth, Christopher C., Harrison, George W., Andrew J. and Christina. Three of these children stayed in the same area as their father. Andrew J. Cunningham is the grandfather of Rymer Cunningham, who still resides in the Divide Hill area near Watts Chapel Church. Harrison D.'s two great-grandsons, Carol and William H. Cunningham, along with their families still live in the Sissonville area today.

CHRISTOPHER CHARLES CUNNINGHAM, was born in 1835, married Margaret Jane Hoffman, and lived on a 150-acre farm in Goldtown. They had the following children: Job Parker, born 1859; William F., born 1862; George C., born 1865; Christopher M., "Charlie", born 1870; and adopted daughter, Pearl Lewis.

GEORGES CUNNINGHAM married Mildred "Aquilla" Ann Lovejoy. His brother Charles M. married Aquilla's sister, Nettie Susan Lovejoy. George and Aquilla bought a large farm on the head of Kelly's Creek located in Kanawha County. He was a farmer and a Mormon by religion. Their children were: Otto, Warren, Oather, Ola, Ici E., Christopher N. "Chris", and Innes. Chris' son, Tracy Cunningham and his family continue to live on his grandfather's original homeland. On this land is where the Cunningham Cemetery is located. The Cunningham Cemetery was dedicated by George and Aquilla Cunningham in 1913, when their daughter, Innes, was taken from this life as an infant. George and Charles Cunningham were both buried at this family cemetery as were many of their descendants. The beautification of this cemetery is the direct result of the volunteer time of Tracy Cunningham and his family.

Three known cemeteries of Direct Ancestors: Tyler Mountain Memorial Gardens, located in Kanawha County. Rock Springs Cemetery, located near Divide Hill in the Kenna area. Emma Chapel Cemetery, located on Route 34, near Jackson and Putnam County lines. Submitted by Angela Fisher and Ronda Smith

He bought a farm on Frogs Creek in Kanawha County where he raised his family. Charlie and Nettie were hard working, honest people of good character. They were always eager to help their neighbors.

Charlie had little education because he had to work and help support his family at an early age. He was a skilled builder and his daughter Affreda said, "He had a gift of being able to figure building dimensions and the needed materials without pen or paper. Friends often called on him to help in this area." Charlie's grandson is an architect. Another daughter, Neola, remembers her father taking produce to the Farmer's Market and he would stay overnight at his cousin Marcella's house during the two-day trip.

Nettie was a kind person always looking for the good in people. She was always ready to lend a helping hand in the community. She was known for Sunday dinners, when she would invite the preacher or anyone who needed a good home cooked meal. A granddaughter, Janice Sayre, can remember her grandmother's delicious molasses cookies. She would season them for days in a flour sack hung behind her old cookstove.

Charlie and Nettie always taught their children to reverence God and to have respect for others. Their children were Bradford Arnold, Roy Andrew, Jewell Gilbert, Neola May, Affreda Virginia, and Sandford Otmer. Charles and Nettie are at rest in the Cunningham Cemetery. Submitted by Affreda Goff

KEZIAH CUNNINGHAM

One of the most interesting and historic places to visit in the town of Ripley is the peaceful and well-kept Early Settler Cemetery. Here are buried many of the county pioneers, some in graves unmarked for one reason or another, but all resting in a lovely plot which has been kept neat and trim through the efforts of interested local citizens. One of the most dedicated of these workers was Adele Harpold Walsh (1906-1989). Adele's great-great-grandmother is buried here, one of the early inhabitants of what is now Jackson County. You will find her tombstone in the center of the cemetery, much deteriorated now, but with a still legible inscription reading "IN MEMORY OF KEZIAH CUNNINGHAM DIED FEBRUARY 26, 1852 AGE 86 YEARS. BLESSED ARE THE DEAD WHICH DIE IN THE LORD".

Keziah married James Cunningham September 8, 1794 and had five sons and a daughter, all born in Pendleton County. The sons were William, James, Thomas, Isaac, and Joel. The daughter, Phoebe, was married to Benjamin Rollins and is also buried here. They moved to this area before 1820, and about 1825, their son James married Sarah Parsons, the daughter of one of the county's first settlers, Charles Parsons. James and Sarah Cunningham had fourteen children and lived in the Tug Fork area all of their lives. The family contributed heavily to the Union cause in the Civil War, with Benjamin, William, Thadeous, Elias, and George serving in the army. George was killed in the Seven Days Battle for Richmond in June 1862. Sarah probably never saw her sons again after they went off to war for she died in July 1862. James died after 1870 and may be buried next to her in the Sinaiville Cemetery. Their son Benjamin married Mary Jane Graham in 1849 and a son James was born in 1850. In 1854, they moved to Indiana and a daughter Viola was born there in 1859. In 1862, Benjamin enlisted in the Union Army and served until 1865 as a First Lieutenant in the artillery. He returned to Ripley after the war and became a successful building contractor. Among other projects, he built a covered bridge over Mill Creek at Ripley, framed the St. Johns Episcopal Church Building which stood on Church Street until it was razed in 1972, and built the superstructure of the Sarvis Fork Covered Bridge which is still standing at New Era, West Virginia. The Cunningham home in Ripley was a fine white frame house at Main and Maple Streets where Dora Dell was born in 1868 and Clarence Ambrose in 1870. Dora married Jennings Harpold and was Adele Harpold Walsh's mother. The Harpolds lived in the small white cottage on Main Street at the bridge, and were friends to all who passed by.

James, Mary Jane, and Viola Cunningham

Adele and her husband Jim Walsh, and sister Anita Harpold continued to live there after their parent's death, but the end of another era has come and the house is empty now.

Mary Jane Cunningham died in 1891 and Benjamin in 1893. They are both buried in the Early Settlers Cemetery as is Viola Cunningham, and Dora and Jennings Harpold. James moved to Chillicothe, Ohio and Clarence to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Many of their descendants still live in these areas.

Adele's sister, Anita, will be remembered by many Ripley residents as their much beloved first grade teacher who taught for many years at the local school. Adele and Anita led quiet, useful lives as their ancestors did, and we have much to thank them for. Submitted by James C. Cunningham

They lived in the old Lone Oak Schoolhouse. In 1976, they moved to Evans. Howard and Neola were honest, hard-working people. They both enjoyed farming; Neola was known for her "Green Thumb" for flowers and gardening. Their daughters, Janice and Margaret, have fond memories of their father's 28 Model Ford Truck. They also remember him as a loving humorous person. Howard died June 5, 1982. He has three daughters from a previous marriage; they are Mildred Shamblin, Janet Stump, and Loraine Shamblin.

JOHN DALTON OR DAULTON (PART I)

Henry Eanes (nee Eames migrated from England). No dates are available. He married an Indian Squaw, so the census would not list her name. Legend has it, that he was disowned by his family after the marriage and for this reason he changed his name.

Arthur Eanes, born about 1760, died about February 15, 1818. He married Nellie Murray on April 3, 1783 in Charlotte County, Virginia. She was born in Chesterfield County, Virginia and died in Pittsylvania County, no dates are available. Arthur served in the American Revolutionary War in North Carolina under two separate Captains. They had one child: Arthur Washington Eanes.

Arthur Washington Eanes, born March 25, 1800, died after 1870. He married Elizabeth A. Riddle, born September 22, 1802. They were married in Pittsylvania County, Virginia, June 5, 1819. They were the parents of Mary Janes Eanes.

Mary Jane Eanes, born February 23, 1826, died (no date). John Daulton, who migrated from Ireland, married Mary Jane on September 28, 1844. They were the parents of John Dalton.

John Dalton (no dates) married Lucy Cooper, born January 1849, died October 9, 1904. (1900 census shows farm #264 owned by Lucy Cooper, so John had preceded Lucy in death.) They had five children: Octavia, Betty, Mary, Martha (who lived to be 101 or 103 years old), George, and Ambrose.

Octavia (Dalton) Chaney and Martha (Dalton) McCallister

Octavia Dalton, born January 11, 1868, died February 3, 1952. She was married to John Lewis Chaney, born March 15, 1857, died December 5, 1937. They had nine children: Silas Linzy, Thomas Eli, Elmer Leonard, Oklahoma Homer, Maggie Edith, James Robert, Alven Dewey, Henry Roscoe and Louvina (Luvenie). JOHN DALTON OR DAULTON (PART II)

The Daltons, as well as many other clans, came to Lincoln and Putnam Counties, through Virginia. They seemed to move through several counties before settling around Danville in Pittsylvania County. Their ancestors had come from England and Ireland. They became tobacco farmers before coming to the hills of West Virginia.

Whether they traveled along with the Chaney family, I don't know; but they did settle in the same area and about the same time. They were all tobacco farmers on a small scale. Tobacco provided the cash for financial needs such as taxes, clothes and staple foods that could not be grown on the farm.

The men and women worked long hours in the barns and fields but both the Chaney and Dalton families lived long and healthy lives. Martha Dalton lived the longest; she was 101 or 103 years old.

Although the women helped in the field, they knitted, quilted, served, canned and preserved food in large quantities. Washing was a hard job. Water was drawn from the well or dipped from the rain barrels. The clothes were cleaned by rubbing on a washboard with homemade lye soap. After scrubbing each article individually, they were transferred to the boiling pot. The boiling was done in a large pot over an open fire. The boiling served two purposes; it bleached and also sanitized the clothes. A large wood paddle was used to turn the clothes and to dip them out to place in the first rinse water. They were again rubbed on the washboard and put in the final rinse water called "bluing" water. The water was wrung out of each garment by hand.

The first rinse water, which was soapy, was saved, and after the washing was finished, it was used to scrub all the floors in the house.

The clothes hung in the open air and sunshine to dry, but in the winter, the clothes froze dry on the line. Although overalls were worn back to the field, they were all ironed. To iron, you used two or three iron bases that hooked onto a wooden handle. The irons were heated on the kitchen stove that was heated by wood. While you ironed with one, the other two were heating. As the iron cooled, it was replaced on the stove and a hot one was picked up for use. This rotation went on for hours until all the clothes were finished and folded. Even sheets and pillowcases and undergarments had to be ironed.

In preparation for ironing, the clothes were sprinkled. After bringing in from the line, the clothes and linens were spread flat in layers on a table. A pan of water was held in one hand and the other hand was dipped into the water and then shaken over the clothes. Each piece was then rolled tightly to cause the water to be evenly distributed through the material. After rolling, they were packed tightly into a basket or tub and covered to keep them from drying out. The "seasoning out" as it was called lasted overnight, then they were ironed the next day. If they were not ironed the next day, the clothes would mildew or sour and be ruined and would have to have the whole washing process started over again.

Octavia Dalton Chaney was the grandmother of Artist Taylor. Submitted by Tressie Chaney Martin

DAWKINS-JOHNSON

My grandparents, Lorenza Calvin Dawkins (1857-1928) from Meadowdale, and Rosella Johnson (1867-1945) from Odaville, were married 1888 in Jackson County.

Lorenza's parents were Bushrod (1832-1865) and Margaret (Wharton) (1836-1915) Dawkins. Bushrod was a grandson of John Dawkins, Sr. who came to this area approximately 1800. Margaret Wharton's parents, Abner (1774-1857) and Sarah (Cowell) Wharton came to this area around 1840.

Rosella (Johnson) Dawkins, daughter of Thomas J. Johnson (1829-1906) and Anna Mariah (Ridgway) Johnson (1836-1926), were all born in Ohio. Thomas' parents, Ezra Jr. (1805-1889) and Catherine (Carter) (1811-1879) Johnson, relocated from Monroe County, Ohio to Jackson County approximately 1872. Ezra's will is recorded in Jackson County. When Rosella was about five years old, Thomas and Anna Mariah moved their family by raft and floated down the Ohio River to Sandyville from Fly, Ohio. Thomas and Anna Mariah had six boys and two girls: Alexander, William, Joseph, Addison, Thomas, George, Mary Jane and Rosella. After Thomas' death, the son William and wife Liss (they had no children) lived with Anna Mariah. Ten years before her death Anna Mariah became bedridden from arthritis and they cared for her. After Anna Mariah's death, William sold the 167 acre farm, moved to Vienna, and lived beside his sister, Rosella. Thomas and Anna Mariah are buried in Jackson County.

Lorenza Calvin and Rosella (Johnson) Dawkins raised five boys and three girls: John Wesley (1891-1966) (the writer's father), Thomas Jefferson, George Edgar, Berkley, Frederick, Cora, Gaynell, and Olga. Approximately 1908 Lorenza and Rosella sold their property in Sandyville and bought a large boarding house in Vienna, West Virginia near the Vitrolite Manufacturing Company. Rosella took in boarders and furnished lunch for some factory workers. Grandmother's table was always set with large sugar cookies, etc.; it was always a real pleasure to visit her. Approximately 1938 Rosella sold her home, moved to Akron and lived with her daughter, Olga, until her death in 1945. Rosella and Lorenza are buried in Arlington/Evergreen Cemetery, Parkersburg.

John Wesley Dawkins (1891-1966) and Aza McDonald (1894-1986) were married in 1911. Aza, daughter of Charles and Sara Ann (Lockwood) McDonald, was from Ritchie County. John and Aza relocated to Akron, Ohio, had a family of three boys and four girls: Jennings Floyd (1914-1942), Charles Calvin (1924 -), Harold Eugene (1926-1983), Texie (1912-1913), Anna Rosella (1917 -), Norma Jean (1919 -) (the writer), and Marjorie Bernice (1922 -). My parents, two brothers and sister are buried in the I.O.O.F. Cemetery, Parkersburg.

Wesley Lee, Carol Jean, Janet Corrine, Larry A., Raymond, Norma, and Sharon Rae Singleton

Norma Jean Dawkins, daughter of John and Aza Dawkins, married Raymond Singleton (1914 -) from Braxton County, January 12, 1937. We live in Akron, Ohio, have two sons and three daughters: Larry A. (1944 -), wife Fannie (Smith), with the U. S. Army; Wesley Lee (1950 -), wife Debbie (Bushey), sales representative; Carol Jean (1938 -), husband Johnnie Jones, public school teacher; Janet Corrine (1940 -), husband Donald Davis, school board employee; and Sharon Rae (1947 -), husband Fred Snowden, owns and operates two dance studios. Our children made a gala event of our 50th wedding anniversary in 1987. We renewed our wedding vows in the Episcopal Church, and celebrated with a buffet dinner and a five-piece band. DANIEL BERKLEY DAWKINS

The name Dawkins is well known in Jackson County, especially around the Meadowdale area. However, you must go back three or four generations to get a common ancestor.

Dan (December 25, 1858-November 14, 1939) was not born in Jackson County, nor did he die here, but he loved Jackson County and in later years called it "down home". He wanted to be buried at Independence Church Cemetery as are two of his sons, a daughter, and two brothers.

He was born on Laurel Creek, north of Parkersburg in Wood County. When he was six years old, his father died as a result of Civil War injuries. His mother soon sold the farm and with her six sons and one daughter moved to Jackson County, where, in 1871, she married John Sweezy. Two more sons were born to this union: James Elsworth (Ellie), and Monroe (Mun).

On January 1, 1884, Dan married Ada Pocahontas Riley who bore him four children: Wilmer Clyde (1885-1938) married Gertrude Custer; Nina Leota (1886-1977) married Charles E. Baker; Bessie Vanlor (1888-1948) married Fred L. Abels; Rufus Lloyd (1890-1911) single.

Ada Dawkins died November 25, 1895, and is buried in Oak Hill Cemetery near Ripley. On October 15, 1899, Dan married Elizabeth Bayer of Ripley. To this union were born six sons: Delbert Berkley (1901-1987), Edwin Bayer (1903-1976), Philip Dale (1906-1985), William Rae (1908-1988), Joe Maurice (1910-1985), Carrol Max (1913 -).

In his youth, Dan worked for farmers in both Jackson and Wood Counties. While I have no record of it, I remember hearing that his first mercantile venture was a meat market in Ripley with his brother, John. Later he was a storekeeper and postmaster at Meadowdale. In 1902 he sold out and moved to New Era where he opened a store. In 1919 he sold out and moved to a farm at Parkersburg.

Daniel Berkley Dawkins

During and between these store ventures, he was involved in the timber business. He would buy a tract of timber and take in a crew to cut and saw the lumber. They would build a shanty, living in it and taking turns at the cooking. If any man complained about the food, he immediately became the cook. Dan told about the time they had soup beans. A man took his first bite and said "Man, these beans are sure salty!" Thinking this might be considered a complaint he quickly added, "But that's the way I like them."

The farm in Wood County was on St. Marys Pike and had timber on it. Dan and his boys cut the timber, some for piling for the Road Commission and some for cross ties.

The older boys began to lose interest in farming and Dan sold his bottom land. Most of it later became Worthington Golf Course.

The house burned in August, 1939, but by that time Dan was very ill with cancer. He died November 14, 1939. After a few years, the family sold the balance of the farm and it later became "Woodland Park", a development of very nice homes. Submitted by C. Max Dawkins

THOMAS J. DAWKINS

Thomas Jefferson Dawkins (1828-1919) and his wife, Florella Hawkins Dawkins came to Jackson County from Wood County in the early 1850s and bought land on what is now the

Thomas Jefferson Dawkins

Sandyville-Liverpool Road. The land here was like a wilderness and they brought their belongings on a wagon from Mineral Wells. They built their first house near the creek on what was part of the old Dumpsie Dawkins farm. The creek water served as a water supply and a large flat rock jutting out into the creek acted as a fine laundry area. Later they built a home on the top of the hill on our farm, which was near the road traveled by wagons. The stones of the chimney and house foundations are still visible.

The third house Thomas Jefferson and Florella built, was at the place of the present farm house on our farm. The roadway was changed to near its present location. It was on the front porch of this house that a meeting was held in the early 1880s and it was decided that the community would build the Meadowdale Baptist Church. I grew up at this home and now my father, Lawrence Dawkins, my husband, J. L. (Les) Sallie, Jr., and I live here.

Thomas Jefferson was the son of Thomas (1784-1864) and Susan Barnett Dawkins. Thomas was the son of John Dawkins, Sr. (1756-1840) and Eleanor Athey Dawkins. John Sr. was a descendant of Joseph Dawkins who came to America from England in 1656.

Thomas Jefferson and Florella had the following children: Frances (1851-1891) married Dr. A. H. Casto, Susan (1853-1875) married William Asbury Parsons, Billy (1854-1898) married Mary Anne McCoy, Dandy (1857-1942) married Martha Josephine Lattimer, (my grandparents), Dumpsie (1860-1949) married Susan Lattimer, Lewis (1861-1951) married Susan Stewart, Jack (1863-1947) married Leslie Trotter, Cordelia married Jim Weas, Ferman (1868-1948) married Ellen Morgan, Jefferson (Jed) (1870-1954) married Addie Jones. In the late 1800s, most of these lived in Jackson County.

Dandy and Martha Lattimer Dawkins had the following children: George (1881-1885), Hervey (1883-1885), Rosa (1885-1961), Holly (1886-1972), Ottie (1888-1984), Lawrence (1890-living in 1989), Colon (1892-1982), Agce (1896-1958), Seldon (1898-1960).

Rosa married Floyd Boggess. Children: William married Ruby Carder, Claude, Harry, Clyde married Mamie Grady, Robert married Hazel McGrew, Ruby married Ronald Holstine.

Holly married Verness Conner. Children: Eulalia married Lawrence Puckett, Thelma married William Bonto, Woodrow married Louise Frankum, Maxine married Paul Tabor.

Ottie married Albert Davis. Children: Charles, Dorothy married 1st, Herbert Mills, 2nd, Norman Hartley, Josephine married 1st, Philip Bayer, 2nd Clayton McCrady, Shirley Davis.

Lawrence married Mary Waskey (my parents) and had my sister, Martha, who married Charles Roberts, and myself, Evelyn, and I married J. L. (Les) Sallie, Jr.

Colon married Freda Winters. Children: Violet married Woodrow Smith, Ray married Wanda Roach.

Agce married Anna Beall. Children: Russel.

Jim married 1st, Elsie Skidmore, 2nd Trava Vogel.

Seldon married Margaret Moore. Children: Stephen married 1st Margaret Clark, 2nd, Sandra Cochran.

The family tree continues. Our Dawkins History is nearly complete from John Dawkins, Sr. through the ninth generation. My sister's children: Mary Canady, Christy Wade, Marty Barnes, David, Ben, and Laura; and our children: Patricia, Barbara Clelland, and Jim are in the seventh generation. My sister's grandchildren: Susan, Eric, Adam, and Jonroy Canady, Daniel Wade; and our grandson, Lucas Clelland are part of the eighth generation.

I'm very proud of our strong heritage. May ours and future generations continue to contribute much to the world around us. Submitted by Evelyn Dawkins Sallie and Martha Rhodes

MYRON EUGENE DeBUSSEY

Thomas DeBussey, my great-grandfather, and a native of Yorkshire, England emigrated to the United States in 1828 and eventually settled on 3000 acres of timberland in Jackson County at what is now known as Sherman in present-day West Virginia.

Thomas Eugene, my grandfather, eldest son of Thomas, was born in 1832, before the move to Sherman. He was brother to Robert Adolphus.

Thomas Wesley DeBussey, my father, was born at the homestead in 1868 and died in Hood River, Oregon in 1910. He left West Virginia in about 1885. He followed the railroad as it moved westward.

Thomas Wesley and Jennie (Hawley) DeBussey

I, Myron Eugene DeBussey, surviving descendant of Thomas DeBussey, and only son of Thomas Wesley DeBussey was born November 14, 1905 at Portland, Oregon. I have resided in California since 1915 in and near Pasadena. I spent some time in the service (1942-1943), and was subsequently employed by Southern California Edison Company, a large electricity company for 23 years. I am now retired and live with my wife Dorothy, a woman of German descent from Dayton, Ohio. We make our home in Sierra Madre, California, a small residential community adjacent to Pasadena. I have no offspring. My cousin Jane DeBussey Singleton and her husband, Gary, along with their children have returned to and are restoring the old homestead, making their home in a reconstructed

THOMAS DeBUSSEY

The DeBussey family became established in Jackson County, Virginia, (now West Virginia) in 1839 or 1840 when they settled at Sherman, located just north of Ravenswood on the Ohio River.

*Thomas DeBussey was born in Yorkshire, England, on March 9, 1808. He embarked on a sailing vessel from Liverpool, England in 1828. They encountered a very rough voyage. It required three months to make the trip, having been driven off course. He landed in New York.

While in New York he met and married Sarah Evans, who was born in London, England on October 2, 1809. They were married on November 4, 1830. They acquired a valuable stone quarry in Belmont, New Jersey, which they later exchanged for 3000 acres of virgin timberland in Jackson County. The total tax on the land was $2.25 a year as indicated by a receipt issued to and signed by Thomas.

They made the journey from New York to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania in 1840 by way of the Erie Canal. They purchased lumber which was bolted together to form a floating raft which carried them and their possessions down the Ohio River to Ravenswood, Virginia. Five children had been born to Thomas and Sarah prior to their move here. Two of those had died in infancy, and their sealed coffins were brought here for reburial at a site located on a hill just above the present location of Rex Miihlbach, Jr.'s sawmill on Medina road. Also buried later at that site was Sarah Evans, grandmother of those babies and mother of Thomas' wife, Sarah Evans DeBussey.

Much of the timber from the raft was used to build the barn, house and parts of other buildings on the farm at Sherman. Thomas DeBussey was an expert cabinetmaker by trade and was a musician of some note. Musicales were regularly held in their home. Thomas brought his own seraphine and played music at the old Episcopal church.

Thomas and Sarah had ten children: Thomas Eugene, born March 5, 1832 in New York. His only living descendant is Myron Eugene DeBussey. See related article.

*Robert Adolphus and Sarah Louise, twins born March 14, 1834 (New York). Sarah died in infancy.

Henrietta Virginia, July 21, 1850 (Jackson County, Virginia)

*Robert Adolphus DeBussey (March 14, 1834 to July 27, 1922) was born in New York City, but he grew to manhood among the people of Virginia, his parents, Thomas and Sarah (Evans) settling with him in Jackson County when he was four years old. In this county he enlisted, in 1861, in Company F, 4th Virginia Infantry, serving eighteen months as a private, and the remainder of his three-year tenure as a member of the regimental band. He was honorably discharged.

On January 22, 1865 he married Catherine Elizabeth Palmer, (July 24, 1845 to July 19, 1932). (See related article.) They were married at Pomeroy, Ohio following Robert's service in the Union army. He had served under General Grant and General Sherman and took part in the southern campaign and in the surrender of Vicksburg. Robert Adolphus, known as 'Dolph', and Catherine spent the remainder of their lives on their farm near Sherman, raising eleven children. (See related article.)

Lloyd and Cora Burdette

My mother was a wonderful person always doing her part of all work. She took care of her children and her home. Sunday was a big day at our house for dinner was the main meal. My mother always prepared the best of foods. I've known her to make fifteen pies on Saturday and they would all be gone by Sunday evening. She always had so much company of relatives and friends to feed. Mom always tried to please everyone.

My father also was a good dad and always provided for his family. In the winter we would store 100 pounds of soup beans, one barrel of flour, one barrel of salt fish and with all the canned foods, hogs, milk cows, and chickens, the family ate excellently all winter until spring.

Going to church was a must in our home and all seven children attended Ebenezer Church and Sunshine Grade School. I know they had bad times and good times, but they had faith that God would see them through. Submitted by Norma DeLong

As my parents before me, I have lived all of my life in the Murrys ville area. Thirty-five years ago I married William Adria DeLong also from this area. He is the son of Geraldine Cather DeLong and the late Roy DeLong. My husband and I both attended grade school at Ebenezer Sunshine School where we both have many fond memories of the school and the children we grew up with. The school was one room with a coal burning stove keeping us warm.

William A. and Norma DeLong

We are the parents of two children: Karen Sue DeLong born on February 17, 1955 who married Donald Titus on September 15, 1973 at Coleman Chapel Church at Murrys ville. They are the parents of Anthony Scott Titus (June 8, 1976) and Traci Donn Titus (June 27, 1979); both were born in Ripley, West Virginia. Our son William Duane DeLong was born on July 16, 1961. He married Deborah Bigley on November 8, 1980 at the Second Baptist Church in Ravenswood, West Virginia. They are the parents of Amanda Gail DeLong (March 2, 1983) and Jonathan Duane DeLong (September 10, 1986). Both were born in Parkersburg, West Virginia.

My husband is employed at Ravenswood Aluminum with 28 years' service. We always put our children first in our lives, me as mother staying at home taking care of them and their father always making a living for his family. Sometimes things got pretty rough, but we always managed to make out. My Motto in life is: "No matter how bad things seem to be, it could always be a lot worse."

My husband and I both attend church regularly at Milhoan Ridge Baptist Church at Murrys ville. We always took our children to church as they were growing up, today most young parents don't do that. We truly enjoy our grandchildren, we have learned you can spoil them and send them home! As I did not know my grandparents, I put a lot of energy into raising Anthony, Traci, Amanda, and Jonathan. Submitted by Karen Titus

CARLTON AND CLARA BELLE DENNING

My parents Clara Belle (Tucker) and Carlton Burgess Denning came to Ravenswood to live in 1955 when Kaiser Aluminum started construction. My father worked on construction; and when the plant opened, he was hired. He worked there as a mill operator until his medical retirement in 1981. He died October 9, 1983.

My mother was born in Ravenswood June 14, 1923, the daughter of Nora (Blackburn) and Leo Roy Tucker. She graduated from Ravenswood High, and after graduating from West Virginia Wesleyan College came back to RHS to teach. She retired in June 1986 with 36 years' teaching at RHS.

My father was born in Auburn, Ritchie County, March 29, 1923, the son of Charity Elizabeth (Morrison) and Burgess Harvey Denning. After he graduated from Pennsboro High, he enrolled in the Navy February 11, 1943, serving in the Armed Guard aboard five different ships. He received ribbons from the European, Pacific, and American Theaters. After he was discharged February 4, 1946, he worked as a driller in the oil fields in West Virginia, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Carlton and Clara Belle Denning —1950

My parents were married at the Walton Memorial Methodist Church, Ravenswood, August 13, 1950. At this point, they went to WVU where my mother earned her Master's degree.

Three children were born to them: David Alan, August 7, 1951; Michael Roy, December 30, 1954; Mona Jane, September 3, 1956. All three graduated from RHS and West Virginia Wesleyan College.

David earned his MD degree from WVU and then went on to Ohio State University to complete his internship and residency. He is now a surgeon in Huntington. On August 26, 1972, he married Norma Cummings of Huntington. They are the parents of five sons: David, Andrew, Benjamin, Joseph, and Samuel.

Michael earned his DDS degree from WVU and is currently in private practice in Shippensburg, Pennsylvania. On August 5, 1978, he married Elizabeth Neil of Bell Vernon, Pennsylvania. They are the parents of Elizabeth Jane and Michael Neil.

I earned my Master's degree from the Medical College of Virginia in occupational therapy and am currently Director of an Infant Intervention Center in Petersburg, Virginia. On April 29, 1989, I married Benjamin Sidney Pruett of Richmond, Virginia.

My parents have been active in the Methodist Church. My father was a trustee, member of Methodist Men and helped with the Cub and Boy Scouts sponsored by the Church. (My brothers earned the Eagle rank in Scouts and God and Country awards.) Some of my mother's positions at the church are Sunday school teacher, trustee, president (three times) of United Methodist Women and currently a UMW Conference officer. Both have served the community. My father was a member of Lions Club. As a teacher, my mother was involved in many activities at school — adviser for yearbook and newspaper, Student Council Sponsor, etc. She is also a past matron of the Order of Eastern Star.

We hold many fond memories of Ravenswood — church, school (band and other activities), and community (Scouting and 4-H). Submitted by Mona Jane (Denning) Pruett

DENVER DEWEESE

DENVER DEWEESE, born June 30 1908 in Jackson County, West Virginia, son of William J. and Dovie Redman Deweese, married Virgie May Skeens, daughter of Wesley and Rhoda Godby Skeens on March 20, 1927. They have two living children:

1. William Wesley Deweese, born April 19, 1928, married Bernadine Davis, daughter of Carl and Gay Skeen Davis. Their children are: Debbie, Michael, and Mark.

2. Velda Fay Deweese, born March 30, 1937, married Burt Stalnaker, son of Roy and Macel Stalnaker. Their children are: Rhonda, Randy, Danny, Larry, and Harry.

Denver and Virgie Deweese have lived together 60 years. They have eight grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren. Their home on Stone Lick Road is where they lived much of their married life, until five years ago when Denver had a stroke. This changed their life as Denver was unable to care for his farm. It had to be sold and they moved to Ripley, at first to Tanglewood Village and then to 119 Grand Central Avenue where they again have a home of their own. Denver retired from

Denver and Virgie DeWeese

Libby-Owens Ford after 33 years and ten months of employment there. Denver and Virgie have been members of the Goodwill Community Church at Kentuck for the past twenty years. Although their health is not as they wish it was, they continue to be active and visit neighbors and friends from the past.

The Deweese name in Jackson County was found as early as 1840, when four brothers bought land here. One of those brothers is Denver Deweese's ancestor. Every generation has had a WILLIAM. WILLIAM JABEL DEWEESE, son of William and Rachel Deweese and his wife Ruth Parsons Deweese are grandparents to Denver Deweese. Jabel, as he was called, was a Civil War Veteran who received a pension for the wounds received at Fisher's Hill, Virginia. A Union Soldier from Jackson County he was discharged from service June 17, 1865 and lived to father several children. It is said his check from the Government was in the amount of $90 considered a small fortune at that time. He was able to buy up several hundred acres of land and before his death it is said he gave each of his sons a large bounty of land and as his daughters married bought land of their choice and built them a home. This Civil War Veteran and his wife and many of the family that came after him are buried in the Gandee Cemetery on Stone Lick Creek. Submitted by Virgie Deweese

DR. NICHOLAS DeWITT

Dr. Nicholas DeWitt came to America in the early 1600s with Henry Hudson on a voyage to find a route to the East Indies. When they returned to Holland and told of America, Nicholas' son Tjerck Classen DeWitt must have liked what he heard because he came to America around 1650.

He died in Kingston, New York, February 17, 1700. His estate was valued at $8,000. Tjerck's son Lucas married Annetjie Delua in 1695 and died eight years later with four children. One of his children, Jan, was born December 8, 1700. He married Ariantje Osterhoudt. Jan and Annetjie's third child, Johannes was born December 25, 1739. He served in the Revolutionary War. His son John married Nancy Culbertson in 1790 and moved to what is now Murraysville, West Virginia. He was the first permanent settler on Muses Bottom. Their daughter Nancy married Isaac Sherman, whom the community of Sherman was named after. Their daughter, Elizabeth, married Steptoe Rector, son of Charles Rector. Their son, Charles, was born in 1848. He married Nancy Sherman, daughter of Abel and Priscella Anderson Sherman. Their son Wallace married Laura Benson, daughter of Wade Hampton Benson, a Confederate soldier who served over a year in a Yankee prison camp. Their daughter Mayme Rector married Otmer Salser and they had my mother Maxine Salser who is now married to Gene DeWitt, also a descendant of Nicholas DeWitt. Submitted by Rita Hill

VIRGIL DICKERSON

Virgil Armstrong Dickerson, 201 Gallatin Street, Ravenswood, was born January 19, 1898. He is the last surviving member of the immediate family of O. G. Dickerson (1868-1936) and Mary Amelia Miller Dickerson (1867-1946), daughter of Peter and Hannah Miller.

"Og", as he was known, was a lifelong member of the Methodist Church and the Masonic Lodge, a farmer, and, at one time, a Jackson County Road Commissioner. They spent their entire married life in Jackson County, living first at Three Forks of Sycamore, then Sidneyville and Flatwoods.

In addition to Virgil, other children born to their union were Francis Warren, Forrest Rose and Ruby Lee Dickerson.

Warren Dickerson (1891-1957), a WWI Veteran, teacher and banker, married Indra Sayre, a WWI Yeoman. Their daughter, Mary Jane Dickerson Norona, survives.

Rose (1895-1988), a Jackson/Mason Counties schoolteacher, married Herbert T. Henderson, now deceased. They had three children: Anita Henderson Dial (deceased) and surviving children: Phyllis Henderson Morgan and Donald H. Henderson.

Ruby (1896-1981) married W. O. Carney (1897-1987) of Ripley. Their two daughters Eloise Carney Kerns and Madeline Kay survive.

Virgil Armstrong Dickerson is a namesake of the late Judge Virgil Armstrong of Jackson County, an esteemed friend of the family. On June 1, 1925, Virgil A. Dickerson married Marie Stone, formerly of Jackson County, in Akron, Ohio. She came to Ravenswood as his bride, where they have lived since their wedding day.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil A. Dickerson, 1925

Marie is the daughter of J. William Stone (1881-1973) and Minnie Hamilton Stone (1884-1977). In the early 1900s they moved to Rochester, Pennsylvania, with their family, where he was a streetcar conductor with the Beaver Valley Transit Line. After moving back to West Virginia to their farm in Flatwoods, he spent many years as a carpenter, and a farmer. They were members of the Flatwoods Methodist Church.

Marie's paternal grandparents were George and Elizabeth Ferguson Stone, whose ancestors immigrated to the United States from Ireland and Scotland. Her maternal grandparents were Addison and Elizabeth Morrison Hamilton. Maternal great-grandparents were "Grand-pap" Hugh Hamilton and Mary Hamilton. Their son Benjamin Hamilton, when age 19, marched with his regiment of Lee's Army of the Civil War, past his home in Flatwoods en route to Old Virginia, where he died soon after while on duty.

Marie has two sisters and one bother — Effie Stone Rowan, Columbus, Ohio; Ruby Stone Click and William Arlan Stone, Ravenswood.

Virgil was a Jackson County schoolteacher before he began his career as a rural U. S. mail carrier from the Ravenswood Post Office in January 1925.

Of his 35 years U. S. Postal Service tenure, the first 20 years were spent delivering mail by horseback, then by jeep and later by car.

In earlier years he enjoyed traveling with his family and relatives on sight-seeing trips including a tour of California, Oregon and the Washington coast.

He retired on August 1, 1960. He was honored with a retirement party given by his fellow mail carriers and employees of the Ravenswood Post Office.

Since retiring, his hobbies have been wood-working and growing an elaborate garden of hybrid tea roses, a hobby which began with a small rose garden he grew when they lived on Ashton Street, their first home.

Also, Virgil and Marie enjoy visits in the homes of their married children.

In 1965 Marie joined a travel group of five relatives and friends on a sight-seeing trip to Europe and the British Isles. The group sailed from New York harbor on the SS Amsterdam on August 13, 1965. The ship docked at the harbor of Rotterdam, Holland. From there they traveled by car, tour bus, or train on the extensive sight-seeing tours in Europe, England and Ireland. On return home they sailed from Southampton, England, on the SS Rotterdam to New York.

On reminiscing about the European trip, Marie said the Berlin Wall was the only sad sight of the entire trip as our group of five, traveling by guided tour bus, passed through the Wall at Checkpoint Charlie and toured East Berlin. On seeing the Wall again via recent TV coverage, Marie joins the rejoicing with others — The Wall is down.

JESSEE AND ELZONA (SAYRE) DONOHEW

JESSEE OLIVER DONOHEW, son of Charles Melvin and Lieu Verna Sayre Donohew, was born April 13, 1909, on Cow Run (near Beech Grove), Jackson County. Jessee was five years old and his brother Russell four when their mother died in 1914. They lived with their grandparents (George and Mazilla Sayre), when they were small and other times too. While on the farm with their dad, they helped "break" cattle to work, which they enjoyed in later life. The Donohew farmers worked more with cattle than horses. They were a family of timber men. On one timber job on "Granny's Run" (branch of Cow Run, heading to Route 87), Jessee's father logged virgin timber with three yoke of cattle. He used a team of horses and a block and line to take poplars out of "Gunnell Hollow" (a tributary of Cow Run).

Jesse O. Donohew and "Old Don"

Jessee married Elzona Sayre, (born June 17, 1904) daughter of Harley and Theodosia Slaughter Sayre. They have three children: WILMA, WANDA and CHESTER. He farmed in his early years, first using one of his dad's yoke of steers, "Pete and Rum". Sometimes he had mules, sometimes horses. At one time he even had little "Ginnys". He liked to trade. When he retired from the West Virginia Department of Highways he built a blacksmith shop at his home. He had learned this trade by helping his father. He could take a piece of iron, heat it, and make most anything out of it. People came from miles around with work for him to do. He made garden tools, shod horses or "dressed" their teeth. He once pulled Virge Sayre's tooth with the same "tooth drawers" he used for the horses.

Jesse O. and Elzona (Sayre) Donohew and children

"ZONA" was from an industrious family on both sides. Her father Harley Sayre, had the reputation of being the hardest working man in the community. He lived on a farm, but worked for other farmers too, especially J. O. Sayre (two miles across the hills). When days were short he walked and carried his lantern to and from work. A wood-cutting job on Cow Run was equally long hours. He walked from Flag Rock, cut a cord of wood in one day and walked back home, for this he was paid $1.00. At that time a dollar went a long way. At times he rented farm land on Thirteen Mile Creek, going back and forth with his team. "Zona's" mother "Doshia" enjoyed working too, and passed on this gift to her girls. "Zona", when very young would go anywhere in the community and help people in time of sickness or a new baby. She could go into a home where there was disorder and perhaps sickness and soon have things working smoothly for the family. After she had a family of her own people still depended on her in time of trouble. She was faithful to her Church and attended when she was able. She enjoyed quilting with the "Ladies Aid", also quilted at home for those that needed quilts. She can no longer do these things, but is able to care for her own home.

Jessee was always good to Grandpa Sayre, who raised him. His face would brighten when he saw Jessee coming in his buggy to take him for a visit. Jessee died October 11, 1979, and is buried in the Long View Cemetery.

Their roots go back to the early days of Jackson and Mason County. Homer's father was in the Civil War; his Donohue line dating back to pre-revolutionary America. His mother, Dorothy Isabelle Rollins, was the daughter of Cyrus Rollins and Sarah Roush. Cyrus died in the Civil War, leaving Sarah at age 32 with six children to raise. MOSES AND SUSAN (SEAMAN) DOOLITTLE

Moses Doolittle was born on May 5, 1800, near Morgantown, Virginia, now West Virginia, the son of Moses and Susanna Miller Doolittle. Moses' siblings were: Nancy, Mary, Ary, Thomas, Betsy, Sally, Rebecca, Nellie, Jacob, and John Doolittle. The Doolittle family traces its lineage to Wallingford, Connecticut where its members served prominently in the early colonization of the country.

The 1810 census of Monongalia County shows Moses, ten years old, in his father's household. Living nearby were: Patrick Bord, Thomas Doolittle, David and John Seaman, and on July 11, 1821, Moses married Susannah Seaman, daughter of David and Elizabeth Bord Seaman. Susannah was called Susan by family and friends.

In the early 1820s, Moses and Susan moved to the Reedy Creek area, where the Patrick Bord and David Seaman families had already located. In 1826, Moses bought land on Mill Creek, and built a home there. The 1840 census shows Moses Doolittle living in Jackson County, near Wilding.

By 1850, Moses' work had taken the family to Kanawha County, near Charleston, and later, they moved to West Columbia, Mason County. By 1870, they had returned to their old home in Jackson County. Children of Moses and Susan Seaman Doolittle were: Ephriam T., born 1822, married Sarah Ann Pickrel in 1842, and married S. A. Ledsom in 1851; Elizabeth, born 1824, married William Burdette; David, born 1826, married Mary Miller in 1852; Margaret J., born 1829, married Peter Keenan; Rebecca, born 1833, married Terrance Doyle; Susan, born 1839, married 1st Dr. Browning Hayden, who was killed in the Civil War, 2nd Robert McGuire in 1872, died 1878, and 3rd Richard Graham in 1881; Willet

A., born 1841, married Nancy Jane Leonard; and George S. born 1843, married Alvira.

Moses Doolittle died July 2, 1877, and Susan Doolittle died January 16, 1878. Both are buried in the Early Settlers Cemetery, at Ripley. (Reference for lineage: William Fredrick Doolittle, M. REVEREND AND MRS. D. M. DORSEY

Matson Parsons, daughter of Lovell Minor Parsons and Mary King Parsons met Daniel Manning Dorsey of Nicholas County, West Virginia, while both were students at Marshall University.

When the United States entered World War I in 1917, Manning enlisted and was sent to Camp Lee in Virginia. Matson and Manning were married in Petersburg, Virginia on May 13, 1918. Manning served with the A. F. F. in France and with the 313th Field Artillery in the Meuse-Argonne. Matson (Matsie as she was known to family and friends) taught the one-room school at Parchment Valley until Manning returned from France. The couple lived on a farm near Ripley where their first child, Helen, was born.

In Ripley, Manning served as Secretary of the Board of Education of both the Ripley District and the Independent District. He helped organize Post No. 107 of the American Legion and was a leader in the 4-H Club of Jackson County.

The family moved to South Charleston, where Manning was employed as bookkeeper and auditor in the Charleston National Bank. While in South Charleston, a daughter, Dee, and a son, Dan, were born. Manning worked in the bank for six years, leaving in 1926 to enter the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky. In the summer months, Manning worked in the Charleston Bank during the week and preached at various churches on Sundays, thus helping to finance his education.

In Louisville, the family lived in a small apartment on the campus. Matsie enrolled in classes in Religious Education. Summer vacations for the family were spent in Ripley with Matsie's parents while Manning worked. Thus, Ripley became a second home for the Dorsey family in the years that followed.

Following graduation from Seminary in 1929, the Reverend Daniel M. Dorsey accepted the call of the First Baptist Church at Welch, West Virginia where he was to serve for 18 years. During the years at Welch, two sons, Donald and William were born. Three children: Helen, Dee, and Dan graduated from Welch High School.

In 1947, Rev. Dorsey accepted a call from the Main Street Baptist Church in Pt. Pleasant, West Virginia. He served this church for six years. During this time, Don and Bill graduated from Pt. Pleasant High School.

In 1953, Rev. Dorsey answered a call to the Salem Baptist Church in Salem, West Virginia. He served this church eight years. During this time the youngest son, Bill, graduated from Salem College. Reverend Dorsey retired while at Salem and moved to Ripley September 1, 1961. After retirement, Manning served as Interim Pastor of eight churches, the last being Ravenswood, West Virginia.

The Rev. and Mrs. Daniel Manning Dorsey observed their golden wedding anniversary on May 12, 1968, with an open house at 304 Court Street given by their children.

Rev. and Mrs. Dorsey were the parents of two daughters, Mrs. Jack W. Weber, St. Marys, West Virginia, Mrs. Paul Holland (deceased) and three sons, Daniel M. Dorsey, Jr., Clarksburg, West Virginia, Donald C. Dorsey, Mesa, Arizona, and William P. Dorsey, Marietta, Ohio. "Bill" (William

Rev. and Mrs. D. M. Dorsey, 50th Wedding Anniversary

Dorsey home, Court St., Ripley

P.) is the owner of Riverview Antiques in Marietta, Ohio. The Dorsey's had thirteen grandchildren.

Manning Dorsey served his Lord with enthusiasm and devotion. Loving people, Rev. Dorsey was active in many fraternal, civic, and patriotic organizations, most notably the Rotary International, the American Legion, and the Masons. Reverend Dorsey died of a heart attack on December 5, 1969. Interment was in the Fairplain Cemetery.

Resiliency, the ability to adjust to misfortune or change, describes Matsie in her later years. In 1961 she remodeled her home, also establishing a patio and colorful flower beds. Oil painting and art appreciation were new interests.

In 1974 Matsie qualified as a docent of the Parkersburg Art Center. She died July 24, 1974.

Interment was in Fairplain Cemetery.

The Dorsey home was sold to the Jackson County Commission in 1975 using the lot for parking. Submitted by Helen Dorsey Weber

LEVI DOUGLASS

Founder of the Douglass family of Union District was John Douglass (1787-1847), formerly spelled Duglas. It is said that he was a venturesome pioneer who came from Harrison County and brought his widowed mother, Nancy, and settled at the mouth of Mill Creek on the Ohio River, then Mason County, Virginia. Records show that he first paid property taxes in 1814. His wife was Elizabeth Richards (1794-1846). We are told he followed the keelboating trade on the Ohio and adjoining rivers. Some of their children were: Alfred; Miranda, married D. Hughes; Reuben, married Sarah Stone; Calvin, married Jeanette Brownell; John, Jr. (1822-1872); Nancy, married John Rand; Elizabeth, married Bartlett Pickens; Levi, married Sarah Smith; and Hiram, who was postmaster at Ripley Landing for many years.

Our ancestor was Levi, who was a farmer and stock-raiser. He had 350 acres of rich bottom land on the Ohio River where Millwood is now located. Levi (1815-1889) married Sarah Smith (1822-1891) on November 11, 1841, Reverend Moses Michael officiating. Sarah was the daughter of John Smith (1789-1878), who came to this area in 1794, and Julia Cummings Smith (1800-1855).

Levi and Sarah had eleven children: Elizabeth (1843-1926) married John Carter (1836-1914) and had six children: Rosetta (1873-1926), John W. (1874-1963), Levi (1876-1957), Oakey V. (1879-1962), George W. (1881-1899) and William B. (1888-1961). None of the Carter children ever married.

The second daughter of Levi and Sarah was Julia A., who married George Washington King and whose history is in this book.

John W. (1846-1847).

Harriett (1848-?) never married.

Nathaniel (1851-1926) first married a McCoy and had two sons, George and Holly; second, Roseline Hughes (1856-1928), and had two sons, Guy and Carl. Both Nathaniel and Roseline are buried in Nettleton, Missouri.

Lucinda E. (1854-?) never married.

George (1855) died young.

Levi Douglass family: Harriet, Cindy, Nathaniel, Elizabeth, Nan, Ginny; grandchildren: Marvin, Louise and Guy

Mary (1856-?).

Alice J. (1859-1861).

Owen (1861-1863).

Nancy (1865-1937) married Jesse Carney (1865-1929) and had three children: Marvin D. (1900-1932), Louise (1904-1958), Ulysses Benjamin (1909-1941).

The Douglass Cemetery at Millwood is the resting place of many members of this pioneer family. We are told that Nancy, pioneer John's mother, is buried on what is now the Hoff farm near Cottageville, and was not moved to the Douglass Cemetery. Submitted by Guy Douglass

DOYLE

Terence Doyle, his brother Patrick and possibly a sister arrived in New York City on July 31, 1837. These Irish immigrants had sailed from Liverpool, England on the sail ship Flavins.

According to family tradition, Terence came to America when he was 17 years old. This is substantiated by different records; however, the ship's log shows his age as 21 years. In order to get passage on the ship, he must have given his age as 21 years. Born in Ireland on February 2, 1820, he was always mindful of his heritage. He often talked to the family of his homeland and of the frightening experiences while crossing the Atlantic Ocean. The small flag of Ireland that he brought with him to America is still kept by the family today.

The brother Patrick stayed in New York the remainder of his life. Being a very frugal and industrious person he became quite wealthy and at the time of his death left a large estate to his only child, a daughter who never married.

Terence, being a very different type of individual, was not always in agreement with his brother so he left New York and came to Virginia. Although not proven, it is believed that it was here in Kanawha County that he met and married Rebecca Doolittle about 1850. She was born January 3, 1833 the daughter of Moses and Susannah Seaman Doolittle, who had come from Roane County to Kanawha County where Moses was employed in the salt industry.

By 1870 the families of both Moses Doolittle and Terence Doolittle were living in Jackson County; however both families had spent several years in Mason County at West Columbia before moving to Jackson County. Catherine Doyle Stone remembered quite well how she and her sisters enjoyed playing on the board sidewalks of West Columbia.

Terence and Rebecca Doolittle Doyle were the parents of the following children: (1) Susan Alice, born about 1852, married Ross Chauncey; (2) Margaret, born about 1858 married Henry B. Jeffers; (3) Catherine, born May 17, 1861, married first Jonathan Hill, second Elias E. Stone; (4) Genevieve Hayden born 1864, married Floyd Norris; (5) Moses B., born 1866, never married, died in Jackson County March 1899 at age 33 years; (6) Edward never married, died in Elkhorn, Nebraska October 5, 1905 at age 33 years. Two children died in infancy while the family was living in West Columbia, a son died September 25, 1854 at age one year and three months; Martha Jane born June 7, 1855.

After moving to Jackson County the DoYLES bought a farm in the Foster Chapel area. They attended this church and were buried in the church cemetery. Terence's death occurred February 13, 1897 at the age of 77 years. Rebecca died in Charleston in 1924. Submitted by Juanita K. Burdette

DUDGEON-CUSTER

My mother's family consisted of both Dudgeon and Custer relatives. I will try to include some genealogy on both sides. My mother was a Dudgeon, Ruby Custer Dudgeon, born March 4, 1887. Her father was James McConnell Dudgeon, born June 17, 1825 in Carroll County, Ohio near Amsterdam. The only information we have about his parents is that his mother's name was Elizabeth (McConnell) Dudgeon, and she died August 28, 1868. James moved his family to Jackson County, (West) Virginia in or around the 1840s.

His first wife was Harriet Slaughter, married in 1860, they had three daughters: Isabelle, Mary Jane, and Elizabeth. Grandfather served in the Civil War as a medic, he resumed farming after the war. His wife Harriet and two daughters died (of diphtheria, we think), daughter Elizabeth survived. Elizabeth married Lewis McKown (1885) and had three sons, Harry (Verta), children: Kenneth and Elizabeth; Roy (Belva), children: Roland and Jean Lee; Guy (Eta Maizie), children: Wade, Curtis, Bernard and Phillip. Lewis McKown died in 1937, Elizabeth died in 1951, at age 84.

Second marriage of James M. Dudgeon: Nancy Jane Custer (1852-1925) on September 28, 1879. Three daughters: Maude (Will Crawford) (1880-1976); Blanche (Jake Dunlap) (1884-1940); Ruby (Jesse Hamilton) (1887-1978). Grandfather Dudgeon died July 9, 1907 at his home on Locust Ridge, Jackson County.

Maude and Will Crawford adopted a son, Burhl,

Ruby, Blanche, Nancy Jane Dudgeon, Elizabeth McKown, Maude Crawford

born 1908. Blanche and Jake had three daughters, Nadine (Coblentz), Elsie (Wilson) and Julia (Morris) deceased. Ruby and Jesse's children: Sibyl (1912-1977) Kitzmiller, Opal D. (1919) Messer, Helen Louise (1921) Myers, Mark Justin Hamilton (1924-1989) wife, Caroline Erwin, and Max Ena (1926-1984), born in Ohio, husband E. Schmidt. Opal's husband died in 1962, she remarried in 1969 to Harold Rings.

When the Dudgeon daughters were married each was given equal amounts of land, my mother staying with her mother on the home place and teaching school until her marriage in 1912. Grandmother Dudgeon died in 1925 and my parents decided to move to Ohio where a high school education was more easily obtained. There were no paved roads near our rural home on Locust Ridge, so the only school near was the one-room school at Locust Grove where my mother had taught for a brief time. Though we lived in Ohio, we all loved to visit our relatives in West Virginia during the summer, especially our Aunt Maude and Uncle Will Crawford. My sister, Helen and I "helped" milk the cows ?, fed the chickens, gathered eggs, etc. We remember the drought in the 1930s when our uncle had to haul spring water on sleds to his cattle, the wells and cisterns were almost empty.

My Grandmother Dudgeon's parents were George McCready Custer and Sarah Jane Graham. (John S. Graham, father of Sarah was born in 1801 and died in 1875, Sarah's mother's maiden name was Nancy Kerr, born in 1819 and died August 22, 1853.)

George M. Custer and Sarah Jane's children: Nancy Jane (1852-1925); John J. (1853-1921); Alice Rebecca (Dorman) (1854-1911); Clara Anthus (Joe Blackburn) (1856-1912); George "Mac" (1858-1937); Richard Dudgeon (1860-1941); Abe Lincoln (1863-1948); Edwin Edward (1865-1934); Walter Winfred (1874-1964).

We do have many Custer relatives, some in Kansas, Oklahoma and elsewhere. Also our McKown and Dunlap cousins have children, but we have no record of their names or dates of birth. Dudgeon relatives: as children we remember a cousin, Frank Dudgeon, who sang and played the guitar on radio in Ohio. He was known as "West Virginia Mountain Boy" — but we haven't heard from him in years. We also remember Guy Dudgeon, maybe a cousin.

Some or most of the Custer information was obtained from the Custer family Bible, and also from a "Custar" Genealogy book produced by Walter Custer in 1949. His research went back to 1791 when the name was spelled Custard, then changed to Custar, then to Custer.

There is no space to name all children born to my sisters and brother, nor of my cousin's children. My hobbies are crocheting and crafts (dolls) since I retired in 1976 (bookkeeper, cashier, insurance agent). Submitted by Opal D. Rings

DUFFIELD

The line of Newton Duffield can be traced to Robert and Isabella Duffield who settled on Doe Hill, Highland County, Virginia circa 1750.

Robert is believed to have been the grandson of Benjamin Duffield of Philadelphia who immigrated to America from Hull, England in 1678.

Robert and Isabella's son Abraham Duffield, born in 1763 in Fauquier County, Virginia, moved to Greenbrier County at age 16 and enlisted in the Virginia militia during the American Revolution. His wife, Hannah Moore Duffield, was the daughter of Moses Moore, well-known pioneer and Indian Scout from Pocahontas County, Virginia.

Their son, Andrew Duffield (September 26, 1803-March 12, 1883) married his cousin, Jane Moore on December 9, 1827.

Andrew's son, Robert Moore Duffield (May 30, 1830-June 24, 1905) married Nancy Ann Moore on November 18, 1850 in Pocahontas County. They relocated to Jackson County, Virginia circa 1858. Robert was a Union soldier in the State Guards of Jackson County. After the war, he was the postmaster and a storekeeper.

Robert's son, Newton Bargilla Duffield (July 12, 1852-1922) married Rosetta Staats (daughter of Anderson Staats and Mary Casto) and granddaughter of Isaac Staats, founder of Staats Mills, Jackson County, in March 1874. Newton was a farmer and became a schoolteacher in 1880. Rosetta died November 4, 1897 and they are both buried in Old Sinaiville Cemetery at Staats Mills.

Newton fathered eight children by Rosetta. They were Cordella Jane (Corda) (August 10, 1881); John E. (1877); Clarence C. (April 9, 1884); Charles; William Holly (November 6, 1888); Brady (1893); Otis (July 22, 1890); Emery (Ermy) (August 13, 1896).

Newton and his second wife, Alice Fisher, had two daughters, Ortha Simms and Dorothy Bibbee.

Newton Duffield

Corda married Samuel Robert Thomas and had eight children. Ermy married and had one son, William, who had no children. Ermy also had a daughter, Vada Shanklin. Brady married Lena Griffith and had a son, Harold, who had a daughter, Mary Edna. John, Clarence, Charles and Otis never married.

William Holly Duffield (November 6, 1888-February 6, 1946) married Mamie Ester Massey on July 9, 1909 in Kayford, West Virginia. They moved to Vernal, Utah in 1910 when converted to Mormonism. Upon return to Kanawha County, West Virginia, William Holly worked as a coal miner and schoolteacher.

They had two sons, William Irvin (May 3, 1910-June 30, 1989) and Thomas Edward (October 4, 1911-June 26, 1964).

Thomas married Pauline Hastings and moved to Michigan. They had three sons: Holly, Harold and Thomas Wayne.

William Irvin Duffield married Fern Boggess and also had three sons, Gary Otis, Terry Lee, and William George. William Irvin was an electrician in the coal mines and served in the U. S. Navy during World War II.

Gary married Coralie Estep and has three children, Kelly, Gary Otis II and Todd. They divorced. Gary later married Lois Blood. Kelly has a daughter, Chloe, and Todd has a son, Lance.

George is married to Carolyn Stevens and has a son Michael. Submitted by Stuart Kirk Duffield

EMORY AND EMMA (CADLE) DUFFIELD

The Duffield line in the Virginias is traced to Robert and Isabella Duffield, who settled in what is now Highland County, Virginia, as early as 1754. Robert is likely to have been the grandson of Benjamin Duffield, who arrived in the Philadelphia area from England in 1682. Benjamin is known to have had a son Abraham, who had a son Robert. If that is the same Robert who came to Virginia, the Duffield line to their Jackson County arrival would be Robert Duffield (1610-1692), Benjamin Duffield (1661-1741), Abraham Duffield (1698-?), Robert Duffield (1738-40 - 1795), Abraham Duffield (1763-1854?), Andrew Duffield (1804-1880), Robert Moore Duffield (September 7, 1828-November 19, 1908).

Robert Moore Duffield and his wife, the former Nancy Ann Moore (May 30, 1830-June 24, 1905), emigrated to Jackson County from Pocahontas County in the mid-1850s, together with her parents, Andrew and Rebecca (Waugh) Moore. They bought 1,100 acres of timber land near Rock Castle for 25 cents an acre.

Robert Moore Duffield was a Union soldier, and served after the Civil War as postmaster and as notary public. The Duffields were the parents of nine children: Newton, born July 12, 1852; James Elliott, born March 18, 1854; Levi and Elizabeth, born January 26, 1856; William, born April 5, 1858; Margaret Alice, born 1861. Emory, born August 24, 1866; Marion, born July 2, 1869; and Ida, born June 16, 1872.

The senior Duffields are buried at Foster Chapel, their graves unmarked.

On March 12, 1892, Emory married Emma Caroline Cadle, born November 29, 1869, daughter of The Rev. William A. and Elzena Ann (Zearley) Cadle.

Emory Duffield was a teacher, storekeeper and surveyor in Ravenswood, and was elected to the state legislature in 1906. Following his two terms in the legislature, Emory headed up the land department in the State Auditor's office. The family moved to Charleston in 1909. After leaving the auditor's office, Emory sold insurance for a time before his death on December 11, 1922. Emma died September 10, 1948.

Emory and Emma had six daughters: Inez LeGrande, February 9, 1893-June 2, 1984; Bertie Gladys, January 27, 1895-May 10, 1897; Florence Helena, February 11, 1897-March 22, 1928; Flora Moore, July 29, 1899-November 26, 1980; Ruth Ann, January 6, 1904-October 19, 1966; and Esther Carolyn, January 20, 1906-.

Bertie died of whooping cough, and is buried at Foster Chapel. Inez, Florence and Flora lived most of their lives in Charleston, and never married.

Ruth married A. L. Wiley of Glen Lyn, Virginia and had three children: William Jack married Janet O'Dell of Charleston and resides in Bellevue, Washington; Margaret Ann married Dr. A. Thomas McCoy of Peterstown and resides in Charleston and Naples, Florida; David Alan married Nancy Hand of California, and resides in Centerville, Maryland.

Esther married C. Homer Workman (January 18, 1906-January 17, 1983) of Raleigh County. Their son, John Homer, married Marilyn Bennett of Carroll County, Maryland, and resides in Timonium, Maryland. Esther lives in Fort Myers, Florida.

FLOYD AND FORREST (SHIRLEY) DURST

The earliest record found for the (Derst, Darst) Durst family is September 30, 1745 when Abraham Derst sailed from Rotterdam, Holland and landed in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. His family had come from Switzerland. He moved to Shenandoah County, Virginia. Later he sold his property there and moved to the North West Territory in 1799 where he bought 100 acres of land from the Ohio Company. This was a part of the Cheshire Township now Gallia County, Ohio. He had at least eight children. One of them was David to whom he sold 40 acres of his land in 1804. In 1805 David purchased 100 acres at Letart Township, Gallia County which is now Meigs County, Ohio. From 1805 to 1813 David farmed this land to provide a living for his wife and seven children. One of them was Samuel. David joined the Army since we were at war with Great Britain (War of 1812). On his being discharged he set out for home but became ill and died.

David's widow Christina then married Reuben Smith. They sold the land in Ohio and moved across the river to Mason County, Virginia, now West Virginia.

EALY

The Ealy family of Jackson County originates from Pennsylvania. There, Harvey William Ealy, a World War II veteran met Corine Loretta Ealey. Discovering they had the same last name and thinking they were related, the couple talked. They realized they weren't related when they checked the spelling of their last names. They married and produced four children, Donald, Kay, Thelma and Harvey Ealy, Jr. who was born December 5, 1949. Harvey Ealy, Sr. passed away in 1963 at the age of 55 of a heart attack.

Harvey Ealy, Jr. was very self-reliant as a boy. He obtained employment at a milk and Christmas tree farm to earn spending money. Later he worked at a steel mill, then entered the military as a Marine.

He visited Jackson County to attend the wedding of a friend and there ironically met his own future bride, Carolyn Ann Kirk.

Her parents were born and raised in West Virginia. Her father, Gene Warren Kirk, a native of Boone County was a World War II veteran. He married Phyllis Jean Carter from Kanawha County and they produced three children, Gary Gene, John Stephen, and Carolyn Ann, who was born June 22, 1953.

Gene and Phyllis relocated to Jackson County. Gene, who had been a schoolteacher and principal, took a job as a foreman for Kaiser Aluminum.

Phyllis reared the children at home and later worked for both the state and federal government. She passed away in 1986 of a sudden heart attack at the age of fifty-five.

Carolyn Ann Kirk attended the same wedding Harvey Ealy was at and they met. The two fell in love and married. They produced two children, Elizabeth Suzanne (Lisa) born January 28, 1973 and Jason Alan, born March 1, 1977.

Harvey and Ann decided to settle in the Sherman Area with their children. With the help of Ann's father they designed and built their own home on Little Sandy Creek Road. Here, they sometimes take home lost or injured animals. They try to locate the owners and with the help of neighbors are usually successful. Injured, wild animals are nursed back to health and later released back to the wild.

Harvey, an employee of Ravenswood Aluminum Corp. has been active in community projects with the youth of Ravenswood. He has been involved with Ravenswood Little League for years.

Ann stayed home to rear two children and later worked for the Federal Government in the Treasury Department and also Ripley Apparel. She loves the country and enjoys riding their horses with her children. She is an artist and enjoys writing stories which she hopes to someday have published.

Lisa is interested in pursuing a career which involves children, possibly in the educational or medical profession.

Jason is considering entering the field of law enforcement with either the state or federal government. Submitted by Carolyn Ann Ealy

Ephraim S. Evans, born circa 1800, was the son of Jonathan and Sarah Fossett Evans. His parents were married in Monongalia County on March 12, 1796, by James Fleming. Later the Evans family moved to Meigs County, Ohio.

On February 1, 1826, Ephraim S. Evans married Rhuami (also written Ruami in deeds and other records) Wright in Mason County, Virginia, now West Virginia. She was the daughter of Benjamin Wright, Sr., and the sister of Benjamin Wright, Jr., the first County Clerk of Jackson County. They settled on a tract of land containing a little over 305 acres lying on Mill Creek at or near what is now the village of Evans. This tract of land was a part of the lands patented to Sarah Province by the Commonwealth of Virginia.

On April 5, 1828, Ephraim Evans purchased the land on which they were living from Benjamin Wright. It is said the village of Evans was named in honor of Ephraim S. Evans. Later he purchased additional tracts of land.

Ephraim and Rhuami Wright Evans had three children: Miriam F. (born November 19, 1835, died November 7, 1896), Samuel G. (born circa 1839), who later moved to Evansville, Indiana, and Oliver Perry (born circa 1842), who later moved to San Francisco, California.

Miriam F. Evans married Andrew E. Hopkins (born December 3, 1832, in Rappahannock County, the parent county being Culpepper County, Virginia, died October 10, 1857). This date of death is from County Clerk's records. His marker gives date of death as October 5, 1857. He was the son of John and Rachel Hopkins. Andrew and Miriam were married May 14, 1857, and they had one son, A. D. Hopkins, born in 1858.

On September 8, 1869, Miriam Evans Hopkins (born November 19, 1835, died November 7, 1896) married Major Henry Camden Fleisher (born October 27, 1835, died February 28, 1907), son of John and Minerva Camden Fleisher, and was born in Weston, Lewis County, Virginia, now West Virginia. Ephraim S. Evans was a Justice of the first court of Jackson County, and served on the court for 22 years. The court appointed him to join the Commissioners of Wood, Kanawha, and Mason Counties to run the dividing line between Jackson County and the other named counties. He was Assessor in 1833, Sheriff in 1840, and was also County Surveyor. He was considered one of the most eminent surveyors in his day. HIRAM FABER

Hiram Faber was born December 19, 1812 in Virginia. He learned the tanning trade, attended school and later worked in a store near Waynesboro. It was here on December 4, 1840 that he married Jane Koiner who was born April 4, 1821 in Augusta County. Shortly after their first child was born they left Virginia, first coming to Kanawha County and later (in 1845) they purchased land in Jackson County near Goldtown. A log barn Hiram built across the road from the original house in 1859 still stands. A descendant, Frank Faber, and his family now live on part of the original tract of land.

Some of Hiram and Jane's possessions still owned by descendants include a Bible, trunk covered with hide, a large basket, a stovepipe hat and a flint lock rifle with powder horn that was supposedly hid in a tree during the Civil War to keep soldiers from taking it.

Hiram died June 6, 1870 of scrofula and Jane remained at home with her younger children until 1894 when she moved in with her son, John Henry Faber and his family, who had built a home nearby on the Charleston-Ripley Turnpike. Jane (Koiner) Faber died February 25, 1908 and both she and Hiram are buried at the Rock Spring Cemetery.

Hiram and Jane's children were: William Franklin (1841-1910) married Louisa Jane Boggess (1845-1939); Louisa Mary (1843-1916) married Lewis H. John Henry Faber married Mary Virginia Corbin September 24, 1874. She was born April 20, 1855 in Taylor County, the daughter of Oliver Perry and Nancy Ann (Taylor) Corbin. Her mother died when she was one year old and her father remarried and brought his family to Jackson County, where Mary grew up. John and "Mollie", as she was called, lived on the hill above his parents' log barn until 1891 when he moved his family down in the valley to live with his mother until his new home was completed. It took two years to build and is still standing today. "Mollie" had a large loom and wove rugs for every room. She made bread every day and as many as a dozen pies at one time. The family attended the Watts Chapel Church and regularly had guests for Sunday dinner.

In 1920 John and "Mollie" sold the farm to their son Hiram Oliver and moved to Ripley where John died October 6, 1921, and "Mollie" July 1, 1935. They are both buried at the Grasslick

Hiram Faber's barn at Goldtown, built 1860, still standing

Church Cemetery on Pleasant Valley Road.

The first recorded family reunion was in 1912. Very few years have passed that descendants do not come together from near and far to feast and remember their ancestors. Submitted by Joan Vickers Guthrie and John Henry Faber

(The house was later moved due to I-77.)

My mother, Mary A. Fisher, was born October 7, 1908, the daughter of Abraham Franklin and Lona Exel Casto Fisher. At the time of her birth they were living on Divide Hill having moved there from Tug Fork in 1902. My father and mother first met at a pie supper at Cliffside School on Dudden Fork. They were married September 1, 1931. They lived for several years near his grandparents at the mouth of Faber Hollow. Grandpa Fisher deeded my mother fifteen acres on Divide Hill and in 1938 Dad began building a barn on the property. Mom, Dad and their three little children moved into the barn in May 1938. My brother, Marvin, slept in a box in the manger that summer. Dad began building the house and in October they moved into the house, although it was not completed until later.

Dad was a farmer and carpenter. About this time he began building houses for other people and by the 50's was taking contracts to build houses, etc. He and his crew have built many homes in Jackson and Kanawha Counties. He also worked on many of the churches in the area, built Long & Fisher Funeral Home at Pocatalico and the Jackson County Livestock Market at Fairplain.

We always had cattle, hogs and chickens. Many people in the neighborhood brought their hogs to our place to have them butchered. Dad would shoe horses and cut hair for the neighbors too.

We had a dairy for several years in the 50's. My brothers got up and worked in the dairy before they went to school. Mom helped with the milking and did all the clean up in the milkhouse. She took care of the chickens and sold eggs. She took care of the family garden and the canning and freezing for the winter months.

Dad is 84 and does a little farming. Mom is 81 and takes care of her vegetable and rose gardens.

Children of Jessie and Mary Faber: Herbert Franklin (July 23, 1933) married June 23, 1958 Leota Boggess (April 1, 1942); Dorothy Marie (September 4, 1935) married June 25, 1960 Darrell E. HANNAH FAUVER

Hannah Durst Fauver moved to Mt. Alto, commonly called "Mudsock" then, in 1905, when her son, James Frederick Fauver, decided to buy the family farm from his mother. The farm, originally owned by Hannah's father and consisting of 123 acres, was located on Little Mill Creek, near the Jackson-Mason County line. The post office for Little Mill Creek was Willow Tree.

Hannah was a descendant of Abraham Durst, who came to the U. S. from Switzerland in 1743 and settled in Pennsylvania and, later in Virginia. Abraham's son, Abraham II, moved to Ohio (Gallia and Meigs Counties) around 1799. Abraham II had a son, David, one of eight children. David served in the War of 1812 but died on March 19, 1814, while on his way home. He left a widow,

Hannah (Durst) Fauver at Mt. Alto home

Christena (Roush) Durst, and seven children. One of the sons was Samuel Durst (1805-1881). Samuel married Mary Taylor. Their children were David, Daniel, George, Reuben, Dorothy, Elizabeth, Mary, Henry, Susan, Christena, and Hannah.

Hannah, the youngest of the eleven children, was born in 1847. On September 19, 1867, she married James Monroe Fauver, who had moved to Mason County from Kanawha County with his parents, Thomas J. and Martha (Guthery) Fauver. James Monroe Fauver had served almost three years in the Union army during the Civil War as a member of Company B, 13th, West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and had fought in the Battle of Lookout Mountain, Chattanooga, Tennessee. Upon returning home, he had engaged in farming, carpentry, and also served for a while as a circuit preacher.

James Monroe and Hannah (Durst) Fauver had three daughters and two sons. The daughters were: Martha (1870-1890), who contracted typhoid fever and died before her twentieth birthday; Alta Jane (1873-1948), who married Daniel Schwarz and moved to Oklahoma when it was still known as Indian Territory; and Emmaretta (1875-1932), who married Dennis Knapp and lived in Parkersburg. The sons were: James Frederick (1879-1970), who married Hester Ann Baker on January 27, 1901; and William Elmer (1882-), who left home to work on a boat on the Ohio River and tragically disappeared on January 21, 1906. The family never knew what happened to him.

Hannah (Durst) and James Monroe Fauver

James Monroe and Hannah lived with their children in an old house on their farm on Little Mill Creek and soon began clearing land and cutting timber for a new house. They worked for over two years preparing and hand planing the lumber before they began construction around 1887. About this time, also, James Monroe and another farmer decided to build a raft, load it with farm produce, and take the raft down the Ohio River and then down the Mississippi River to New Orleans. There, they would sell both the produce and the wood from the raft. They successfully completed the trip and returned by boat to West Virginia. James Monroe brought with him two small pecan trees to plant on each side of the lawn near his two-story frame house. One of the trees died, but the other one grew to be a giant tree. One of a very few pecan trees in the area, the tree grew to more than four feet in diameter before it was cut in the late 1950s. Most of the Fauver descendants fondly remember the huge tree because of the Sunday dinners which sometimes took place beneath its branches.

Hannah was an energetic person, and she sometimes walked almost four miles from her home in Mt. Alto to visit or help at the farm where her son, James Frederick, now lived. She was a very meticulous person who loved nice things. She took great care of her few possessions. In front of her small house in Mt. Alto, she had a picket fence and a cement walk. When Hannah died in 1921, her house was sold to Dr. D.D. Shinn. He still lives there.

Hannah's son, James Frederick Fauver (known as "Fred"), was also an industrious person. He taught his children the importance of work. He always managed the farm well, and the family never went without necessities. A few years after acquiring the family farm, Fred decided to buy 25 acres of timberland. He promised his family that he would buy a Victrola if they would help cut the timber from the additional acres. The diligent family did their part — and always true to his word, Fred purchased the Victrola. His family spent many enjoyable evenings listening to music, because Fred, a self-taught musician who played the fiddle and the organ, would sometimes buy a new recording when he went to Mt. Alto for supplies.

Fred's wife, Hester Ann (1882-1963) (known as "Hettie"), was the daughter of Von and Ella (Bowers) Baker. Hettie always expected her many children and their families to visit every Sunday. She spent many hours in the kitchen cooking over a hot, wood-burning stove preparing meals three times a day for her family and all the Sunday visitors. All of the garden vegetables and fruits that she prepared had been canned, pickled, or dried, and the meats had been salt-cured, dried, or smoked. Her winter days were spent making quilts and clothing for her children. Often her ideas came from simply looking at the pictures in the catalogs. Every fall Hettie wove a cornhusk rug for the family doctor, Dr. A. Herrenkohl, to use on the front porch of his house in Mt. Alto.

All of Fred and Hettie's grandchildren looked forward to spending part of their summer vacations at their grandparents' home. Hettie was 80 years old when she died. Fred lived for seven more years and died at the age of 91. They left ten daughters and two sons and the following descendants:

- (10) William Marshall, born October 14, 1897, died December 7, 1938, never married.

James FERGUSON was a leader in his community. He was a Justice of the Peace for several years. He was for a time a member of the Union District Board of Education. He had an intense thirst for culture, and encouraged his children to study hard, obtain schools to teach and jobs to do; and through sacrifice, work themselves ahead by hard but character-making effort.

He was a gentleman of high moral character and respect, and had a kind and friendly disposition. He belonged to the Cottageville Masonic Lodge and was a staunch Republican.

He was a stonemason by trade and also a farmer. His farm on Log Lick Run near Cottageville is still in the family.

His wife Virginia was very religious and had a deep faith in God. She had a heart that saw the troubles of mankind as clearly as a Burns or a Dickens.

The children had in them an ambition that could not be beaten down with adverse circumstances. James and Virginia had taught them from early childhood that no matter what the cost, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."

Burial for both James and Virginia was in the New Interest Cemetery at the Martin Chapel on Mud Lick Run. Submitted by Fola (Keith) Brown

Joseph FERGUSON, the first FERGUSON to settle in Jackson County, was born in Ballylinney or Ballynure, County Antrim, Northern Ireland January 20, 1820 to James and Mary (McGOOKIN) FERGUSON. He was of Scotch descent and Presbyterian in faith. His ancestors only a few years hence had removed to Northern Ireland from Scotland. He became a stonemason and farmer.

Joseph was married three times. His first marriage was April 13, 1840 to Margaret DAVEY, daughter of Samuel DAVEY of Carrickfergus, County Antrim, Northern Ireland. They had one child, Mary, born November 26, 1840. Both mother and daughter died that same year.

Joseph, age 24 years, and his brother Samuel, age 22 years, arrived in the United States as immigrants on July 9, 1844. Joseph filed his application to become a citizen of the United States in the Common Pleas Court of Cuyahoga County, Ohio, on May 1, 1851.

When he came to the United States, he carried the following church letter:

"I do hereby certify that the bearer, Joseph Ferguson, is a man of good character, being sober in his habits, honest in his dealings, and industrious. That he is a regular member of the Presbyterian congregation of Ballylinney, and in full communion with the church in whatever part of America Divine Providence may cast his lot.

Isaac Adams, Presbyterian Minister, Ballylinney, May 29, 1844.

In the winter of 1845 he returned to Northern Ireland and married January 6, 1846 Mary CAMERON, daughter of Hugh and Letitia (BLAIR) CAMERON. Mary was born in 1828 and died in 1849.

They came to the United States and settled in Cuyahoga County, Ohio, near Cleveland. Their children were:

(1) James, born May 8, 1847 in Cuyahoga County, Ohio. Died July 13, 1901 at Cottageville, Jackson County, West Virginia. Married July 24, 1873 Eliza Virginia PRICE.

(2) Isabella, born July 15, 1848 near Albany, New York. Died June 18, 1910 at Cottageville, Jackson County, West Virginia. Married September 29, 1869 Andrew Hamilton BOONE.

In September 1848 Joseph, Mary, and their two infants went back to Ireland for a visit and stayed until February 1849. In the latter part of 1849 one of the victims of cholera was the young mother Mary (CAMERON) FERGUSON, thus leaving the two small children solely in the care of the young husband.

In 1850 Joseph met Grace VAUDEN who was born in Exter County, England. She was the governess to the children of a family named Ranny in Cleveland. They were married November 1, 1850.

Joseph and Grace (Vauden) Ferguson

William Montgomery, a blood nephew of Joseph, who had stowed away, then when discovered, worked his way across the ocean from Belfast to Joseph's home in Cleveland, left his Uncle's home in 1852 and found himself a job on a steamboat which ran from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati. Later that year he wrote his uncle in Cleveland telling him that while the boat on which he was working was tied up at a town called Ravenswood, Virginia, he had walked into the country and found land which looked like that of the home country across the sea.

In the early spring of 1853 Joseph came to Jackson County, via steamboat to Ravenswood, and made inquiries about land. After looking at several tracts, he purchased 160 acres on Mud Lick Run. He then went back to Ohio to bring his family to the new home. So it was that in the Spring of 1853 Joseph landed from a steamboat at Ravenswood with his family. Here James, age 6, Isabella, age 5, with their stepmother, and baby sister, Mary Mariah, spent their first night in Virginia (now West Virginia) at the hotel which faces the Ohio River (later known as the Ravenswood Hotel). Soon afterward they settled on the home place by Mud Lick Run below Ripley. Here they farmed and raised their family.

Their children were:

(1) Mary Mariah, born August 7, 1851, died —, married — Sylvester BARNHART.

(2) Elizabeth Merrifield, born July 23, 1853, died March 27, 1927, married November 9, 1874 George W. STONE.

(3) William Robert, born April 17, 1855, died —, married — Margaret PRINGLE.

(4) Alexander Vauden, born January 29, 1857, died January 24, 1906, married — Martha MAHON.

(5) Joseph Charles Knight, born July 20, 1859, died December 4, 1891, married — Ella SAYRE.

(6) John, born February 8, 1861, died —, (never married).

(7) Agnes Grace, born January 4, 1863, died —, married — Joseph MAHON.

FINCH

I remember with nostalgia taking the greyhound bus from Nitro to the New Era Store, meeting the horse and wagon, and traveling to my grandparents' home on Copper Fork. The farm animals, the cool spring water, and Grandma's homemade goodies made up for having no electric or indoor plumbing.

The daughter of Clyde F. Finch (1918-1972) and Ada L. Payne Finch (1922 -), I was born in Kanawha county on October 19, 1942. I was named Elsie Louise Finch and my brother, born in 1944, Clyde Leonard. We attended Kanawha County Schools (Cross Lanes Elementary and Nitro High) until 1957, when my family moved to Longview Ridge in Evans. I graduated from Ripley High School in 1961.

My paternal grandparents are Elmer H. Finch (1880-1952), the son of William and Eliza M. Finch, and Elsie F. Sullivan Finch (1889-1962), daughter of Alva Edward and Emma Jane Matheny Sullivan. My grandparents raised ten children to adulthood in their Sandyville home. Velma (1905 -), Cecil (1908-1986), Emma (1910 -), Virgil (1912-1988), Ethel (1914 -), Clyde (1918-1972), Ocic (1920 -), Harry (1922-1988), Burl (1927 -), and Maxcile (1929 -). My maternal grandparents, James Andrew and Helen Emaline Steele Payne, lived in Roane County.

In December 1961, Rev. Frank Stevenson married me to Coy Dwight Cummings of Southall Ridge, Stats Mill. The son of Coy (1918 -) and Myrtle Westfall Cummings (1922 -), Dwight was born February 7, 1942, and graduated from Ripley High School with the class of 1961. His brother, Rodney Phillip, was born in 1944. Dwight's paternal grandparents are Grover Washington Cummings (1888-1977), son of Henry and Meg Stanley Cummings, and Laura Ethel Smith Cummings (1893-1951), daughter of Martin and Kate Hardman Smith. Other children include Herman (1920-1988), Troy (1922-1986), and Dewey (1926-1986).

Dwight's maternal grandparents, of the Harmony-Belgrove area, are Amos Brady Westfall (1889-1966) and Edith Ann Stalnaker Westfall (1901 -), daughter of Robert Hugh and Nora Coon Stalnaker. Their eight children are Arthur, Gertha, Gertrude, Evelyn, Myrtle, Eurada, Glenn, and Veneda.

Dwight and I live on Southall Ridge. Having worked for Collier Construction Company until 1964, Dwight then came to work for Kaiser Aluminum as a slitter operator. In his spare time he coon hunts and fishes for bass. We attend Siniaville United Methodist Church at Stats Mills and are the parents of three daughters.

Recca Dawn, born in Kanawha County in March 1963, graduated from Ripley High School in 1981. In 1985 she married William Scott Dunbar of Elizabeth, Wirt County. Residing in Wirt County, they are the parents of Treska Dawn (1986 -) and Barbara Louise (1989 -).

Tina Louise, born in Jackson County in April 1966, graduated from Ripley High School in 1984 and Parkersburg Community College in 1986. In June 1986, she married Wyatt Carey McClain of the Ripley area, and they now live in Fairfax, Virginia.

Sharon Ann, born in Jackson County in December 1968, graduated from Ripley High School in 1987. She married Johnny Daniel Kay, son of Delbert and Shirley Fisher Kay, in September 1987. All reside in the Stats Mills area. Submitted by Louise Cummings

FISHER

The patriarch of this clan was one William Fisher (born 1762, died 1834), born in Germany. William immigrated to America around 1778. Nothing is known about his wife. He lived in Philadelphia for a time, where his first son John was born. The family moved to Augusta County, Virginia, in 1780, living on a farm. Five more boys were born there, Conard, William Jr., Henry, Leonard and George.

Hearing that the Ohio territory had been opened for settlement, the five brothers decided to seek their fortunes westward. On foot they crossed the mountains into the Kanawha Valley, they came to the salt works in Malden, where they found work. They stayed there only a short while.

Five of the brothers decided to move farther west. Conard remained, married and reared a family there.

Bidding Conard farewell, the five brothers pressed farther west by following the Kanawha River. They came to the little settlement of Charleston. After a few days of resting and seeing the sights of the city, they crossed the Elk River. After a short trip they came to a small stream running north, which was called the Kanawha Two Mile. Following a trail along the creek they came to the forks of Tupper's Creek. Leg weary and discouraged they made camp for the night.

Here they camped several days, hunting and scouting out the land. They found game plentiful in the rolling hills and wide fertile bottoms. John and George liked what they saw. Holding council around the fire one night, John and George decided to end the journey and settle on Tupper's Creek.

The next morning, William, Henry and Leonard bade their brothers adieu and journeyed on to the north fork of Poca River. Here they followed a small stream, running almost east, to its source. This branch was Dudden Fork. Forcing their tired bodies to the top of a hill, they beheld a wide plateau like they had never seen. Their journey to the Ohio Territory was abandoned and here on Fisher's Ridge the three made their homes. Many of their descendants still live on the ridge.

John and George acquired around six hundred acres two or three miles up Tupper's Creek. They soon saw the need of a helpmate.

John married Lucretia Harrison in 1812. Three of their children were Emberson, Mary Anne, and Rebecca. John died in 1872.

George (1792-1876) married Frances Lanham (1796-1893). Their children were Henry, David, Alice, Johnny, Arminta, Dick, Roxy, Elizabeth, Sidney, Emily, Jim, John, and Burlwell Spurlock "Lock" (1829-1905) married Mary Milam (1838-1894), daughter of Ben and Sarah Sisson, daughter of James Sisson and Polly Cartwell.

Their children were: Squire N. (1864-1935) married first, Purlina Ranson (1867-1894), a son and daughter died in infancy. His second wife, Myrtle Wright (1879-1954), their children; Dewey, Opha, Yandle, Aubra, Palford, twins Oral and Oval, John and Faye. Harold B. died in infancy. Benjamin, little is known of him. Marcenia married S. W. Clinton, died 1884. Elsa (1879-1910) married Stella Harrison (1877-1914).

Troy (1911-) married Vesta Johnson (1917-) daughter of Dessie (1892-1963) and Losha Hill Johnson (1888-1978). Children: Lanny married Dottie Bennett; Linda married first, Jerry Cowley, children: Tonya, Shanc, and Terri; second, Stanley McKeny; Patty married Harold Summers, children: Tyra and Ashley; Steven married Ann Higginbotham, son Paul.

When Lock married, he left Kanawha County and acquired a large tract of land in South Jackson and North Putnam County, on the headwaters of Eighteen Mile Creek. Here he eked out a living and reared his family. At his death, the farm was divided between the three boys.

Elsa's tract was in Putnam County, much of it on what was called the Winfield Pike, now Route 34 South. He deeded the ground for the cemetery and Emma Chapel United Methodist Church and sold the remainder.

Squire built on the creek, near the old homestead and reared his family, then sold to Charlie Hill and Cleve Bailey and moved to Charleston.

George's tract lay mostly in Jackson County. He built his home near the county line on the Pike, and made a living by raising cattle and sheep.

Emma Chapel U.M. was the home church and Layne the home school. A large part of the original land is owned by George's heirs.

Dr. Shelly taught school for awhile. He then earned his degree in veterinary medicine from the University of Cincinnati and did post-graduate work in Edinburgh, Scotland. He was the Health commissioner for Kanawha County for several years.

Owens operated a general store near Young's Hollow until his death.

The twins, Foy and Troy, both taught school a short while in Jackson County. Foy went into used car sales, then to the State Tax Dept. from which he retired in 1975. Troy left teaching and was employed at Union Carbide, South Charleston. He retired in 1971. Submitted by Troy O. Fisher and Tyra D. Summers

ESTIL FISHER

We are told that one William Fisher came to the U. S. from Germany around 1700s. He first settled at Philadelphia, later moving to Augusta County, Virginia. He had six sons: John, Henry, Leonard, William, Conrad and George. In the early 1800s, these six sons left Virginia (afoot) to go by way of Charleston (a small settlement) and Ripley (which did not exist then) and on to Ohio which was open to settlement or homesteading. Conrad settled at Malden because of the Dickinson Salt Mines. John and George settled on land near Poca River. Henry settled on Dudeon Fork farther north.

My father, Estil Spicer Fisher, born November 9, 1901, at Sissonsville, Kanawha County, was a descendant of two of these men: John and George. Dad's parents were Eldridge and Dollie Humphrey Fisher, Sissonsville, West Virginia. Mother, Bertha Fisher, was born December 9, 1906, on Fisher Ridge, Mt. Tell, West Virginia, Jackson County, a daughter of Leonard G. and Della Cleek Fisher. She is a descendant of Henry Fisher. Dad and Mother met while she was teaching school in Kanawha County. They were married in 1930, Charleston, West Virginia. In 1932, they moved to Jackson County and I was born November 18, 1932. We lived on a small farm south of Ripley.

Estil and Bertha Fisher

The early thirties were "depression" years. They had a cow, raised chickens and sold eggs. Dad worked for farmers for $1.00 per day to pay house rent of $7.00 monthly. Banks closed and savings were lost.

In the early years of my life, we made several moves because Dad was a Construction Iron Worker and went where work could be found. Lived in Dunbar, Charleston and Sissonsville. There we built a small house on land my grandfather gave us. I went my first school year in Sissonsville. Dad worked at Dupont, Belle, and Rubber Plant, Nitro. In 1943, we moved to Knoxville, Tennessee. Dad worked at Happy Valley, Oak Ridge, and helped build the atomic plant. We lived in a government trailer. There were 1,000 other families living in this "Trailer City". I went to school with children from almost every state — a great experience for an eleven year old girl. We were there in 1945 when the first bomb was dropped. We came back to Ripley in fall of 1945. I spent one-half year in school at Ripley, which I enjoyed very much. Lloyd Stone was one of my favorite teachers.

Later work took us to Parkersburg and we were there until I graduated from High School in a class of 600 students. I took Co-Op in school and was able to take a job the day I graduated with the AAA Club, Parkersburg. One year later, I went to Morris Harvey College, Charleston, where I had two years of Business Administration. My folks were now living in Waverly, Ohio, where Dad worked at the atomic plant. I obtained a job there, and met my future husband, Kenneth Ridge, son of Nara and Bernice Wilson Ridge, of Jackson, Ohio. Ken was born June 12, 1928, and is an accountant. We were married in 1956.

Mother and I both were Girl Scout leaders and active in church while at Waverly. My parents loved young people and spent lots of time with them wherever they lived.

In 1956, my parents returned to Ripley, building a house on South Church Street, where my mother still lives. Dad helped build Kaiser Aluminum Plant, Jackson General Hospital and the Masonic Building. He was very active in the Masons. They joined Epworth Methodist Church and were both active. Dad was a Trustee, on property and parsonage committees and did lots of repair work. Mother never could say "no"; she did lots of volunteer work, taught Sunday School, was Superintendent of Children's Department, served on property, membership and evangelism committees, and Administrative Board. She was Vice-president and President of United Methodist Women and was honored with two special pins. In community work, she belonged to Woman's Club of Ripley and Extension Homemakers, serving as President of South Hills Club and President of the Jackson County Council of Homemakers. She is a member of West Virginia Artist's and Craftsman's Guild. Her weaving teachers were Lucy Quarrier and Hazel Wright, taking the first weaving class ever given at Cedar Lakes. Dad did weaving as a hobby. He and Mother exhibited their work at Cedar Lakes Arts and Crafts Fair for many years. Mother was chosen as a Jackson County Belle for West Virginia Folk Festival at Glenville.

My husband and I moved from Jackson, Ohio, to Ripley in the late fifties. We both worked at Kaiser Aluminum Plant. We are the parents of two children: Michael, born 1957, and Susan, born

Betha and Estil Fisher family, 50th Anniversary, 1980

1961. Mike married Rosemary Aronson. They have three daughters, Jennifer, Elizabeth and Victoria. They presently live in Londonderry, New Hampshire. Susan lives near and works in Washington, D.C. at present. Dad died January 30, 1989 and is buried in Fairplain Cemetery. Mother is an active 83 year old and lives at her home in Ripley. Submitted by Betty Ridge and Susan Ridge

LEONARD AND DELLA FISHER

Leonard Greeley Fisher and Della Elizabeth Cleek were married on November 23, 1904 at Pomeroy, Ohio. Because Della's mother did not approve, they "ran off". They drove a horse and buggy to Ripley, West Virginia and then rode a train to Pomeroy.

Leonard and Della Fisher

Della, a school teacher, was the daughter of Francis and Sarah Sophronia Staats Cleek. She met Leonard while teaching at Dudgeon School near Goldtown, West Virginia. Her home was near Ripley, West Virginia. Leonard was a farmer, the son of James K. and Phoebe R. Click Fisher. His postoffice was Mt. Tell, West Virginia.

Two of Leonard and Della's grandfathers were half brothers. One spelled his name Click and the other Cleek.

Leonard's parents gave them a fifty acre hill farm on Fisher Ridge, Jackson County, postoffice, Mt. Tell, West Virginia. On this acreage was a three room log house where they went to housekeeping. Their first three children were born on this farm. They were Bertha Irene in 1906; Okla Amber (Johnson) in 1909; and Glenn Webster in 1913.

Sometime in 1913 they outgrew the log house and built a five room frame house. While building the house, Della cooked for the family and the men building the house in an out building called the smokehouse. They divided up the family and slept at the homes of two neighbors. Jessie Mae was born in the new home in 1915. During a severe cold spell and snow and ice storm in 1917, William Cleek was born, on the last day of the year. It was a rough, winter night. Dr. Fred Casto of Kenna, West Virginia rode horse back and made the delivery.

The Fishers took their children to church and Sunday School. They made the preacher welcome at all times. Once a Preacher Garrison, his wife and children spent a week in the Fisher home. Since it was a slow time on the farm, all they did was cook, eat, and sleep, and go to church at night.

In 1918 Leonard sold this hill farm and bought a farm on Dudgeon Fork, Post office, Goldtown, West Virginia. Since the weather had continued bad since the birth of the new baby, Cleek, they had to move Della and the baby by horse and sleigh. Sophronia, the sixth child, was born in 1922. Dr. Fred Casto of Kenna, West Virginia delivered all six of the Fisher children.

All the children but Cleek and Sophronia attended the Dudgeon School in Jackson County. They had the following teachers: Carrie Smith Skidmore, Ethel Duff Mundy, Ed Tolley, Freda Parsons Johnson, Sybil Skeen Winter, Norma Cleek Hoffman (Della's sister), and Avah Fisher Higginbotham. Up to this time, the children had walked two miles to school. They missed only if they were ill.

In 1921 Della rode horseback to Kenna, West Virginia where she took an examination and renewed her teaching certificate. The next fall they sold the farm. Their plans were to move to Dunbar, but Della got a school at Kelley's Creek, Kanawha County and she and the children moved there. Okla "baby sat" for the new baby, Sophronia. Bertha was what is now called a teacher's aide for her mother. She had received her elementary school diploma and was ready to enter high school. Leonard stayed on the farm until all his crops were harvested.

The next Spring the family did move to Dunbar, West Virginia. Bertha was graduated from High School there in 1927. She went to college in Spring and Summer and taught school in Winter. In 1930 she married Estil Spicer Fisher. They have one daughter, Betty Fisher Ridge, born in 1932.

Okla never graduated from high school. She worked at Dunbar Glass Plant, and for 29 years at The Diamond Department Store, Charleston, West Virginia. She married Trell Roscoe Johnson in 1929. He worked and retired from DuPont, Belle, West Virginia. They made their home in Dunbar and still reside there.

Leonard worked at Fletcher Enamel plant and Della taught school. She also went to high school and college. Because of bad health, Leonard had to leave the plant. He was an ice man for awhile. Della said all the children belonged to the ice man, even if some had red hair and some had black hair.

The Fisher family returned to Jackson County where they bought another farm and built a house on Route 21, South of Ripley, on waters of Mill Creek. Della taught a few years in Jackson County and Leonard went back to his first love, farming.

Glenn, Cleek and Sophronia were graduated from Ripley High School. Glenn attended college and was a high school teacher in Kanawha County. He married Beatrice Bennett of Ravenswood. They had two children, Kenneth Paul and Ellen Fisher Horner. W. Cleek married Bernice Harpold of Fairplain, West Virginia. Cleek has been an employee of Save Supply Company in Charleston for fifty years. They have two children, William Cleek (Bill) and Mary Fisher Basham. Sophronia attended college and worked as a bookkeeper at Save Supply and other firms in Charleston, West Virginia and as a teller at Ripley National Bank. She married Robert D. Morris of Dunbar, West Virginia. They had one daughter, Debbie (deceased). Because of a handicap, Jessie Mae never worked or married. She is deceased.

Leonard and Della Fisher and family 50th Anniversary

Leonard and Della had six grandchildren, previously mentioned. Their great grandchildren are Mike and Susan Ridge, Matthew and Allison Horner, Ryan and Justin Basham, and Laura and Andrew (deceased) Fisher. Their three great, great, grandchildren are Jennifer, Elizabeth and Victoria Ridge.

Leonard and Della retired and moved back to Dunbar. They kept their farm and homeplace in Jackson County. Leonard died in 1959 and Della died in 1969. They are buried at the Fairplain Cemetery. Submitted by Mrs. Estil (Bertha) Fisher and W. Cleek Fisher

WILLIAM FISHER

The Fisher family began in the United States when William Fisher (1762-1884) traveled from Germany to Augusta County, Virginia in 1779. He raised six sons who traveled to the wilderness of the Kanawha Valley. William Jr. settled at the salt mines near Malden. Henry, Conrad, and Leonard settled in Jackson County. John and George settled in Kanawha County on the Poca River. George Fisher's (1792-1876) son David married Henrietta Newhouse and raised a son, Johnnie. Five children, Bertha, Wilbur, Emit, Ica, and Effie were born to Johnnie and his wife Mary Martin.

Emit married Icy Westfall. They had two sons, Harold, March 21, 1917 and Howard, February 20, 1915. In 1918, Emit died of the Spanish Flu. Icy married again to Melton Pritt who had several small children of his own, Charlie and Vella; and had five children together, Pat, Andrew, Ed, Sidney, and Phyllis.

Howard remembers living through the depression when he caught rabbits and carried them to Charleston to sell for twenty-five cents a piece. He also tells of putting horseshoe nails in his pocket so that when he walked it would sound like coins.

He walked some fifteen miles to a church on Second Creek. There Howard met Dessie Witt, the daughter of Albert. They married and had seven children: Delos, Delores, Darlene, Dorsel, Gene, Dean, and an infant girl. Darlene died at birth. Dessie died in childbirth with her unnamed infant daughter in 1949. Howard served with the Navy at Great Lakes Naval Center during World War II.

Howard Fisher

While there he gave haircuts, made trinkets and sent the money to Dessie. Not trusting banks, since losing $24.00 in the bank failures of 1929, Howard hid the money in a glass jar in a hole under the house. When he finally deposited this money he told the teller that the moldy money was in good shape considering how long it had been buried.

Howard worked for United Carbon during the day and for himself evenings and weekends. He plowed gardens, mowed hay and did everything he could to make and save money. In 1949, Howard married Myrtle Skeen, daughter of Harvey. They had two children, Janice and Connie. After being laid off by United Carbon, Howard purchased the old Harpold farm at Given, Jackson County in 1954. He began trading cattle and pigs, raising veal calves and farming full time. With the help of his sons he performed custom farm work. In 1968 Howard built the Fisher Quality Meats, a custom slaughter house at Pocatalieo, Kanawha County. He sold the slaughter facility in 1970 and began plans to build the Jackson County Livestock Market. He purchased the franchise of the old market located behind the old railroad depot in Ripley. The new market was built near Fairplain. He later founded the Jackson County Speedway, the Jackson County Jamboree and the Giant Fourth of July Flea Market, all on the grounds of the Livestock Market. He also built fish ponds at the market and on his own farms. In 1986 Howard sold his original farm to his daughter, Connie, and in 1988 he sold another one to Larry Welling. He and his wife, Myrtle now reside on a section of his farm at Given. Submitted by Dean Fisher

HENRY FITZHUGH

Henry Fitzhugh, son of George and Mary (Digges) Fitzhugh was born at Bunker Hill, Fauquier County, February 12, 1783. In 1811 he married Henrietta Sarah Fitzhugh, his cousin, the daughter of Judge Nicholas and Sarah Ashton Fitzhugh. She was born at Bedford in 1789. Their home was Fenton, on a beautiful hill a few miles from Warrenton. In 1834 Henry Fitzhugh and his family moved to Charleston on the Kanawha and resided in that town for three years.

He had intended to go into the salt business but on the desertion of most of the slaves he had brought with him, his plans changed. He moved to an estate on the Ohio River, which they named Ravenswood. It was the property bequeathed to Anne Washington Ashton and her heirs by her uncle George Washington.

The Ravenswood home was the center of a large family of children and grand-children, and outside its gates a small town gradually grew up, also called Ravenswood. About 1852 Henry Fitzhugh built the first Episcopal church in that part of the country, named by his wife, Grace Church.

Henry Fitzhugh died in 1855. His family's monuments may be found in the Ravenswood Cemetery, having been moved there in 1900 when the first Grace Church burned to the ground and the decision was made to build the new church a few blocks away. Henrietta Fitzhugh died in 1879 at the home of her daughter, Sarah Ashton Cotton, in Charleston, West Virginia.

Complete details of the family may be found in The Fitzhugh Family in America, treating in particular the West Virginia Branch. Privately printed in Charleston, West Virginia in 1928 by Nannie Cotton Woodman. The book is based on an unfinished history of the family written by her grandmother Henrietta S. Fitzhugh, the mistress of Ravenswood. Copies of the book may be found in the Jackson County Library. Submitted by Ed Rauh

FLETCHER

The engagement and marriage of Faye Ruby Barnett to Kermit Gail Fletcher was "sparkle and bless" to both of them. The future held many hopes for them during a time of world unrest, there was an Utopia in Jackson County, West Virginia, on March 20, 1937. Their union of love gave life to Camden Wayne (December 5, 1937), Curtis Lee (June 16, 1939), Calvin Arthur (April 16, 1941), Judy Marlin (February 23, 1944), and Calvert Roger (July 19, 1946). Their romance was interrupted but never lost with the tragic death of Faye on June 15, 1947 due to a brain tumor.

Faye (1913-1947), whom God has blessed, was the daughter of Cam Barnett and Birty Pickens. She provided her children with what was available. She sewed, gardened, and gave her all to us.

Faye Ruby (Barnett) Fletcher

Kermit is the second son of General Boyd Fletcher and Margie Della Litton. Kermit was born June 6, 1910, in Roane County. Kermit spent most of his childhood in Reedy learning the blacksmith trade and later a living at Rockcastle. Later he became a carpenter to support his family. He remarried on March 19, 1949, to Freida Maxine Nessleroad, third child and daughter of Charles David Nessleroad and Clara Belle McMurray of Ravenswood. Together they gave birth to Patricia Belle (June 24, 1952).

Wayne, being the oldest, was the first married. On September 25, 1959, his wedlock to Hellen Marie Sullivan, second born and daughter of Henry John Sullivan and Bertha Virginia Bates of Murrysburg. Her enduring love for Wayne gave life to David Wayne (August 18, 1960) and Deborah Lynn (October 17, 1964). David has taken as his wife Amy Mae Beer, daughter of Frank and Helen Marie Beer of Wood County, on April 19, 1986, and now are expecting their first child. Debbie is single but looking.

Curtis joined the Navy (retired after twenty-four years) to see the world and on March 16, 1968, married his wife Tenu Wong, oldest daughter of Wong Tsae Suang and Wong Chin Bae of Leelung, Taiwan. Her love gave us Elizabeth Faye (November 12, 1968), John Kermit (December 31, 1969), and Suzie Wong (July 22, 1971). All attending college in Washington state.

Arthur joined the Navy and twenty-three years later retired. Even though he roamed the world he returned to West Virginia and on September 3, 1966, married Irine Pearl Harding, the oldest child and only daughter of Elmer Harding (deceased) and Ica Eulah Tignor of Aaron's Fork, Kanawha County. Their marriage ended by divorce, but the adventure and romance brought Charles Arthur (November 17, 1967) and Carroll Bruce (May 27, 1971). On September 3, 1987, Charles married Rosalie Lane, oldest daughter of Richard Edsle Lane and Virginia LeLynn Martin, and has a daughter Ica Mae (June 20, 1988) and Christina Lynn (February 3, 1990). J. C. FLOYD

Jackson County! What nostalgic memories that evokes!

My parents, Ira Floyd and Bernice Floyd, took me as a child and teenager, nearly every summer to visit Grandmother Floyd and Aunt Georgia Floyd Coast at the old Floyd homestead near Sandyville. How I delighted in playing with cousins Willa Coast (McGinley), Ruth Coe (Fisher), and Bobbie Coe (Fisher)!

One of my fondest childhood memories is listening to my Grandmother Annie Regnaud, who lived with us, tell stories of her girlhood on famed Blennerhassett Island. Their farmhouse stood on the site of the historical mansion where Harmon Blennerhassett and Aaron Burr conspired to form a southeastern empire.

Federal troops arrived only to find that the conspirators had fled. Disappointed and drunk, they burned the mansion, destroying valuable imported furniture and masterpieces of art. Grandmother told how tourists came to the island and chipped pieces of stone from the sidewalks which still surrounded the house — like modern souvenir hunters.

While reading the novel, Blennerhassett, for a book report in Alliance (Ohio) High School, I felt a personal involvement in the unfolding plot.

Grandmother related how soldiers from a Union Army encampment near Parkersburg came to the island and stole her mother's fowl, cows, pigs, and produce. Being a Confederate sympathizer, Great-grandmother Piercy protested vehemently at the repeated thefts which took food from the family table. It seems she had a fiery temper which she unleashed at them. Finally, the commanding officer visited her and warned her, "Ma'am, you have two beautiful daughters here. I warn you to stop your abusive talk to the soldiers." After that, she fumed silently, but was no less angry!

Grandmother Regnaud also told of ferrying the farm animals across to higher ground when floods threatened. House and barns were roped to nearby trees to possibly prevent their being torn loose to float down the river. She described how her father raised broom corn and made brooms to augment his income. Interesting that this craft is currently popular as we nostalgically look to our past.

Another facet of the area illustrates to me the colorful character of West Virginia. Since that area was along the Mason-Dixon Line, my father's family were Union sympathizers, northern Methodists, and Republicans. Only two farms apart, mother's family were Confederate sympathizers, southern Methodists, and Democrats. Grandfather Arthur Regnaud was a Confederate soldier, and was wounded at Gettysburg.

In June, 1988, while driving through Jackson County from our home in Greensboro, North Carolina, to Pittsburgh, my husband and I visited my cousin, Willa Coast McGinley. She and her daughter graciously drove us around to the places I remembered so well — Sandyville; Independence Church and Cemetery, burial place of the Regnauds; and Ravenswood, where the Floyd and Cole families are buried. After spending a delightful and all too short evening with my cousins, Bobby and Vernon Fisher, we continued on our way with a wonderful feeling of warmth and love, having touched again my family roots.

Thank you, Jackson County, for a rich heritage. Submitted by Faith Floyd Markey

After graduation from West Virginia Tech, Phil came to Jackson County from Fayette County where he had worked for the Montgomery Herald and Fayette Tribune. He managed The Ravenswood News and Star Printing and Publishing Company for Charles Hodel, publisher of the Beckley Newspapers. Later, when Mark Ethridge Jr. purchased the properties, he was business manager for the company. In 1961 he became editor and general manager and in 1972 purchased the company.

In 1958 The News became the first newspaper in West Virginia (and one of the first 100 in the nation) to be set by cold type and printed by offset. In 1975 Fournery began publishing The News twice weekly, the first in Jackson County to bring a paper out more often than weekly.

After the sale of his company in 1987 and retirement in 1989, he and three other retirees were named life members of the West Virginia Press Association, the first in the history of that group so honored. JOHN FOX

JOHN FOX, son of Adam and Kathryn Wilhelm Fox, was born June 6, 1867 in Germany. His brother "Pete" in 1865. Soon after Kathryn died, Adam left the boys with relatives and came to the United States and settled in Pomeroy, Ohio. Worked at Mason City Salt works, saving his money to send for them. The boys were six and four when they were given name tags and put on a boat to come live with their father. Grandpa Fox told the story many times how a kind lady on the boat looked after them during the long trip, and took care of Pete who was seasick. Their father had arranged for them to be met at the boat and brought to Pomeroy.

Adam Fox married Katy Wink and settled in Angerona, Jackson County, where they raised their family. Their children were: Joe, Edgar, Earl, William and Frances. John and Pete made seven.

Our grandfather John Fox left Angerona when very young and went to stay with Davy Sayre, who owned a large acreage of land on Cow Run. Here he learned to do all kinds of farm work and do carpentry. From his small wages he saved enough money to buy his first few acres of land from Davy Sayre on upper Cow Run. He could not attend school regularly while working for Davy, but he finished the eighth grade at Beech Grove after he was married.

John and Ella Fox

On October 3, 1888, John Fox married Ella Belle Hughes, daughter of William and Margaret Herdman Hughes. William was the son of Job and Annie King Hughes. Margaret was the daughter of Peter and Nancy Flowers Herdman. Ella's great-great-grandfather Joseph Hughes was a brother to Jesse Hughes. Her great grandfather Job Hughes donated the land for "Cherry Grove" Church and Cemetery on Cow Run. The children of John and Ella Fox: 1. EDGAR (1888) married Clara Sayre; 2. THEADORE (1890), married Mary Sayre; 3. MARGARET (1892), married Virgil Sayre; 4. DENCIL (1895), married Velva Sayre; 5. EVERETT (1900), married Mary Roseberry; 6. OTHO (1903), died in infancy; 7. JESSE (1904), married Wavie Sines; 8. JOHN (1912) unmarried; 9. LAURA FOX lived with them from age 8.

Grandpa John Fox was very industrious and soon acquired more land; building a new house and added a second story to it later on as the family grew larger. He kept a general store and Post Office for several years. John sold fire insurance and paint, part time, going into surrounding communities on horse back. The boys did the farm work while he was away.

John and Ella Fox were both members of Long Bottom Church and he was one of the main carpenters when "Long View" was built. Their home was on the ridge between both churches and was handy place for the preachers to stay. Grandma kept a spare bed ready and Grandpa a place in the barn for the horse. Both John and Ella had a strong faith in God that sustained them when they lost their home during the depression. They moved to the farm on Cow Run, where with undaunted spirit he farmed with son John several more years. He was never happier than when tackling some big job such as building fence, cutting sprouts or changing a creek to flow around the foot of the hill, instead of down through the bottom. He was always looking ahead, always giving thanks whether a big dinner or his favorite supper of corn bread and milk.

Ella Fox died suddenly of a stroke, February 25, 1946 at age 77. John Fox died November 8, 1948. They are buried at Creston, Mason County. Submitted by Ardella Click and Brenda (Click) Mounts

JOHN W. FREEMAN

The Freeman family of Jackson County had its beginning when John Wesley Freeman migrated from Virginia. The family's original roots stretched back to England. John W. Freeman (March 25, 1824-August 3, 1888) was a timberman and helped build the railroad from Huntington to Parkersburg. At that time the forest lands engulfed all the river bottom lands. John W. Freeman was hired to hew crossties for the railroad from Point Pleasant to Ravenswood. His wife and family lived in shanty towns that moved along as the work on the railroad progressed. Millwood in Jackson County was their last shantytown as their crew and the crew from Parkersburg met and finished the last link of the railroad in the Ravenswood area.

John Wesley Freeman married a half Cherokee Indian named Many Feathers. Their children were Willy, Henry, Mary, Maggie and John Wesley Freeman II. After their mother died the children were farmed out to live with families in the Jackson County area. John Wesley Freeman II was born April 28, 1874 and died July 9, 1972. He married Mary Evalina Jackson who died October 1943 in New Cumberland, West Virginia of cancer. They raised eleven children: Anvil, Romie, Russel, Eddie, Elda, Gerlie, Erma, Rotha, Euba, Gaynell and Concella. He worked as a sawyer and a farmer throughout his life. He helped build the original Joe's Run Church, the Rader Church at Gay and several more local churches. Romie married Alma Carder in March 1922. He worked as a sawyer. He sawed and shaped the paneling for the Kessel Clinic in Ripley. He also was a very talented builder. He often worked away and left his wife and children to take care of his farm. He worked several years at the Crescent Brick factory at New Cumberland doing mining of coal and clay as well as other tasks. Romie didn't care much for his father because of the terrible treatment he and his siblings as well as his mother received. He lived for a time at Parrish Hill Road near Frozencamp. He lived also at Ohio River Lock Number 25 near Point Pleasant. His last working years were spent with his wife in Gallia County, Ohio where he worked in the strip mines. The last few years of his life were spent with Alma in a mobile home located on the site of her childhood home on Joe's Run. Romie enjoyed telling stories and generally spending time with friends and family. He died August 24, 1977 and is buried in the Board Cemetery at the mouth of Joe's Run. Prior to his death he requested that his grave be dug only part way up the hill because he didn't think he could walk all the way to the top each night after his haunts. He always said this with a twinkle in his eye and a chuckle in his voice. His wife Alma died in February 1985 and is buried beside him.

Their children are Evelyn, Clarence, Geneva, Lenora, Lorena, Gerald, Linda and Melvin. His daughter Lenora married Eddie Waggoner and settled on Joe's Run. She and her husband assisted Romie and Alma during their last few years. Submitted by Joyce Fisher

Howard French family

As children growing up in a three-room house there are wall-to-wall memories, bath time was in a zinc wash tub, rolling little girls hair with rags, going to Ripley School instead of Given School, laundry using a wringer washer, line dried or freeze dried in the winter months you might say! Meal time, all eight around the table. Moving to a larger house in Given so Mom could have running water!

Frog Hollow was empty of Frenchs for many years, brush grown-up not even a path to be seen, house torn down, the cellar stands with great dignity, barn leaning holding its own, the wood shed has fallen in, the chicken coop shadows the hill now the same as then. This old Hollow is alive again with this generation of children and grandchildren along with one named James Allen French, playing on the hills, grapevine swings and the parents yelling "stay out of the stream".

JOHN FRENCH

The French family ancestors were originally natives of Scotland, but they later moved to Wales. Just prior to the American Revolution, one branch of the family settled in Westmoreland County, Virginia, on the Potomac River. This was all within the grant of Lord Fairfax. About 1735, John French married a Welsh lady named Martha. In 1750, John took his wife and four children to present-day Hampshire County, West Virginia where they settled Frenches Neck. John died soon afterwards. His widow married Captain Michael Cresap. John and Martha's eldest son, Matthew, later sold his interest in his father's estate to Captain Cresap and moved to Culpeper County, Virginia. In 1758, he married an Irish girl named Sarah Payne. They had seven children. The family moved to Narrows in Giles County, Virginia. Matthew served in Colonel William Preston's battalion of Montgomery Co. Militia during the Revolution.

One of Matthew's sons, David, married Mary Dingess in 1797. They had nine children. They lived in Airy Mount, Giles County. One of their children, William, became a Confederate Colonel. After the formation of Mercer County in 1837, Colonel French was one of the most prominent citizens in the county. He served as a delegate to the Virginia Assembly and was also a candidate to the Convention of Secession. Also, Colonel French donated the land for what would eventually become Concord College. Colonel French's brother, James Harvey French, was the first principal of Concord Normal School. He eventually became known as "the Father of Concord College". He had also been a Captain in the Confederate Army.

The oldest of Matthew's sons, John, served with his father in the same company during the Revolution. John married Obedience Clay in 1787. They had fifteen children. Their oldest son, William Madison, married Rhoda Caperton in 1839. They lived in Mercer County and had seven children. Shortly after the Civil War, all of their children came to Jackson County, Rockcastle area. There is no record of William's death, but his wife is buried in the French #1 cemetery at Rockcastle. Two of their sons, William Owen and James Allen, bought property on Thirteen Mile Creek, Ripley District, Jackson County on November 13, 1871. William Owen is buried on his farm, now known as the Clinton Brotherton farm, in the French #2 cemetery.

Another of William Madison French's sons, Andrew Jackson, married Nancy M. Miller in 1867. They had four children. Nancy died in 1881. Andrew later married Ruth Jane Hill and together they had six children. Andrew, a veteran of the Confederacy, died on Independence Day, 1934. One of his sons, John Madison, married Stella Blanche Unrue in 1910. They bought property on Clendenin Creek, Putnam County, c. 1914. They built a house and established a general store there in 1921. They had six children. In 1954, they bought property and built a new store on Bowles Ridge. John died in 1957. His widow operated the store until 1976, when ill health forced her to close the business. Blanche died in 1986.

One of their children, Jesse Woodrow, married Maurine Clendenin in 1938. They had six children. Their son Larry P. married Sharon Smith in 1965. Larry, Sharon, and their two daughters, Denise and Dena, have been actively researching the French family tree for a number of years. This family history is a compilation of their findings. WILLIAM MADISON FRENCH

The earliest record of the FRENCH family in Jackson County was the year of 1871 with the purchase of land together by William Madison French and his son James Allen French on Thirteen Mile in the Ripley District.

William had married Rhoda Jane CAPERTON January 2, 1839 in either Giles County, Virginia or Mercer County, West Virginia. They both were born in Giles County, Virginia, William in 1813 and Rhoda January 17, 1817.

William's parents were John and Obedience CLAY French and Rhoda's were John Stodghill Caperton and Margaret SHUMATE. His ancestors originated in Scotland, settled in Westmorland County, Virginia. John French (William's Great Grandfather) born about 1715 married in Westmorland County in 1735 to Martha Upshire of Welsh extraction, his Grandfather Matthew, born 1737 married Sarah PAYNE (who was Irish) in Culpeper County, Virginia in 1758 and his father John married in Montgomery County, Virginia January 16, 1787, but raised his family in Giles County, Virginia.

William and Rhoda had seven children born in Mercer County and the oldest, a daughter died while there at a young age. Three of their children had already grown and married before coming to Jackson County and the others married and raised their families here except for one, daughter Sarah Elizabeth who lived at Liberty, Putnam County, West Virginia.

William's children were: James Allen born December 1840 married Minerva A. BENNETT about 1864 and after her death married Ester Jane HOWELL, in 1885, Sarah Elizabeth born March 17, 1843 had married William W. WOODALL, January 16, 1861 in Giles County, Virginia, Andrew Jackson born October 20, 1846 married Nancy M. MILLER April 21, 1867 in Mercer County and after her death to Ruth Jane HILL about 1882. William Overton French married Mary M. WARE November 8, 1875 Jackson County and second to Estella BLANKINSHIP, Julia A. born December 22, 1851 married William Lester BOSWELL February 10, 1872 in Jackson County and George William born July 28, 1859 married December 21, 1882 to Minerva Brown French in Jackson County (daughter of James Henderson and Nancy MARTIN).

Rhoda CAPERTON French the mother, died in Jackson County, December 13, 1882 and is buried on Thirteen Mile, Rockcastle Road, Given, West Virginia and some twenty years later William joined her there, although he had married again after her death.

William married Matilda PERKINS in Jackson County October 1883 at the age of seventy, but they separated and must have divorced about the year of 1885 Jackson County Deed Book 28-52 mentions this. A death date for William has not been found, he last shows in the Putnam County Census living with his daughter Sarah and husband William Washington Woodall. Submitted by Marieta Derrick Edens

BEAT FREY

Beatus Frey (1858-1936), son of Xavier and Katherine Binder Frey, was born in Oberehrendingen, Canton, Aargau, Switzerland. He married Mary Catherine Frey (1864-1951) on January 21, 1883. She was from Baden, Switzerland, and no relation. They left immediately for the United States on their honeymoon. And what a trip it was — rough seas, and more than a week spent in third class bunks! They no doubt wondered if the journey was an indication of what lay ahead.

They landed in New York City, carrying their belongings in a parcel, and took the first available train to Ripley, West Virginia, where Beat (pronounced Bee-ATT) became known as a skilled worker in wood and stone and was engaged in that work for several years in the town of Ripley. Mary Catherine often said that first year her meals tasted salty from shedding tears, lonely, and in a strange land. Folks in Ripley were very kind and they attracted the attention of the most substantial citizens by their frugality and honesty. It wasn't long before the Freys felt at home in Jackson County.

Five daughters and two sons were born. In 1900, the family moved from a small house in Ripley to "Swiss Cottage Farm", designed and built by Beat. Some of his grandchildren have visited his birthplace in Switzerland, still owned by grand-nephews, and say "it is interesting that he chose a site for his farm house that is very similar to the location of the farm house in which he was born". Mary Jean's mother, Katherine, often said that "on moving day, I walked barefoot to the farm carrying a box of chickens".

The farm, overlooking a scenic wooded valley, was the center of family life. In the next many years, Beat planted a large garden and grew an apple orchard. Pigs, cattle, horses, and chickens were scattered around the farm. Having little money didn't dampen family spirits. Each of the girls had a corncomb doll (a corncomb with a handkerchief wrapped around it for a dress). Hand-me-down clothes were the order of the day.

Lolita (1884-1908) married Fred Hogsett of Ripley, and died in childbirth when their daughter, Marie, was born.

Pauline (1886-1961) married Claude Davis of Fairmont. They had one daughter, Martha Lee. When Claude died (1919) Pauline taught in Fairmont grade and high schools.

Anna Virginia (1891-1970), a nurse, married Earl Dancer of Fairmont who operated a hardware store. They had one daughter, Mary Ann (1926-1987).

Mary Katherine (1893-1962) taught in Ripley and Fairmont schools. She married Clyde Lynn of Fairmont, and they had two children: Mary Jean (born 1929) and Clyde Lewis (1935-1979).

Frances (1895-1978) taught school in Fairmont until her marriage to Dale Miller. They had two children: Carl Stanley and Frances Louise.

Dewey (1898-1976) married Golda Balser of Ripley. They had one son, Dewey, Jr., and farmed for awhile in West Virginia, then moved to Ohio.

Adelbert was born July 1, 1900, and died when 18 days old.

Shortly after Beat's death, Mary Catherine left the farm and lived with her daughters in Fairmont until her death. Beat, Mary Catherine, Lolita, Pauline and the sons are buried in Pine Hill Cemetery, Ripley.

The Freys were devout members of St. Johns Episcopal Church in Ripley. The altar rail at this Church was handcrafted by Beat Frey and was moved from the old Church to the new one that is built in West Ripley. It stands as testimony to his skilled workmanship and his love for his adopted land. Submitted by Mary Jean Lynn Mollard and Carl S. Miller

GARNES

According to family oral history, the Garneses of Jackson County are descendants of Joseph Garnes, a native of Wales, and Lady Sarah Tapley, the daughter of a wealthy Irish nobleman. Joseph came to Ireland and worked as a groomsman for Sarah's father. Despite wide social class differences, Lady Sarah and young Joseph fell in love, and much to the disappointment of Sarah's parents, the young couple eloped, married, and came to America in pre- or early Revolutionary war times. It is believed that Joseph fought for the colonies in the Revolutionary War.

It is not known how many children were born to the couple, but records have been found for two. One son was probably Benjamin Tapley Garnes who married Elizabeth Scanland, a daughter of Keene Scanland, in Botetourt County, Virginia, on January 27, 1813. No further information on this couple has been located.

Another son was Joseph Garnes II, born about 1785. A record of his early years has not been found. On January 4, 1810, in Montgomery County, Virginia, Joseph II married Peggy (Margaret) Minnick, a daughter of Jacob Minnick. In December of 1810 Joseph and Peggy purchased 80 acres of land on Spruce Run, a tributary of New River, in Giles County, Virginia. It is assumed that Joseph and his wife established their home on this tract of land where several of their children were born. Throughout his life Joseph followed the occupation of farming.

By 1820 the young Garnes family had moved to Grasslick in Mason County, Virginia (now part of Jackson County, West Virginia). In 1823 Joseph received from the Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia two land grants of one hundred acres each in what is now Jackson County. One grant was located on Grasslick and the other on Stonelick.

Joseph died in Jackson County in 1851. It is not known when his wife Peggy died, but she was still living in 1836 when she and Joseph returned to Giles County, Virginia, and sold their property purchased in 1810.

Whether Joseph remarried at some point in his life is not known. Some references refer to a Susan as his wife. Susan may have been a second wife or Susan and Peggy may have been the same person with Peggy's full name being Peggy (Margaret) Susan.

Since all of the known children of Joseph Garnes were born by 1830, and since Joseph's wife Peggy was definitely living in 1836, it seems safe to assume that Peggy was the mother of all of Joseph's children and that the maternal ancestor of the Garneses of Jackson County was Peggy Minnick Garnes.

Known children of Joseph and Peggy Garnes were: (1) Mary married John Lanham, (2) Tapley married first Anna Parsons and second Annis King, (3) Susan married Joshua Parsons, (4) Adam married Mary (Polly) Boggess, (5) Eleanor married Thomas Wolf, (6) George married first Nancy Crane and second Caroline Pearson, (7) Jackson married first Elizabeth Burdette and second Harriet Shamblin, (8) Joseph married Anne Elizabeth Parsons, and (9) James with no record of marriage.

The last three children, Jackson, Joseph, and James were triplets, born May 30, 1830. Fighting for the Union, both Jackson and Joseph were in the third Regiment of the Virginia Cavalry during the Civil War. While a prisoner of War, Joseph died in the Second Division Rebel Hospital, Danville, Virginia, on November 5, 1864. Jackson survived the war and died in Jackson County on February 4, 1910. Oral tradition says that James was also in the Civil War, but no record of this has been found. The last official record referring to James was dated 1851.

A lasting reminder of the early Garneses of

Roy and Ora Jividen

Jackson County is Garnes Knob, the highest point in the county, and named for some of the early Garneses who once lived in the vicinity of the Knob. Garnes Knob is located in eastern Jackson County near the Putnam County line, and can be seen from Route 34. Submitted by Chester E. Bartram

TAPLEY GARNES

Tapley Garnes was born in 1812 on Spruce Run, a tributary of New River, in Giles County, Virginia, and was the second child and first son of Joseph and Peggy (Margaret) Minnick Garnes. His paternal grandparents were Joseph and Lady Sarah Tapley Garnes, who are said to have arrived in America from Ireland shortly before the beginning of the Revolutionary War. Tapley Garnes is one of about eight descendants named Tapley in honor of Lady Sarah Tapley, the daughter of an Irish nobleman.

About 1819, when Tapley was seven or eight years of age, the young Joseph Garnes family moved to the Grasslick area of Mason County, Virginia (now part of Jackson County, West Virginia). Tapley grew up on the farm which his father had received as a land grant from the Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia in 1823.

On January 18, 1836 Tapley married Anna Parsons, who was reared on Stonelick in Mason County (now part of Jackson County). Her parents were John and Mary Greathouse Parsons. Anna's paternal grandparents were Charles Sr. and Elizabeth Chestnut Parsons, prominent early pioneer settlers in the Frozen Camp area of Jackson County.

As was typical of many pioneer families in the late 1830s, Tapley and Anna's early home, located in the vicinity of Garnes Knob near Kenna, consisted of a one-room cabin with kitchen, bedroom, dining room, and parlor all combined in one. Anna cooked for her family over an open fire in the large fireplace at one end of the room. Definite progress was made when the family was able to build a larger home and to acquire its first cookstove.

Tapley was a life-long farmer, and he and Anna reared their family on Grasslick. During the Civil War Tapley served the Union as a private in the Home Guard in Jackson County. His son, Doctor Franklin, was a first lieutenant in the same Home Guard unit.

The Home Guard, under the command of Captain Henry C. Hunter, was organized at Ripley, August 1, 1863, to assist in the capture of several hundred Confederate soldiers who had escaped across the Ohio River into Jackson County following the Battle of Buffington Island in Meigs County, Ohio, on July 19, 1863. The Home Guard also operated against the various bodies of Confederate guerrillas and bushwhackers in the county known as "Moccasin Rangers".

At age 64, Anna Garnes died on June 16, 1877, and is buried in Garnes Cemetery near Kenna. Tapley was remarried in Kanawha County, on November 5, 1879 to Annis King, a resident of Kanawha County. After their marriage, Tapley and Annis resided in Jackson County, probably in his old homeplace. The date of Tapley's death and the place of his burial are unknown.

GARRISON

Coonrod Fisher, Peter Fisher's descendant, arrived from the Rhine River Region of Germany in the early 1700s. Coonrod Fisher first appears on Jackson County records with a deed dated May 4, 1814, when he purchased 200 acres from Bedford Foster for $100.

He married Rachel Miller November 5, 1805 in Monroe County, and in 1814, moved to Jackson County. They had six boys and two girls. One, Rebecca Fisher, married William Hill. To this union were born: George, John, William Perry, Daniel, Roxy Ann, Sarah Belle, and Rachel.

On June 30, 1872, Roxy Ann Hill married John Allan Garrison, who was the son of Addison Garrison and Isabel Dillon of Mercer County.

Addison Garrison served in 8th Regiment Company "D", Virginia as a volunteer during the Civil War. He died in the Military Hospital in Parkersburg, West Virginia and was buried in the military cemetery there. Isabelle, his wife, moved with her son to Peru, Nebraska, and died there in February, 1900.

To John and Roxy Garrison were born: William Thomas, John Wesley (Reverend J.W. Garrison), Barnett Martin, Jacob Addison, Sarah Canzadie, Rebecca Isabelle, Rachel Belle, Roxie Ellen and Mary Elizabeth. On July 4, 1903, John Wesley Garrison married Gertrude Newell. To this union were born: Hazel (deceased), Jacob Luther, Minnie Belle, Macel Margaret, Earl Wesley and Agatha May. The two boys died before age one.

back row: Minnie, Hazle;
front row: Agatha, Gertrude, Wesley and Macel

Gertrude Newell was the daughter of Jacob Newell, Jr. and Margaret Elizabeth Stewart, who was a sister to George Stewart of Evans, West Virginia.

Preacher Wes Garrison (called by many, Uncle Wes) was born May 21, 1877 and died December 6, 1947. He entered the ministry in July 1897. He spent the next 50 years preaching the Word of God, and serving the Lord by helping all those in need in sickness and death, and those needing counseling. My earliest recollection are of people coming to our home at all hours, day or night.

Most of his ministry was in Jackson County, where we lived and received some schooling. He was pastor to many churches. Some I remember well are: Emma Chapel, Rock Spring, Allen's Fork, Hickory Grove, Stone Lick, Fishers Chapel, Mt. Alto and others. There were also churches in other counties he pastored.

Preacher Garrison was a great storyteller; he could take a small incident and weave a very interesting story. Some of my favorites were the ones he told about the Cowboys and Indians during the time they lived in Nebraska in the late 1880s.

He preached his first sermon the first Sunday of July, 1897 and in celebration of 50 years in the ministry, he preached his last sermon using the same Bible and text, on the first Sunday of July, 1947 from his wheel chair and the porch of his daughter, Mrs. Minnie Stover. His text for this occasion was "He that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved". Submitted by Agatha May Garrison and Macel Margaret Garrison

F. H. GERLACH

Frederick Herman Gerlach was the eighth child of John and Dorothea Schramm Gerlach and the grandson of Kasper and Elizabeth Kraz Gerlach, immigrants from Hesse, Germany (now West Germany). Frederick was born on the home place near Jackson Chapel Church July 7, 1870 and died June 21, 1952, just short of his 82nd birthday. Fred, as he was commonly known, had a brilliant mind, and it remained so until his death. He was greatly loved by all his grandchildren, and he returned that love with his ever-present humor. He was active in community affairs when he was raising his family, but age found him relaxing those efforts.

Frederick married Czarena Elberta Parsons, a daughter of Mary Bell Williamson and James Tanner Parsons and a granddaughter of John Williamson. Czarena was born October 31, 1872, and died June 26, 1961, age 88 years.

Czarena was a petite woman but was full of energy as she conducted her daily affairs. She and Fred had their share of trouble as they nursed several of their children through many illnesses including diphtheria at which time they lost "Little Loia". They almost lost another child of "cholera infantum", but Audrey survived and lived until 1988. Another time, three of the children had typhoid fever and were very ill.

After seeing two more children die, Czarena remarked that she hoped that she would never live to see another of her children die, even though they were now grown. However, she did live to see her daughter, Frances, buried. Czarena died three days later. She had attended the funeral and was thought to be bearing up well. It seems that her heart just couldn't take losing another child.

A fire almost claimed their house, but it was later remodeled with a new kitchen and two new bedrooms.

Czarena cooked three large meals a day, baking fresh biscuits and serving home-churned butter, homemade jelly and applesauce for each meal.

Their children and grandchildren remember with fondness how Czarena would instruct them when Fred entered the room to "give Fred your chair." Fred always was the center of her universe, and everything she did concerned his comfort.

Czarena added to the family income by raising chickens and turkeys to sell and trade for groceries, etc. Every Sunday would find one or several of her chickens in the pot for family members and friends who came to spend the day. One Sunday she cooked for fifty-six people. She didn't seem to get flustered over it. She was used to cooking and a "few" more didn't make that much difference. Czarena, also, separated milk and sold milk, butter, and cream, as well as eggs.

Czarena had an eye for pretty things and would sometimes buy them from peddlers who came by to sell their wares. She would store them in a drawer and proudly show them to visitors, but she seldom used them, often giving them away.

Fred and Czarena often opened their doors to the less fortunate. They raised a grandson, Ralph McDermott, and became foster parents to Glen Kerns, who later married Ella Clark from New Haven. He is buried in Louisville, Ohio. Several others passed through their doors, but their stays were not as long.

After Fred died, their daughter Audrey Barr and husband, Addo, moved into the home place to make a home for Czarena. After Czarena died, they sold the farm to James L. Jordan and bought a place on the new Route 2 bypass, where they lived until their deaths.

Fred and Czarena are buried in the same Jackson Chapel Cemetery across from the church by the same name for which Fred's father donated the land and where John and Dorothea Gerlach are buried.

Fred and Czarena became the parents of ten children, three boys and seven girls. Two are still back row: Edith, Audrey, Frances, Carl, Margaret and Beulah; Fred and Czarena Gerlach living, Beulah Knapp and Carl Gerlach. They reside in Point Pleasant only a few minutes from each other.

Hallie Bell Gerlach (September 25, 1891-June 4, 1912) was their first child. She married Oak Grimm and lived less than a mile from her parents on Chestnut Ridge. When she was twenty years old, she died in childbirth. The daughter was stillborn and is buried beside Hallie at Jackson Chapel Cemetery in the family plot with her parents. The child was unnamed.

Wilbur Willard Gerlach (December 9, 1893-March 21, 1967) was their second child. In 1917 he went to Iowa to find work, met and married Blanche Mac Dumbald. They had four children, Audrey Mae, Paul Vernor, Willard Franklin, and Dwayne Russell. They owned a farm and are buried in a cemetery overlooking their farm. Audrey Mae, their first child, married Royce Strong, and they had four girls, Karen Eileen, Sandra Jeanne, Ovida Sue, and Debra Ann. They live in Iowa. Carl was the baby of the family and was a favorite of everyone, especially Czarena. When he was still at home and dating, you could often see Czarena washing and shining his car. Nothing was too good for Carl, but he never let all of the attention spoil him. Submitted by Zelda Knapp, Beulah Knapp, and Carl Gerlach

JOHN AND DOROTHEA GERLACH

John Gerlach, son of Casper and Elizabeth Krasz Gerlach, was born in Hesse, Germany (now West Germany), on July 23, 1828, and immigrated to the United States in the 1830s. In 1852 John married Dorothea Schramm from Alsace, France, who had also immigrated to the United States.

John and Dorothea finally bought a farm on the Old Clarksburg Road on the Mason and Jackson County line. They would later donate enough land for a church, Mt. Hebron, which later became known as Jackson Chapel. Across the road from the church is the Jackson Chapel Cemetery in which John and Dorothea are buried, as well as many of their descendants.

John and Dorothea were prosperous farmers and were thought of as being good neighbors. John served in the Civil War and would later draw a monthly pension due to minor injuries he received which caused complications as he became older. He walked with a cane and suffered from what he called "rheumatism." John Gerlach died in May, 1897, and Dorothea died February 4, 1912.

More is remembered about Dorothea because some of her grandchildren were born after John died and are still living. Beulah Knapp, who was born in 1900 and was eleven years old when her grandmother Dorothea died, remembers that she rode in her dad's sled to go to the home and to the funeral. Although the road was usually muddy after a rain, at the time that Dorothea died the road was frozen with snow on the ground. The casket was placed in a back bedroom, and visitors and family would go there to view Dorothea. Her funeral was "preached" at the Jackson Chapel Church just up the hill from the house.

Beulah remembers one time when she and some other girls were at Grandmother Dorothea's. The girls were singing some songs when they began laughing about something. When Grandmother walked into the room from the kitchen where she was cooking a meal, she admonished the girls by saying, "Girls, when you sing, sing; when you laugh, laugh."

Dorothea's home reflected the frugality which she and John practiced. Much of the furniture, quilts, rugs, and curtains were "homemade." There were very few, if any, luxuries, despite the fact that the John Gerlachs were thought to be one of the most prosperous families in the area. The thriving 225 acres of farm land, the Civil War pension, and the Willow Tree Post Office, which was operated from their living room, made a lucrative income.

Beulah remembers a wooden rectangular table next to a wall in the kitchen. Under this table was a copper boiler which leaked water but proudly held Grandmother's homemade loaves of bread, protected by a clean, white cloth. Dorothea also owned and used a very large dough board. Beulah remembers it as "the largest one I've ever seen."

Dorothea also had a pie safe in which she stored her dishes. After she died, her son, Ed, held an auction. Beulah sent her husband, Herbert, with instructions to buy the pie safe. He did, and Beulah and her family used it for many years for food storage. Beulah's daughter, Imogene, now is its owner. Beulah believes that this pie safe crossed the ocean when the Gerlachs came to the United States.

The largest piece of furniture in the kitchen was the "eating" table with chairs. It was covered with an oil cloth.

A bench against the wall held a bucket of water, crocks, pots, and skillets.

The floor was bare, with well-scrubbed boards. The windows were hung with crisp, white curtains.

This property is now owned by a great grandson, Ross Gerlach. A fifth generation great, great grandson, Jimmy Gerlach, lives there now.

John and Dorothea had 11 children, two girls and nine boys:

1. Eva Margaret Gerlach Ridinger, March 21, 1853-March 21, 1933.
2. Elizabeth Gerlach Lanfried, September 1, 1854-September 14, 1882.
3. John F. Gerlach, September 23, 1856-February 20, 1857.
4. William Gerlach, December 23, 1857-December 9, 1933.
5. Edward Gerlach, December 29, 1860-February 22, 1931.
6. John Kasper Gerlach, January 26, 1866-July 23, 1928.
7. George Washington Gerlach, February 12, 1868-November 4, 1936.
8. Frederick Herman Gerlach, July 7, 1870-June 21, 1952.
9. Alberto Curtis Gerlach, April 28, 1873-July 30, 1915.
10. Harvey Adam Gerlach, March 10, 1875-June 15, 1952.
11. Charles Vernor Gerlach, November 15, 1877-May 6, 1967.

Frederick Herman Gerlach's family is told elsewhere in another story. Submitted by Zelda Knapp and Beulah Knapp

John and Dorothea were married on March 11, 1852 in the Evangelical Protestant Church, New Swickley Township, Beaver County, Pennsylvania by the Reverend F. Winters.

In 1852 they bought 40 acres of land in Gallia County, Ohio and lived there until September 2, 1859 when they bought 169 1/2 acres from Jackson Smith and moved to their Willow Tree farm in Mason and Jackson counties, West Virginia. The

The Willow Tree Post office and telephone exchange were operated from the home by John and Dorothea. Also the school teacher stayed the winter and the mail carrier stayed over night during bad weather.

11. Charles Vernor Gerlach (1877-1967) married Ora Keisling. Children-Zelda, Lucia and Charles.

John and Dorothea lived on their Willow Tree farm until their death and are buried in the Jackson Chapel Cemetery which is located on their farm. The Mt. Hebron or Jackson Chapel Church is located near the cemetery. The land for the church was given by John and Dorothea with John being one of the first trustees. This farm is still in the Gerlach family and is presently owned by Ross Gerlach, a great great grandson of John and Dorothea. Submitted by Velma Gerlach Burris

JAMES GILES

In the early records, this family name was sometimes written as Gyles, Guiles or Guyles.

James Giles (ca. 1788-March 20, 1875) was born in Rhode Island. He was a soldier during the War of 1812. He served in the Ohio Militia and fought in the battle of Maumee against the British and Indians. Later he served in the Pennsylvania Militia.

James Giles and Elizabeth Flesher (born ca. 1800 and apparently died before 1870) were married May 12, 1817, on Mill Creek near Ripley. They were living in Lebanon Township, Meigs County, Ohio, in 1820. However, they are said to have been living in what is now Jackson County, West Virginia, when their son Benjamin was born in 1822.

Rebecca Giles was probably a daughter of James and Elizabeth Giles. They are known to have had at least five other children: Benjamin, Susan, Elizabeth, Annie and Violette.

Rebecca Giles (born ca. 1820) married Nelson Hughes on August 12, 1838. Their children were: Squire, Dilila, Levina, Lorena, Irvin, George and William.

Benjamin Giles (October 21, 1822-October

19, 1862) married Mary Jane Campbell (May 28, 1827-March 8, 1905) on October 5, 1849 and they lived at Hemlock. She was a daughter of James and Jane (Cooper) Campbell. Her parents were Irish immigrants and Mary is said to have been born aboard the ship the family sailed over on. Benjamin and Mary had one son: William Nicholas Giles (September 19, 1850-February 13, 1923). Mary's second marriage was to William Hughes on November 14, 1870. They had one son: James D. Hughes (born ca. 1871).

Susan Giles (born ca. 1830) married James Hughes on July 23, 1851. Their children were: Elizabeth, William, Emma, Ulysses, Charles and Myrta.

Elizabeth Giles (born ca. 1832) married Edward W. Grant (1820-1880) on August 2, 1855. She apparently died before February 1857.

Annie Giles (born ca. 1835 and probably died in April 1857) married William Jeffers (1828-1904) on June 15, 1852 and moved to Lewis County, West Virginia. He was a Union soldier during the Civil War. Their children were: James, born 1853; Elizabeth, born 1855; and William, born 1857.

Violette Giles (ca. 1837-April 10, 1892) married Joshua K. DeWeese (1834-1915) on May 17, 1860. Joshua served in the Union Army during the Civil War. Their children were: George, born 1861; James, born 1863; Perry, born 1867; Charles, born 1870; Ellen, born 1872 and Horace, born 1874.

William H. Giles (January 29, 1848-July 18, 1918) was probably a grandson of James Giles and an illegitimate son of Susan Giles. However, this is disputed by one source, which records him as a son of James. William, despite the fact he was underage, served in the Union Army during the Civil War. In 1870, he moved to Roane County, and married Evaline Hess on November 17, 1870. Their known children were: O.B., born August 22, 1871; Benjamin H., born October 10, 1873 and served as a soldier during the Spanish-American War; and W.P., born March 14, 1883.

William Nicholas Giles, son of Benjamin and Mary (Campbell) Giles, married Sarah Elizabeth Wells (May 4, 1853-February 12, 1936) on December 14, 1869. Sarah was a daughter of Catherine Wells, who married Daniel Rice in 1880. William and Sarah's children were: Emy (1870-1891); Ida (1872-1945) married first Robert Murray, second Edward Stanley; Thomas (1875-1962); William "Bert" (1877-1970) married Malissa Holcomb; Mary "Molly" (1880-1951) married Zane Holcomb; Minnie (1883-1927) married Johnny McCourt; John (1886-1964) married Florence McCourt; Everett (1888-1972) married Myrtle White; Homer (1891-1954) married Bertha Taylor.

William Nicholas Giles moved his family to Webster County in 1893. However, his grandson, Delbert Giles, son of John, has since moved back to Jackson County and lives in Ravenswood. Submitted by Roger B. Stanley

EDWARD AND LILLY GODBEY

The surname Godbey is a rare name comparatively speaking, and appears to be locational in origin. Research indicates that it can be associated with the English, meaning "one who came from Goadby (Goutis Village)." Spelling variations of the Godbey surname to be Godby, Goadby and Goadbey.

The Godbeyes are direct descendants of Yeoman Thomas Godby, the first to come to America, leaving England in 1607. Arriving in Jamestown, Virginia, in 1609 due to a shipwreck of the "Sea Venture." Thomas and his shipmates reconstructed another vessel from available materials to make the "Deliverance" then left Bermuda Islands to America.

GORDON HUSTON GODBEY

Gordon was born at Newbern, Pulaski County, Virginia, January 20, 1841. The seventh child and fifth son of William V. Godbey and Rhoda (Miller) Godbey. There were 12 children born into this union. They lived in Pulaski County for a number of years before William moved his family to Raleigh County, Virginia (now West Virginia) sometime in the 1850s. In the 1860 census of Virginia, Raleigh County list Gordon living at home and his occupation as being a farm laborer.

On June 3, 1861, at the Raleigh County Court House, Gordon and his brother James H. Godbey enlisted in the Confederate Army. They were assigned to the (1st) Company E, 36th Regiment Virginia Infantry. This unit later became the (2nd) Company C, 36th Regiment Virginia Infantry and was nicknamed the "Raleigh Rangers." Both brothers served with the 36th through 1863 and were participants in many battles and skirmishes. Gordon was transferred to the 23rd Virginia Infantry Battalion in April 1864 and later to Company C, 26th Virginia Infantry Battalion. Gordon fought in many battles, before being captured by the Union forces on September 23, 1864. Gordon was taken to point lookout Prison Camp in Maryland on October 3, 1864, and was assigned to the prisoner section known as Company A. Division 9. Gordon was kept at the prison camp until March 17, 1865, when he was exchanged for a Union prisoner. He signed his Parole of Honor at Charleston, West Virginia on May 15, 1865, ending his military service.

Perkins, for $358.88. Gordon then bought 45¼ acres on October 10, 1900, this property was adjacent to the first tract and was bought for $226.25. He must have been in Jackson County before that because, their daughter, Cora Myrtle was born in 1887 at Staat Mills in Jackson County, West Virginia.

On August 4, 1890 Gordon was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The baptism took place in Straight Run, near Staats Mills, West Virginia. In 1891 Gordon was ordained a priest, an elder in 1893 and a high priest in 1896. When the West Virginia District was organized, he was elected president and continued in that position until his death. Gordon received the "Patriarchal Blessing" and became a member of the "Quorum of High Priests" on April 11, 1904, at Kirkland, Ohio. His preaching took him away from the family for weeks at a time, so his wife had to attend to the farm and children. Gordon was a dedicated person, who gave the last years of his life to God's work.

Gordon passed away at the family home in Belgrove, Jackson County, West Virginia, on March 19, 1908. He was buried on top of a hill, (now called Deer Knob Cemetery) behind the family home. GOLLEHON

The Gollehon family has been residing in Jackson County for 30 years, since John L. Gollehon Jr. came to work in the Kaiser Aluminum Plant in Ravenswood, West Virginia. He moved his wife and two children from Beckley, West Virginia to live temporarily in Evans, until they bought a home of their own in Ripley where they now reside. John L. Gollehon, Jr. is the son of J. Luther Gollehon, Sr. and Essie Craven Gollehon, born at Seven Mile Ford, Virginia August 26, 1920. He grew up in Raleigh County, West Virginia where he graduated from High School and attended Beckley College. Completed a welding course and was employed at the Ship Yards in Baltimore, Maryland until World War II began. He was inducted into the Army three weeks before he married October 28, 1942 to Marie Deck, daughter of Stewart and Louvenia Davis Deck of Sophia, West Virginia. He was sent overseas October 11, 1943 with the 3rd Army and returned in 1945.

John and Marie started housekeeping in a small apartment in downtown Beckley, where their first son, John L. Gollehon III, was born November 12, 1946. They then moved to Pulaski, Virginia where they lived for the next ten years while John worked in the Construction Industry. There their second son was born, Joe Wayne Gollehon, born May 9, 1951. These two children were the only children born to Marie and John Gollehon.

John L. and Marie Gollehon

The Gollehon boys, John III and Joe W. both graduated from Ripley High School. John attended Beckley College and West Virginia University Branch in Parkersburg. He married February 14, 1976 to Brenda Guinn Larkin. John adopted her daughter Tia and they had a daughter of their own, Courtney. They lived in Parkersburg for eight years before the marriage ended in divorce. Their two daughters are a great pleasure to the Gollehon family.

Joe Wayne Gollehon graduated from West Virginia University and married June 1971 to Deborah Harmison, daughter of Charles Carlton and Jean Higman Harmison of Berkeley Springs and Ravenswood, West Virginia. Their home is in Barboursville, West Virginia.

Although the Gollehon family is not a native family of Jackson County, living here 30 years makes them feel like one. Many natives that first welcomed us here are now deceased, and our thoughts often go back to those wonderful people and realize what a blessing they were to us, a newcomer.

John Gollehon, Jr. retired from Kaiser Aluminum August 31, 1982 after 23 years of employment. His wife Marie retired from Jackson General Hospital January 1, 1980. Submitted by Marie D. Gollehon

ALPHA GOOD

A tract of 358 acres of land issued to Francis Good on January 1, 1859 by Henry A. Wise, Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia, started a farm home for the Good family along the waters of the middle fork of Pocatalico in Jackson County. Unfortunately for Francis it was later found that the patent was invalid as the land was owned by the Bruen family of Connecticut causing him to have to purchase the land and reducing the tract to 288 acres. His son, Alexander deeded ½ acre to the Francis Good heirs for a cemetery which still exists today in a 55 acre tract owned by great, great, great grandson, Rex Leon Good.

Alpha Good (born January 12, 1880, died July 8, 1959) and Icy Pearl Rhodes (born October 11, 1887, died April 14, 1954) were married on January 14, 1904 and became the parents of ten children: Glen Edmond; Bertha Mae (Carihfield); Gladie Ann (Little); William Ivory; Ova Roscoe; Judy Ethel (Casto); Perry Stanton; Orville Alpha; Arnold Dudley and Monid Larry.

Alpha's mother was Sarah Fields Raines, his father, Perry Stanton Good, a son of Alexander Good who was married to Nancy Booth of Tazewell County, Virginia. Alexander served in the Home Guard during the Civil War. His parents were Francis and Malinda Good.

Icy Pearl Rhodes Good was a daughter of William A.H. Rhodes and Senabeth Rhoades. The Rhodes homeplace is known today as the Hayward Rhodes farm. Icy was sister to Wartman, G. Washington, Dan, Brady, James, Cecil and Ester Rhodes. Her ancestors were primarily German.

Alpha Good claimed to be "black Dutch." He was a farmer, hunter and woodcutter. He told of logging days, cutting trees and floating them down the streams to the Poca River in the Spring. He would visit his family for a week or two in the fall, "after the work was done", and when he left there would be two to four cords of firewood, neatly stacked, enough to last the winter. He and Icy lived on a small, primitive farm at Kentuck. The unpainted frame house stood on a slope of the rolling hills. The older grandchildren can remember that an animal skin would be tacked to the shed, and that there would be a wood rain barrel at each end of the house, and a leather string attached to a wooden latch that opened the front door of the house.

Alpha Good

Icy Pearl cooked huge meals of golden brown fried rabbit, stewed squirrel, green beans in summer, pinto beans in winter. All were cooked in large cast iron pots and skillets on an iron, flat-top wood range.

Alpha and Icy's home was a warm and inviting place. Alpha never ran short of a story whether it was his visit to the last public hanging in Ripley in 1897 or a handed down ghost story. Their home was filled with music as all the sons played a variety of instruments from spoons to fiddle which would bring Alpha to his gumbooted feet to dance a jig. His style of dance is similar to what is known today as clogging. Submitted by William R. Good

ROSCOE AND BESSIE GOOD

In the 1920s many of the farms in Jackson County could no longer support the growing families. Bessie Wilma Thomas (born September 14, 1908) of Aplin/Gay, found herself in this position as her father, Samuel Robert Thomas had died at an early age leaving her mother, Corda Duffield Thomas and her two brothers and five sisters to find ways to support themselves. Bessie found work at the Kelly Axe Factory in Charleston, West Virginia.

Ova Roscoe Good (born April 28, 1908, died September 17, 1970) of Kentucky also found work at Kelly Axe Factory where he was smitten by the beautiful, golden, red-haired Bessie. They were married on April 30, 1927 and lived briefly on the west side of Charleston until shortly before their son, Rex Leon was born in 1930. Previously, a daughter, Betty Jo, died at birth.

Ova Roscoe and Bessie Wilma (Thomas) Good

Roscoe and Bessie had an opportunity to take over and manage a farm for Willie Casto in Jackson County adjacent to Perry Casto's farm on Bear Fork near Belgrove. This was more suited to their growing family. Leona Mae (Fisher) (born 1932), Loretta Fae (Shuster) (born 1934) and Phyllis Imogene (Burdette) (born 1937, died 1987) were born at this home with Doc Lance riding horseback from Ripley to attend the births.

Roscoe and Bessie worked very hard to raise sheep, cattle, chickens, corn, hay and garden crops. During the depression years they had plenty to eat. When they had saved enough money they bought the Herman Casto farm at Staats Mills in 1939. It was located on a hill near the United Brethren, Vista Church, where they attended.

At this home, Thomas Rondall Good, was born in 1941. The family made many friends on nearby farms such as: Fred and Vergie Fields, Willie and Corda Fields, Otha and Ina Price and the Owen Casto's.

The World War II years, 1941-1945, brought new stresses to farm families. Sons and fathers were being quickly drafted for military duty. Roscoe had returned to work at Kelly Axe in Charleston, coming home on weekends. The combination of a large family and a defense job gave him a 4-F military rating and he did not have to go into military service.

In 1944, the eldest son, Rex Leon, started to Ripley High School, walking several miles to reach a school bus. This, plus Roscoe's continued work in Charleston, led the family to move to Kenna in the fall of 1944, where daughter, Lorene Kay (Postlethwait) was born. Two years later the family found a permanent home, a farm in Putnam County where Jackson and Kanawha Counties join. The children continued to attend high school at Ripley due to the long distances to travel to Putnam County schools. Three additional children were added to the family; twins, Judith Ann (Cleary) and Jerry Allen (February 24, 1947), and David Wayne on December 24, 1951. When David graduated from Ripley High School in 1969, it was found that the family had a record of having at least one child enrolled in that school each year for 25 years.

While none of Roscoe and Bessie's children and 39 grandchildren lived in Jackson County in 1989, they enjoy tracing their ancestry to the Staats Mill Bridge, to Aplin Ridge, Laurel Run and

Kentuck; and, to the loggers, the farmers, the teachers, the grocers, and to the justices of the peace that pioneered this country. Submitted by Lori Shuster

ABRAHAM AND SAMANTHA GORRELL

My ancestral trail really begins with Moses and Margaret (Ward) Gorrell who tradition says brought their family down the Ohio River by flatboat to the Murraysville area around the latter 1840s. Moses was born in 1801 in Richmond, Ohio (Jefferson County) and died sometime before 1860 in Jackson County. Margaret was born in 1813 in Pennsylvania. They had eight children:

Sarah (born 1831 married John LaRue); Thomas (1835-1893 married Nancy Willet); Jeremiah (born 1836 married Susan Keyes); John (born 1837, no wife); Abraham (1839-1915 married Samantha Holdren); Stephen (1843-1919 married Eliza Jane Murphy then Nancy Willet Gorrell); Rachel (born 1846 married J.L. McMurray) and David (1847-1924 married Mary Jane Fisher).

My great grandfather was Abraham. He and Samantha were married May 25, 1876 in Athens County, Ohio by someone named Lawson and had six children living somewhere in the Sandyville area: Albert (married Laura Archer); Nancy (married Lindsey Seckman); Carrie (married Abe Willet); Melissa (married Oda Dragoo); Mary (married Harm Waggner); and Tom (married Elsie Finch). Abraham along with brothers, Stephen, Thomas and Jeremiah enlisted in the army during the Civil War. Pension records list Abraham in company H 3rd Regiment of (then) Virginia Voluntary Cavalry. He enlisted at Parkersburg May 2, 1863 and was honorably discharged at Wheeling June 30, 1865. He was described in these papers as 5 feet 10 inches, of light complexion with blue eyes and sandy hair. He tells in a letter to the Commissioner of Pensions (written by someone else-he signed with an X) that his birth records burned "with the contents of my father's house when I was nine years old."

Abraham and Samantha (Holdren) Gorrell

His son Albert (1886-1942) and Laura (married November 23, 1912) were my grandparents. Their seven children: Rex (1913-1981 married Betty ?); Charles (born 1915 married Betty Carmichael); Kenneth (1919-1985 married Sarah Ann Worley); Lawrence (born 1923 married Willadene Rominger); Maxine (born 1929 married Jim Gates); Pauline (born 1934 married Clay Boggess); and Kathryn (born 1934 married Laco Anderson).

Kenneth and Ann were my parents. They were married in Pomeroy, Ohio October 24, 1948. Their children: Karen Rosalind (born 1953 married Frank Bowers-children: J.T., Kenny, Sarah, and Trevor); Thomas Albert, named after both grandfathers (born 1957); and myself, Kendra Ann (born 1958 married Charles E. Johnson). Chuck and I were married at the Sandyville Church of Christ (Jackson County) May 3, 1986, our marriage license is recorded in Pleasants County and we now live in Ritchie County. As I pondered my own records I realized why it is so difficult to trace my ancestors. Chuck and I have three children (my step-children): Michelle (born 1969); Charles, Jr. (born 1970) and Yvonne (born 1972). We lost a baby girl, Celina Rochelle February 25, 1989 who is buried at the Independence Cemetery in Sandyville beside her grandfather, Kenneth and not far from her great grandparents, Albert and Laura. Her great, great grandparents, Abraham and Samantha, are buried down the hill in the middle of the older section of the cemetery. Chuck and I are expecting another baby in June to join the lineage.

I am in hopes of compiling a comprehensive history of the Gorrells in Jackson County to be kept in the libraries for future generations. In the meantime, I apologize to those members that I have had to "skim over" in this writing. If anyone wishes to contact me, please do so by writing my "home address" on Copper Fork Road: Rt. 2, Box 7, Sandyville, 25275. Submitted by Kendra Gorrell Johnson

BRIGITTE AND RON GORRELL

Mom and Dad were married in beautiful Hawaii in a military wedding at Schofield Barracks thus bringing together a union which began thousands of miles away and many more thousands of miles apart.

Dad (Otmer Ronald Gorrell) was born in Ravenswood, West Virginia, on July 24, 1931, to Harry David and Georgia Minnie (Kelbaugh) Gorrell. After graduating from Ravenswood High School in 1949, he left for college at West Virginia University. In 1951, he enlisted in the Army and soon found himself serving on the Korean peninsula. After discharge from the Army, and another two years at West Virginia University (1954-56), Dad reenlisted in the Army. After attending Infantry Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, Georgia, he graduated a second lieutenant in 1958. Dad's first assignment was at a combat experimentation center in sunny California. After two years at Fort Ord, Dad was reassigned to Hawaii.

Mom (Brigitte Stehr) was born in Breslau, Germany, on August 10, 1939, to Bruno and Elfriede (Pelz) Stehr. Mom's father, who was serving in the German Army, was reported missing-in-action during the 1942-3 Stalingrad campaign. In 1944, Grandma Stehr moved Mom and the rest of the family to Ludenscheid to avoid Russian occupation. Mom graduated from high school at St. Mary's Catholic School in 1957. The next year, she immigrated to Chicago, Illinois, where she lived with relatives and where she met Dad in 1959. After a couple years, including several visits and many letters, Mom flew to Hawaii where she and Dad were married on May 7, 1961.

Before leaving Hawaii in 1963, Mom and Dad had their first child, Byron Jay. Byron graduated from West Point in 1985 and is now a captain at Fort Polk, Louisiana. And, just like Dad, Byron had a military wedding this past May (1989) in Lafayette, Louisiana, where he married Peggy Welsh, daughter of a retired Navy officer.

Dad and Mom moved to Fort Gordon, Georgia, where in 1964 number two child was born: Pamela Joan. Pamela graduated from the University of Colorado, Colorado Springs, in 1987, and is now working as a certified public accountant in San Antonio, Texas.

While Dad was attending Special Forces school at Fort Bragg, North Carolina in early 1965, Mom was having their third child, Debra Kay, in Parkersburg, West Virginia. Debbie, married to Stephen Shead in 1986, now lives near Orlando, Florida. They have one son: Christopher.

Dad then had two one-year tours to Vietnam where he served with the "Green Berets," while Mom and we kids lived in Fayetteville, North Carolina. Between these two tours, Dad attended a couple Army courses at Fort Benning, Georgia. After Dad's last Vietnam tour, we all went to Bad Tolz, a small Army post in southern Germany. In 1971, our younger brother, Aaron Kent, was born near there, in Munich, Germany. Dad was reassigned to Thailand for a year (1972) while the family moved to Santa Barbara, California. Dad had a final short tour at Fort MacArthur, California, before retiring in 1973 with the rank of major.

Following retirement, Dad returned to college, graduating from the University of Southern California in 1976 with a Masters Degree in Business Administration. He immediately left for Saudi Arabia to work for Arabian American Oil Company while we stayed in Santa Barbara. In 1977 we joined him and spent the next seven years in SUNNY, AND HOT, Saudi Arabia.

In 1984, we returned to the United States to live at 2617 Scorpio Drive, Colorado Springs, Colorado. Dad and Mom still live there with Aaron who is now in college, majoring in pre-medicine. Submitted by Pamela Gorrell

HARRY DAVID GORRELL

Harry David Gorrell, a well-known and highly respected business and civic leader of Jackson County, was born on March 24, 1903, to John Wesley and Fannie Jane (McKinley) Gorrell. He was educated and raised in his place of birth, Skull Run, six miles north of Ravenswood.

Harry's early jobs took him out of Jackson County, to Akron, Ohio, and other places where employment was more plentiful. Ultimately returning to the place he loves most, he has lived in Jackson County continuously since January 1, 1928, and now resides on Bedford Street in Ravenswood. In 1928, Harry successfully completed the federal postal examination that was to begin his career for 33 years.

Almost as old as the 20th Century, Harry sometimes recounts the nation's achievements since his birth, including birth of winged flight the year he was born. Yet, early in his new career, he often delivered mail in rural Sherman by the most unsophisticated means: on foot, on horseback, and even by row boat when the Ohio flooded its tributaries. Harry epitomizes the old postal slogan: "Neither rain, snow, nor hail will stop delivery of the United States mail."

front: Georgia and Dolores Gorrell; back: Dayton, Harry, and Ron Gorrell, 1954

In the late 1920s, Harry also met the gal of his dreams, Georgia Minnie Kelbaugh, a young elementary school teacher who was teaching in Harry's home hollow, Skull Run. Georgia, the third child of George William and Minnie Isadora (Dennis) Kelbaugh, was born at Wiseburg, Jackson County, June 10, 1903. On September 2, 1930, Harry and Georgia exchanged wedding vows at the home of Georgia's sister, Norma, on Washington Street in North Ravenswood.

First born to the new couple was Otmer Ronald who was born in North Ravenswood on July 24, 1931. Soon after, Harry moved his little family to "a little farm" in Sherman. There, Arnold Dayton was born on October 1, 1932. In 1935, on Valentine's Day, Harry and Georgia had their third child: Dolores Vallee.

Moving to Ravenswood in 1936, the Gorrells went into business with Mr. Kelbaugh, Georgia's father. After moving a building to set diagonal to the corner, they opened a grocery store/gasoline station on June 1, 1936, at the corner of Sand and Race Streets in Ravenswood. About six years later, the Gorrells bought Mr. Kelbaugh's interests in the store.

The Gorrells moved to North Ravenswood about 1938. Harry and Georgia sold their first business to Harry's brother and sister-in-law, Holbert and Blanche Gorrell, and built another grocery store/gasoline station on the corner of Washington and Ann Streets in North Ravenswood. The new business opened in March 1947. Since Harry was still delivering mail, now out of the Ravenswood Post Office, most store operations were left to Georgia. After six successful years, they sold this second store to Garland and Norma Jean (Gorrell) Cope on June 1, 1953.

In 1957, Harry and Georgia decided on new careers, real estate. First a salesman then a broker, Harry founded the Gorrell Realty on June 1, 1965. Now under new ownership, that business still overlooks the Little Sandy in Ravenswood.

After retiring from the post office on March 31, 1961, Harry built many fine homes in the Ravenswood area over the next several years, including the one in which he currently lives. In addition, he supervised construction of the North United Methodist Church on the corner of Washington and Brown Streets of Ravenswood. That church, one of the finest structures in the county, was completed in August 1965.

Not satisfied with just being a businessman, Harry accepted appointment to the Jackson County Court in 1961. In 1962, he was elected to a full term in the Court. Harry also has held other civic positions including head of the Ravenswood Chamber of Commerce in 1972-3.

On August 14, 1965, Harry lost his wife. Georgia is buried in the Ravenswood cemetery.

Harry remarried on November 12, 1966, to Phnelma Evelyn (Bennett) Evans.

The first Gorrell family in Jackson County was headed by Moses M. Gorrell, Harry's great-grandfather. Moses was born in Richmond (Jefferson County), Ohio, in 1801. About 1830, he married Margaret Ann Ward, probably in Pennsylvania. Their children were: Sarah Ann (born 1831), Thomas (1835-1893), Jeremiah (born April 1836), John (born 1837), Abraham (July 30, 1839-February 9, 1915), Stephen (1843-February 11, 1919), Rachel (born 1846), and David Daniel (August 20, 1847-July 3, 1924). Sarah Ann was born in Pennsylvania; the rest in Jefferson County, Ohio. Moses and Margaret moved their family to Jackson County about 1849.

David Daniel, Harry's grandfather, married Mary Jane Fisher (born May 8, 1854, in Meigs County, Ohio) on November 1, 1870. Their children included John Wesley (February 17, 1872-August 7, 1958), Mosell (February 8, 1875-1954), David Selby (February 19, 1877-1962), Anna Marie (July 15, 1879-August 17, 1909), Thomas Irwin (January 23, 1881-July 21, 1930), Sarah Belle (July 30, 1884-June 20, 1928), Elmer (August 12, 1885-June 18, 1889), James Albert (March 6, 1887-March 8, 1887), Susan Eva (August 15, 1890-May 5, 1933), Otho Edwin (born June 2, 1893), and Oliver Sherman (September 23, 1897-September 24, 1897). All were born in Jackson County.

Harry's father, John Wesley, married Fannie Jane McKinley (born February 8, 1873, in Jackson County) on May 27, 1894. Their children included William Holbert (October 4, 1896-August 21, 1954), Helen Lucinda (August 27, 1899-April 24, 1988), Harry David, Ethel Jane (January 8, 1905-May 28, 1988), Lelah Gertrude (February 28, 1909-February 15, 1984), Oscar James (born June 29, 1912; now living in Ravenswood), and Denzil Dayton (March 8, 1915-August 13, 1965). All were born in Jackson County.

Harry's and Georgia's children and grandchildren are spread throughout the nation. Ronald married Brigitte Stehr in Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, on May 7, 1961. Ron completed twenty years with the army in 1973, retiring with the rank of major. Ron and Brigitte have four children: Byron Jay living at Fort Polk, Louisiana; Pamela Joan in San Antonio, Texas; Debra Kay in Orlando, Florida; and Aaron Kent with this parents in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Dayton married Donita Newland in Columbus, Indiana, on November 26, 1955. Their children are Suzan Renee living in Florida and Gregory Scott in Corpus Christi, Texas. Dayton completed twenty years with the air force in 1974, retiring as a lieutenant colonel. He currently lives in Austin, Texas, with his second wife, Ruby.

PHNELMA BENNETT (EVANS) GORRELL

I, Phnelma E. "Pam" Bennett Evans Gorrell, daughter of Holly H. and Ella Cline Bennett was born at Silvertown, West Virginia on May 30, 1918. I was born in the same log house that my father and all my three sisters were born in. At the age of 2, my family moved to Ravenswood. When my older sister was in school and like all childhood diseases, she brought whooping cough home to us "younger" sisters. My mother had to hire help to take care of all of us. A favorite tale of my mother's at this time was that I would run to the corner of the room, stand there and cough until I whooped.

I attended Ravenswood schools and graduated from Ravenswood High School in 1936. In July of 1936, I left Ravenswood and entered St. Josephs School of Nursing. Our schooling consisted of working 12 hours per day (7am - 7pm), with only a half day off per week. If our patient load was heavy, we had no time off. After completing this 3 year program, I graduated in 1939 and received my RN after successfully passing my state boards.

My first employment as a nurse was in the private duty area. My first case was a woman who was a stroke victim. My client wanted to spend the winter in California so I accompanied her there. I was young and had never traveled anywhere so the four day train trip was an exciting time yet a hard time for me. I was in charge of my clients meals, medication, laundry as well as her 15 year old daughter.

After private duty nursing, I worked for Dr. Camden Starcher in his hospital in Ripley. He was also the physician for the CCC Camp. Because these men in the CCC Camp were prone for lots of broken bones, I learned how to take and develop x-rays as well as learning laboratory duties.

I left the West Virginia area and went to Detroit, Michigan to work in a large maternity hospital. We averaged 300 deliveries per month. It was in Detroit that I met and married Harold Pearl Evans in July of 1942, who happened to be a fellow Jackson County native. In November, 1942, my husband left for the Seabees which were part of the Navy during World War II. He served his time in the Pacific.

In July of 1943, I gave birth to our daughter Sharon Evans. Our little girl did not see her father until August of 1945. On April 25, 1950 our son Robert H. Evans was born.

Between the years 1952-1956, I worked for the Jackson County Board of Education as the County Health Nurse. At this time we had 24 one room schools and our basic health problem was head lice and the "itch." We also held vaccination clinics for smallpox, whooping cough, measles and diphtheria. It was while I was working at the schools that we also had the first polio vaccines. Other health conditions facing Jackson County were heavy loads of tuberculosis of which many of our patients were sent to sanitariums.

From 1956-1965, I worked as a staff nurse at Kaiser Aluminum in Ravenswood, West Virginia. On April 22, 1965, my husband died of a heart attack. I went back to work in May. Exactly four weeks after my husbands death, a man working at the plant died from a heart attack enroute to Holzer Hospital (which was the closest hospital at the time) and I at this time began to experience nursing "burn out." In July of 1965 I resigned my nursing position.

In November of 1965 I took my examination for my realtor's license and passed. Before this the only thing I knew about a deed to property was that "you kept it in your safety deposit box." I was employed by Harry Gorrell Realty as a salesman. In November 1966 I married Harry David Gorrell and became co-owner and operator of Harry Gorrell Realty. In 1976 we sold the realty company to Virginia Carroll.

Harry and I still live in Ravenswood where we both retired. However, I still can't find enough hours in the day to do everything we need to do in our retirement years. Submitted by Phnelma E. Gorrell

Prominent in Jackson County political and business circles during early years were members of the Greer family. William Greer (born 1798), son of John (1753-1838) and Jane (Jean) Callaghan Greer of Mason County, drowned in Mill Creek at what is now Cottageville in 1837. William's wife was Martha Monroe Greer (1802-1879). They were the parents of seven children: John M. (1823-1900); Mary J. (1825-1847) who married Samuel E. Lewis; Margaret Eleanor (1828-1833); Martha Isabell who married William Brown Gibbs; James A. (1832-1911) who married Sarah A. Waugh; Samuel B. (1834-1884) married first Mary Frances Ayers and second Ellen M. Johnson (1852-1912); William T. (1835-1924) who married Mary Virginia Bennett (1848-1912).

John M. supported his mother, sisters and brothers while growing up by carrying mail from Ripley to Arnoldsburg and Belleville, and would drive stock from Jackson County to Harrison and Lewis counties, making the round trip on foot for $8.00 per month. He was not formally educated, but "his store of knowledge was obtained by observation and in the expensive school of business experience and was an excellence judge of human nature," wrote Hon. Warren Miller in the Jackson Herald after his death. Also, their home was "a hotel for the hungry and a hospital for the sick without money and without price." He served as constable from November 1847 to May 1856, when he was elected Sheriff of the County serving four years, and in 1870-1876, he served in the same capacity again.

John's brother, William T., served as Sheriff 1860-1866, and in 1876, another brother — Samuel B., was elected and served for two years. All were Democrats.

John M. Greer was first married to Marian Wright in 1846, and his second wife was Salena Catherine Redman (1840-1905) who bore him two children: Daniel Webster Greer and Mamie Greer. John M. is buried in the old cemetery at Evans.

Daniel Webster (Web) Greer (1863-1938) was a successful farmer and prominent citizen. He married Julia C. Progler (1865-1932) daughter of Major C. H. and Elizabeth Smith Progler. Two children were born to this union: Henry Progler (1889—1928), and Mamie J. (1895-1968) who married Marshall Edward Witte (1893-1972). Web served four terms on City Council, was a member of the Board of Education, belonged to Knights of Pythias and Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Mrs. Greer belonged to the Protestant Episcopal Church.

WILLIAM THOMAS GREER

William Thomas Greer was born March 4, 1835, at the old Greer homestead in "the Flats," Jackson County, Virginia, (now West Virginia). The old farm later became the Evans Fair Ground. His parent were William and Martha Elizabeth (Monroe) Greer. His grandparents were John and Jane (Callaghan) Greer who migrated to Mason County, Va., (now W. Va.) from Bath County, Va. John Greer was a soldier of the Revolution.

On March 9, 1869, Mr. Greer married Mary Virginia Bennett, whose parents were Capt. George Henry and Andasier Robins (Richardson) Bennett of Snow Hill, Maryland. Mary Virginia Bennett had been visiting her Aunt Rachel M. Bennett Armstrong, the second wife of Hon. Matthias B. Armstrong.

William Thomas Greer

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Greer were Henry Glenmore, William Homer, Wilmer Custis, Gordon Bennett and Andasier Virginia (Anna) all of whom are deceased.

The grandchildren were Joseph William, Mary Hartley (Greer) Sampson, Dr. Creed Collins Greer and Ruth Virginia Greer. All are deceased except Ruth Virginia Greer who resides in Parkersburg, W. Va.

William Thomas and Mary Virginia Greer lived in a 13 room home where the present Post Office is located in Ripley.

In 1859, at the age of 24, Mr. Greer was sheriff of Jackson County. Beginning 1865 he served six years as Commissioner of the Courts. In 1888 he served as Commissioner of the United States Courts for four years.

Jackson County Court House

Mr. Greer was the prime factor in the building of the Ripley & Mill Creek Valley Railroad, and was not only one of the largest stockholders but also the first president and general manager of the company. GRIMES

Ancestors of Stirling, John and Carl Grimes were living in an area that became Jackson County in the early 1800s. Others moved here as the 19th century came to a close. Our grandfather, John Grimes, and his wife, Agnes S. Black, moved from Flemington, W.V. to Frozen Camp in 1885 and started a general store in that community. Two children, Elizabeth Black and Arthur Stirling were born there. In 1894, the family moved to Ravenswood. The family grew in numbers and John continued in the grocery business. Mary S., Lesley H. and Eleanor Bissell were born in 1891, 1899 and 1903, respectively. In 1901, John, with aid from his sister-in-law, Elizabeth Black, started the Star Printing Co. Our father, Arthur S. Grimes, continued this job printing concern through the mid 1950s. John's parents were James Harvey and Henrietta (Thurman) Grimes. James Harvey's father, James Allen, was a son of Felix Grimes of Pocahontas County, W.V. Felix came to this country from Scotland about 1770.

Elizabeth Black's parents, John S. And Rhoda

(Bissell) Black, moved to Ravenswood from Albany, Ohio in 1895. John S. Black came to Ohio from Greenock, Scotland. He was a carriage maker by trade. He and three others published the Albany Echo for several years while he lived in Albany. Rhoda Bissell's father, Alden S. and grandfather, Warren Bissell, moved to Ohio in 1801 from Litchfield, Connecticut. The Bissell line traces to England through Benjamin, Isaac, and Thomas to John Bissell, the pioneer founder.

Our father, Arthur S. Grimes, married Edith Ernestine Sayre in 1917. Edith was a daughter of Francis Asbury and Mary Virginia (Null) Sayre. They were married 22 November, 1876. In the 1880 Census of Ravenswood, West Virginia, he listed himself as a grocer. Later he became a druggist and operated a drug store in Ravenswood until his death in 1931. Children of this marriage were Lulu, Herschel A., Lora and Edith born in 1880, 1884, 1888, and 1894 respectively. Mary Virginia was born in Cairo, WV. in 1856. Her parents were Jacob and Elizabeth Null.

On 22 March 1836, he married Tabitha H. Flesher of Ripley. Tabitha was born 3 June 1818. Mr. and Mrs. Sayre were farmers in Pleasant View, WV. They were residents of Jackson County until their deaths. Other children of this marriage were Elizabeth, Adaliza, Almenia and Lydia. WILLIAM "RED SHOES" GUILER

The following story is related and documented by at least three separate branches of the Guiler family recording William Guiler's misfortune in becoming separated from his family at the time of leaving Ireland to come to America and their subsequent reunion in this country.

The War of 1812 was raging on the high seas and impressment of Irishmen to serve in the British Royal Navy was common. William Guiler and his wife, Mary, were caught up in this conflict, as well as the religious conflict between the Catholics and Protestants in Ireland. In the spring of 1812, William and Mary decided to pack their belongings, take their three year old daughter and sail for America. After spending a night in a barn, due to the conflict of the religious factions, they traveled to Dublin where they spent a night with relatives before leaving for America. The relatives (or friends) in Dublin had given William and Mary's daughter a pair of red shoes as a gift for her to keep and take to America.

After arriving at the dock, purchasing their passage to America and transferring their belongings to the ship sailing to New York, they discovered they had left the little pair of red shoes on the window sill back at the home where they had spent the night. The father checked with the ship's staff to see if he would have time to return and get the red shoes. He was assured he had time to retrieve the shoes, which he did. However, upon returning to the dock a few hours later, he found the ship had already pulled anchor and was setting sail for America. He obtained a row boat in an effort to catch the ship, since his wife, daughter and all his possessions were on board, but it was in vain.

Shortly thereafter, he was impressed by the British and placed on a man-of-war vessel serving the British Navy in the War of 1812. He had no way of contacting his wife and daughter. After sailing the high seas during the summer and fall, the vessel put in at Newfoundland to take on coal and supplies during the winter of 1812. Bill Guiler, along with five or six others lowered themselves down the side of the ship and made their escape during the night while anchored in the bay. They were pursued by the British when the escape was discovered and tracked for several miles through the bitter cold and snow of the Newfoundland landscape. During the escape, the men split up into pairs and some froze to death. Although nearly exhausted, Bill carried his nearly frozen partner through a blizzard during the night, but finally had to put him down. Finally, after many miles on foot through snow and bitter wind, Bill saw a wee light at a farm house in the distance. After a final effort and nearly frozen from exposure, he reached the farmhouse and collapsed on the front porch, complete exhausted. The people inside heard a thud on the porch and discovered a man half dead from exposure. They took him in and nursed him back to health. The third day he was able to tell them his story. They agreed to let him stay until he could travel south, toward New York, in the spring when the weather opened up. He, in return, worked on the farm and agreed to teach their daughter to play the violin for his keep.

Upon the arrival of spring, Bill "Red Shoes" Guiler bid his Newfoundland friends farewell and made his way to New York and try to locate his wife and family. Meanwhile, Mary had been looking for her husband every day at the port-of-entry at New York. She had taken a job in a millinery shop and continued to search for her husband, never receiving any word as to his whereabouts. William and Mary had been looking for each other for several months now and were discouraged with their loss and passage of time. During the fall of 1813 while walking along among the fallen leaves on the sidewalks of New York in the Irish sector, William Guiler passed by a lady whom he did not notice until after they had passed each other. What a blessing and a reunion it was to find each other after nearly a year and a half of separation.

William Guiler Jr. was born in New York on July 4, 1816. Shortly after the birth of little William, the family moved from New York to a little Irish farm community called Bakerstown, 15 miles northeast of Pittsburgh, Penn. William "Red Shoes" Guiler helped operate and administer the leasing of farm land owned by a kindred Irishman in the Bakerstown area and also worked in a steel foundry in Pittsburgh. In 1832 William Guiler bought 80 acres of land in Noble County, Ohio near Whigville from the U.S. Government for $1.25 an acre. He moved his family there after building a cabin which stood until the mid 1930s.

William Guiler Jr.

William Guiler Jr. married Sarah Florence Schaffer and their daughter Jemima married John A. Houston. John and Jemima Houston moved from Noble County, Ohio to Jackson County, WV in 1872. They lived on a farm at Beaty's Run. (See Houston-Guiler history) Submitted by William E. Johnson and William C. Johnson

He farmed, was a cattle buyer-seller, and carpenter. He was born in Woodsfield, Ohio, in Monroe Co. Grandmother Hamilton was born near Caldwell, Ohio in Noble Co.

Paternal great grandfather: Hugh Hamilton (1819-1910), born in Monroe Co. Ohio. Married Elizabeth Wilkinson (no DOB). Children: Ben (1844-1864), and John (1846-1915). We know Ben was fatally wounded near Winchester, Va. during the Civil War, and was buried near there. We have no further history on John.

Second marriage of Great-grandfather Hugh Hamilton: Married Mary Johnson (1821-1893), their children were: Anna (1854-1938), married Asbey McCoy; Addison Hamilton (1855-1938), married Hannah E. Morrison May 13, 1877.

Other children were: James, Martha and Lina (no DOB's). We believe Martha married James Shafer, and Lina married John Lindamood. Lina and John had a son named Elzie and a daughter named Mattie. Mattie married a Pound, and had a daughter named Goldie. No info about James or Elzie's descendants.

We believe that Grandmother and Grandfather Hamilton met while each was visiting relatives somewhere around Gallipolis. Grandfather was a very fun loving person, always joking with his grandchildren. He visited us in Reynoldsburg, Ohio, driving his old Model A (or T) Ford — at that time I wasn't too interested in cars! Our Grandmother had been ill during much of our childhood; she had diabetes plus a stroke, so we children saw her less frequently. But we did make the "long" trip from near Columbus, Ohio to Jackson County at least once a year, or more.

We would like to thank our cousin, Effie Rowan, for her help in getting some of the dates and places mentioned in this report.

My hobby is quilting and gardening, and I'm retired from the J. C. Penny, Co. in Columbus, Ohio. Submitted by Helen L. (Hamilton) Myers.

RAYMOND AND PEGGY HANDLEY

I was born in Cabell County on May 15, 1909, but lived and worked for some time in Mason and Jackson County. I'm a former member and trustee of Main Street Baptist Church. My wife, Peggy, and I now attend Millwood Methodist Church in Millwood, (Jackson County), West Virginia, where Peggy is a trustee.

My children are a part of the County and play an important role in the life and times of Point Pleasant. Their contributions for the good of the town are noteworthy. My family in Mason County consists of my sons, Ernest and Roger, four grandsons, Rick, Todd, Roger, Jr., and Mark, and nine great grandchildren, Stephanie, Carrie, Kelli, Bethany, Dylan, Kimberly, Mary Beth, Stephen and Derrick, all of whom live in Point Pleasant. My daughter Ruth lives in Jackson County.

When the Kaiser Aluminum Plant was built at Ravenswood in Jackson County, I went there to work. I am a steamfitter and a member for 44 years in the Plumbers and Steamfitters Local #565 of Parkersburg. In 1942, I worked during World War II at the TNT Plant in Point Pleasant.

On September 29, 1962, I made a telephone call that was to change my life then and until now, nearly 26 years later. On that date, I met Avis "Peggy" Adams, a widow and a secretary at Kaiser Aluminum. We were married on June 2, 1963, in a rather unique wedding ceremony. Traditional in all the usual ways of a church wedding at the First Methodist Church in Ravenswood, but unique in that it was a double wedding, a mother and son wedding. Six days before the wedding, Peggy's son, Thomas Adams, and his fiancée, Sharon Knox, came to us and asked if they could share our wedding. Thus, one of the ushers became the second bridegroom and, after securing a replacement usher, the wedding took place on that lovely Sunday afternoon, in the No. Ravenswood Methodist Church.

"Red" and "Peg" Handley

Peggy and I share many of the same interests. We enjoy trout fishing along a clear stream in the mountains of West Virginia. We garden together and our "cellar" shelves attest to the fact that we do a good job as we see rows of shiny jars of fruits and vegetables, all garnered from the land that surrounds our home in Jackson County. Our home, "Handley's Chateau," is a two-story country house on a hill overlooking the Ohio River. As a widow, Peggy and her children at home, Thomas and Barbara, had this house built in 1959. We enjoy antique auctions and traveling the back country roads to find "the old, the odd, and the unusual" to place in our home. Brass and wooden beds, some with "feather ticks," and bolsters make this six bedroom house appear to have been lived in in another era, perhaps in the time of our forefathers.

We both share an interest and pleasure in doing lodge work. I am a member of Minturn Lodge #19 of Point Pleasant and a member of Nemesis Temple A.A.O.N.M.S. of Parkersburg and Order of the Eastern Star #75 of Point Pleasant. Peggy is a member of Ladies Oriental Shrine of North America in Parkersburg and Order of the Eastern Star #16 of Cottageville.

We have traveled extensively, having been in 49 of the 50 states. Our first wedding anniversary, June 2, 1964, was spent at York Beach, Maine, where we visited all the New England states following our tour of the World's Fair held in New York that year. We have stood in awe in the shade of the giant redwoods in California, saw the spectacular Old Faithful and viewed with a heavy heart the destruction of Mount Saint Helens following the explosion on May 18, 1980. The grandeur of the Grand Canyon cannot be described with mere words and that also applies to the beautiful Painted Desert and the Petrified Forest. We have walked in the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and probably stepped "out" of the United States when we stepped into the water off the coast of Key West, Florida. During a trip in 1966, we found Juarez, Mexico, was beautiful countryside. The snow-capped mountains in Alaska caught our eye as we drove through the summer heat going into Fairbanks. We were intrigued with a busy restaurant and gift shops far, far into the bowels of the earth as we visited Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico. In 1983, we found ourselves in Big Sky Country in Montana. We have also experienced the beauty and majesty of Niagara Falls as we traveled to maple leaf country in beautiful Toronto, Canada. All this and much, much more as we look back over the past 23 years. Faraway places have drawn us but it is always so good to get back home to West Virginia. My roots are here and I claim it as "my land." Peggy has actual family history in Mason County since 1849, when her great grandfather, Jacob Plants, came from Washington County, PA, and purchased a 500-acre tract of land in Cooper District, Mason County.

Our married life has been made pleasant by our participation in western style square dancing. We took lessons and learned this pleasant pastime together. We have attended square dances in 16 different states as we have traveled these United States. In 1966, we attended a national square dance convention in Indianapolis, Indiana, where there were 25,000 dancers in attendance. Our square dance club, the Kera Dudes and Dolls, were a part of Kaiser Aluminum's recreational program and as we were both employed there, we were able to participate.

Raymond and Peggy Handley

As evidenced in the foregoing, our 26 years of married life have been very active and fulfilling. We're older now and well into the time allotted to us in the Bible, but our days are good and very pleasant as we sit and remember. Our travels are not so far a distance now through we do go to the south or southwest each fall as we look for warm sunny days, but always, when spring comes and with it the promise of lush green forests on wooded mountainsides, we find ourselves looking homeward and returning to West Virginia, the land where we have our roots deeply entrenched in the ways of a free mountain people and we always remember the heritage left to us by those who've gone ahead and left "their footprints in time." HARPOLD-PFOST

According to research, the Harpole-Harpold family moved into Pendleton County, Virginia (now West Virginia) in 1763 from Germany. These were the original ancestors of John Oley Harpold, father of George Webster Harpold.

George Webster Harpold, son of John Oley and Susie Ratheleter Fisher Harpold and Ora Edna Pfof, daughter of Jacob and Avah Staats Pfof, were married September 27, 1908 at Ripley, West Virginia and "set up housekeeping" at Fairplain, West Virginia. After the birth of Ottie Warren in 1909, Susie Hazel in 1911, and Solomon Wayne (named after grandfather Solomon Wallace Harpold) in 1913, they purchased a farm and moved to Given, West Virginia. After moving to Given, Velma Mae (Seymour) was born in 1917, Avah Bernice (Fisher) named after grandmother, Avah Pfof, in 1919, Mary Eunice (Fisher) in 1921, Lorena Phyllis in 1924, and Veldra Wendell in 1927. Veldra died in 1948 at age 20 of football related surgery; Warren in 1978 — result of an auto accident; and Hazel in 1985 of natural causes.

Edna spent her life as a wife, mother and homemaker. She was a beautiful seamstress and made many lovely garments for the family. Her death occurred December 27, 1941 — 20 days after Pearl Harbor. She never knew two of her sons were World War II participants.

When the oldest children, Warren and Hazel, reached high school age, George and Edna built a house on Route 21 at Fairplain "on the hard road" so the children could continue their education. The land on which the house was built was purchased from John Oley Harpold.

George was a farmer and school teacher and continued to do so after moving back to Fairplain. He operated a successful dairy there for many years. In addition to other advanced education, including Lee Normal School, he also attended Marshall College and obtained a teaching certificate there. He believed in "higher education" and encouraged his students to go as far as finances and time would possibly permit. He taught in rural Jackson County schools for 35 years. Some of the schools in which he taught were Given, Valley Bell, Fairplain Supply, Fairplain, Sayre and Hickory Grove. George died in 1952.

Children of George and Edna Harpold were: Ottie Warren married Dolores Charlene Bastian. Their children are Donna Warren, Lois Charlene and Harold Alan. Susie Hazel married Donald Casto. Their children are Dolores Ann (Chancey), Gene and Dan; Solomon Wayne married Madeline Carney. Their child is Norma Anne (Ciccarello); Velma Mae married George Seymour. Their children are Robert George and Chery Lynn (Pennington); Avah Bernice married W. Cleek Fisher. Their children are William Cleek, Jr. and Mary Jo

(Basham); Mary Eunice married Edwin O. Fisher. Their children are Susan, John Edwin and Mary Elizabeth; Lorena Phyllis; and Veldra Wendell. Submitted by Bernice H. Fisher

JOHN HARPOLD

My Great Grandfather, John Harpold, settled in Jackson County (then known as Mason County) in 1810. He purchased 100 acres of land from his brother-in-law, William Bonnett, Sr., on Mill Creek near the iron bridge where Rt. 21 crossed the creek. It was about this time that the minister, Harry Ripley, the man for whom Ripley was named, drowned in Mill Creek.

John Harpold paid the first taxes on his property in 1842. It was the great sum of fifty cents. He was married to Rachel Sayre, daughter of David and Sara (Little) Sayre. They had ten children: David, Sandusky, John A., Solomon, Hannah, Henrietta, Adam, Absolom and Margaret.

John A. Harpold, my Grandfather, was in the Civil War. He was Cpl. 18; Co. F 9IV. Enrolled at Ripley on December 18, 1861, was wounded at Cedar Creek, Virginia on October 19, 1864, mustered out at Richmond, Va. July 1, 1866. He was married to Clarissa Johns, daughter of D. William and Lucinda Johns. Their children were: David W., Mary Virginia, Isaac N., Sandusky, Aley C., Homer, Cornelia, Martha and Ruby.

My father was Isaac N. Harpold. He was born November 6, 1872 on Brush Run near Gay, WV. He married Sara A. Cox on November 26, 1898. They had three children: Mattie S., John O., and Rudy Ray. Sarah died in 1906 and he then married Mahala Casto. They had seven children: Folie David, Harland Darrell, Lafayette Leon, Howard Blanc, Fred Weston, Conza Clarissa and Edwin Harold. They are all deceased now except Edwin and myself. We still own our old home place which was a part of our Grandfather's land located on Brush Run.

I married Golden Raines, son of A. L. and Bertha Raines, on September 9, 1945; we have one daughter, Brenda Jean. She is married to James B. Heilmann, Jr.

My husband is a retired construction worker and I am retired from WVU Extension Service where I worked as secretary for 42 years. Submitted by Conza Harpold Raines
